The Early Beginnings of a Great University Reflect Its Future

In 1855 the State of Michigan bought a farm and started a college on its back forty. The college thrived and the farm grew into a great university for advanced study in agriculture, science and the arts.

When the first students—61 of them—arrived for the dedication ceremonies in the spring of 1857, the college was only a crude clearing in the wilderness of nature and the minds of men. Three buildings, a few acres of virgin soil and six dedicated men, this was Michigan Agricultural College.

In the next few decades, the idea of the land grant college crystallized. The campus expanded as did the curriculum and enrollment. The agricultural college was evolving into a significant aspect of the American educational scene.

The Turn of the Century:
A Century of Progress
A Century of Growth

By the turn of the century Michigan Agricultural College had achieved fame not merely as the symbol of a great idea and the daring of new thinkers, but for having shown the way in a concept of education for service to all people. It had taken education to the people in its Farmers' Institutes, then brought the people to its campus for its short courses. It had kept pace with the time of great industrial change. It had adapted to a blossoming America and had shown the need for and benefit of education for all of its people.

In 1923 students, faculty and administration joined in opening the ground for the foundation of the new Union building.

The art of demonstration has played a part in MSU's history too.

A World Leader in Education

In 1928 enrollment had risen to 3,800 and campus had spread across the Red Cedar, but greater days were yet to come as State evolved into one of the world's great universities under the influence of two events of world importance—the Great Depression and its public works programs, and the second world war with its tremendous utilization of Land Grant college resources and attendant upsurge in enrollment.

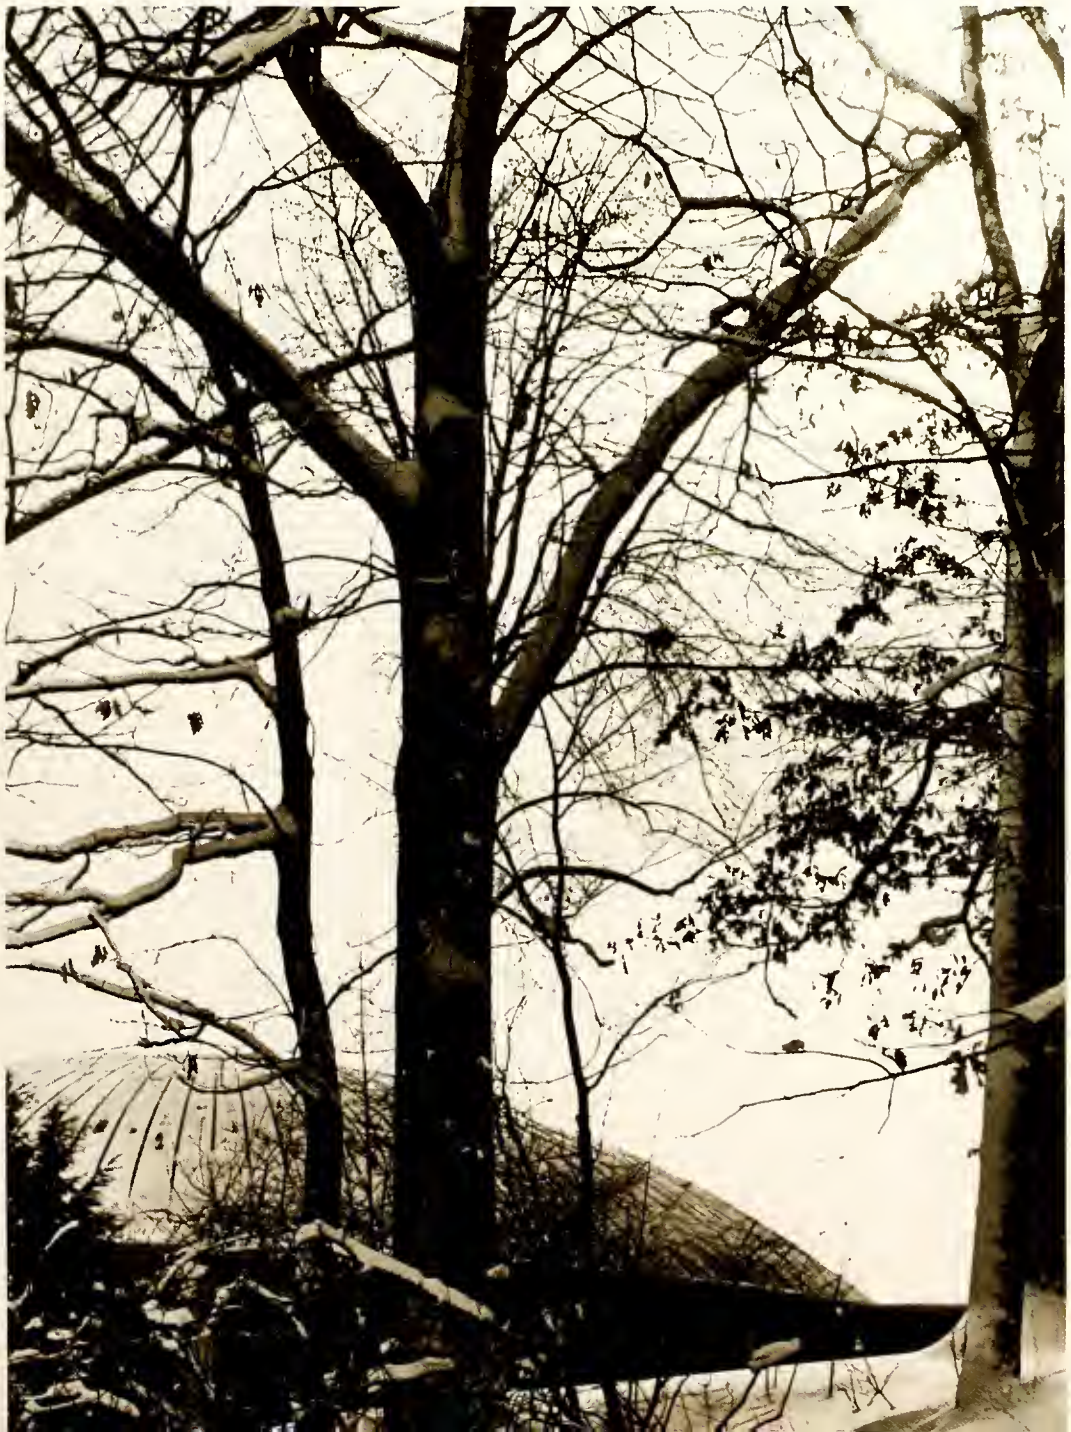
A Dynamic Giant
This Is Michigan State University

In the past decade State has become one of the foremost educational institutions in the country. Its 40,000 students have unlimited opportunities in gaining knowledge not only from books and classrooms, but from an atmosphere that can be shaped to fit the needs of each individual. Playing an essential part in the formation of this atmosphere is the dynamic character of the University itself. Constantly growing, continuously expanding its horizons in education, never allowing the art of teaching to grow stale, stimulating, moulding, inspiring each to attain his personal goals, inspiring the nation as well, this is Michigan State University.

MSU's campus, among the most beautiful in the world, is enhanced by tasteful landscaping and striking architecture.



Plant Science, a new addition to South Campus.

The night is cold and damp,
Grand River surges on.

A day each spring, artists from the area converge on the sidewalks selling their talents and giving Grand River the atmosphere of an art colony.

Nearly as old as the university itself, Grand River is like a giant aorta, pulsing to the rhythm of the times. Crowded, dismal, deserted, always reflecting the attitude of her people, she connects MSU and East Lansing with the boundaries of the earth. Both physically and intangibly she is an essential link in the lives of all students at Michigan State.

The Many Moods of

Rushing to class, in and out of shops, the people who walk the Avenue's aisles are the true heart of her character.

Not Masses, but Persons.
Not People, but Individuals.

They move in groups which are not crowds, merely the clumping of dissimiliar types.
We call them names—
hippie, frat rat, dorm worm, and recognize each other as separate persons separate persons, each to his own, each to himself.

Contradiction seems a way of life,
a search, a fight for identity.
Our reaction is not against numbers but against standardization, against bureaucracy,
against stuffed shirts on stiff necks,
against, against, against,

. . . individuals.

The individual creates his personal framework of emotions and thoughts, a separate framework for each separate student. There are elements in common, but the combinations are infinite and personal.

Eventually, an order emerges out of chaos, an order springing out of necessity.
Whatever the routine encompasses.
It includes certain basics—
a time for study, a time for rest, a time for classes, a time for self.
. . . a time.

The day has begun before the dawn as each person prepares and makes ready for the demands of the routine. Time spent last night or yesterday or last week becomes valuable eventually.

The day ends with a sigh of relief that the pressure has lifted if only for an evening. At last, we have a chance to relax and talk, play cards, sleep, eat, or even relax.

NO

A situation arises, a decision is made which doesn't fit our tastes.
Each person reacts and wants to protest. Someone, it doesn't matter who,
crystallizes emotion into action.

There exists for us all a solitary vision, an image etched on our imagination, which we must examine to restore perspective to our life.

UNIVERSITY

We can be quiet, as with the companionship of two people or our recreation can be noisy and all-embracing, the excitement and confusion of a party, the discipline havoc of a mixer or the vicarious excitement of spectator sports.

The week ends and the end begins.
A person wants relief—from profs, texts and tension. A convenient answer presents itself.
To sit or stand and drink and talk and laugh is enough to dim the power of routine and make us each ourselves again.

We register, we study, we argue and eventually we learn.
Somehow, all the accumulated

Each person has learned and,
in the process,
aided and affected others like himself.

ACADEMICS AND SERVICES

University College: Introduction to Education.

A transparent globe is only one of the tools available to freshmen as they learn the scientific theories which explain our world.

University College is people learning how to learn. It is the study of man—his accomplishments, his progress, his defeats. It was born out of the necessity to provide a minimal liberal arts education to offset an increasing emphasis on specialization. As a general background it provides the student with common standards and common purposes. It prepares him for his role as an individual and equips him for life as a participant in society.

Its secondary purpose is the development of the individual leading toward a happier and more satisfying life. The nature of today's society demands specific training for specific tasks. But before one can hope to achieve this education, he must first appreciate and understand the basic framework of contemporary society. Through its four departments, the University College provides this basic education with a mixture of sociology, art, literature, science, and the tools of English composition and analysis.

There is only one way to learn the material and that is to study; in unused leeture rooms, in class, in . . .

In the beginning, we are all the same—numbers on a card in a collection of other eards waiting to bc retrieved and registered.

Let's see . . . it went this fast, this far . . .

The prof has work to do too, if she is to be able to present her class with a new approach to a constantly changing body of knowledge.

He might be there to learn, but that time before early-morning classes is reserved for more personal concerns.

The curriculum of the University College is constantly revised to meet new advances in knowledge and the challenges of new problems. These revisions are directed towards enabling the student to better understand himself and his environment. Through the University College, he is taught how to express his thoughts. The philosophies and attitudes which are a part of the American heritage have determined our contemporary sociological framework. The student learns the importance of these ideas and how they have shaped our modern world.

Sciences and the humanities deal with the history and philosophy of the entire field, as well as with the methods of each discipline. The social sciences examine contemporary institutions, question their purposes, and demonstrate how their organization can best serve society today and in the future. All these departments strive not to lose the student amid a mass of statistics, but to explain to him how he can effect the institutions surrounding him. It emphasizes the continual interaction between science and the culture of which it is a part.

"They (the students) need help in exploring the potentialities in themselves . . . and the transient, uncertain present."—University College Description.

Occasionally, the explanation that doesn't quite filter through in a big lecture session, comes clear in conversation with the prof.

The opinions of the faculty are not known for change, but when that change occurs it is often the product of informal dialogue and interaction in the relative comfort of a faculty lounge.

To learn, concentrate.
To concentrate . . .

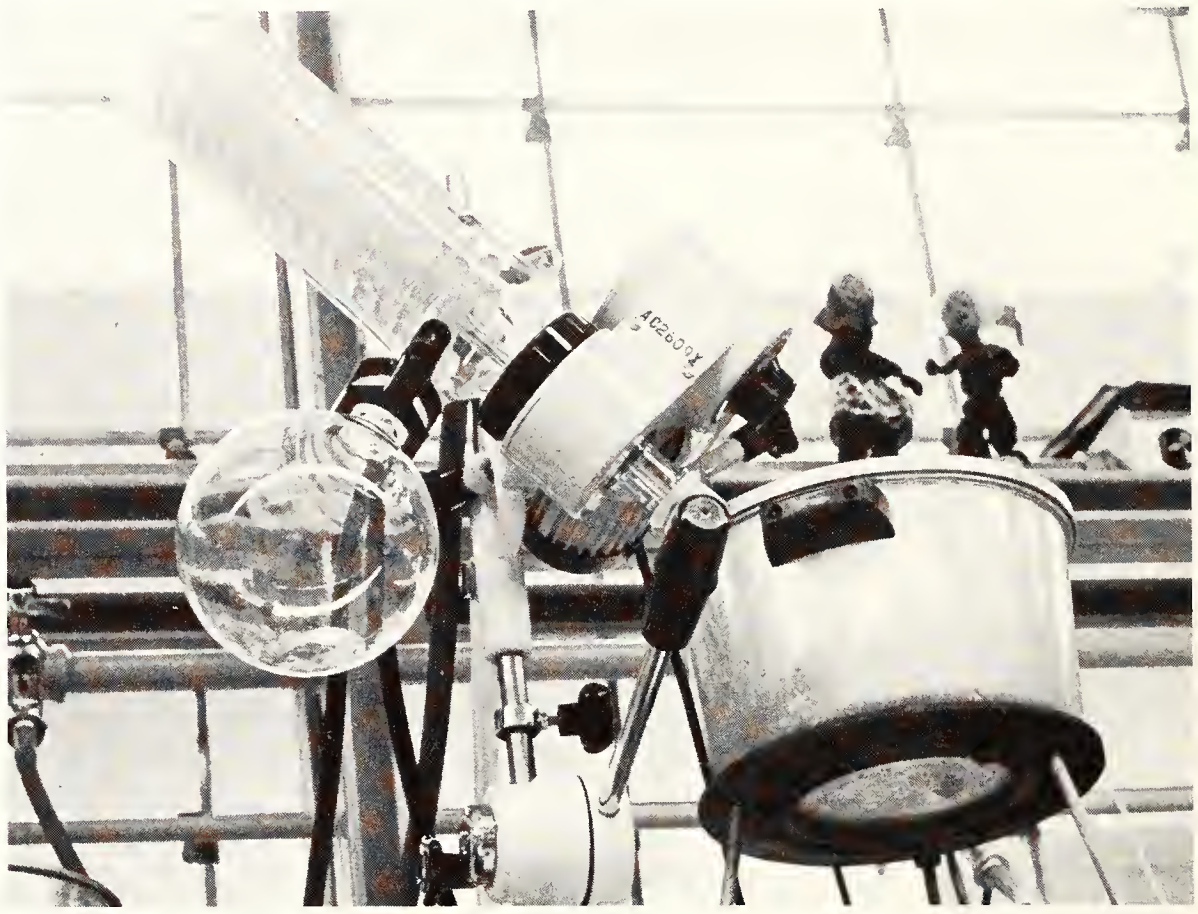
The key to the entire educational experience remains the same, whether the subject is NS 193 or geology—an alert questioning student, responding to an interested, dedicated teacher.

A seldom publicized, but vital department of the University College is the Office of Evaluation Services. The success of each student is the objective of this office and is accomplished through a comprehensive program of tests and questionaires. Waiver exams offer an independent study alternative which enables the student to be graduated with something other than the normal classroom experience. Waivers are miniature finals and a condensation of the course material. The students' reactions to finals are recorded through questionaires. Their responses indicated that the exams were fair, even if they were hard. Because of the many different instructors, departmental finals are a common yardstick giving each student a chance to apply the principles and theories he has learned.

This unique curriculum is designed to help the individual understand the nature and unity of knowledge which he must someday utilize if he is to become a socially responsible person. Although the student sometimes regards the basics as a waste of time, they give him a valuable framework on which to base his perspective of society. It also equips him with the broad and sensitive outlook which will be required for situations still unforeseen. The measure of his success is not shown on the scores of the departmental finals, nor on any scale by which we choose to measure it. The final criterion is the student's knowledge that: "I remember that. I heard about it in . . ." He might not remember where, but he did learn.

Teamwork is usually necessary in most undergraduate chemistry courses.

As the equipment grows more elaborate, the student's knowledge must also become more complex.



(Below) No matter how good his equipment, the results are no better than the accuracy of the student who records the initial readings.

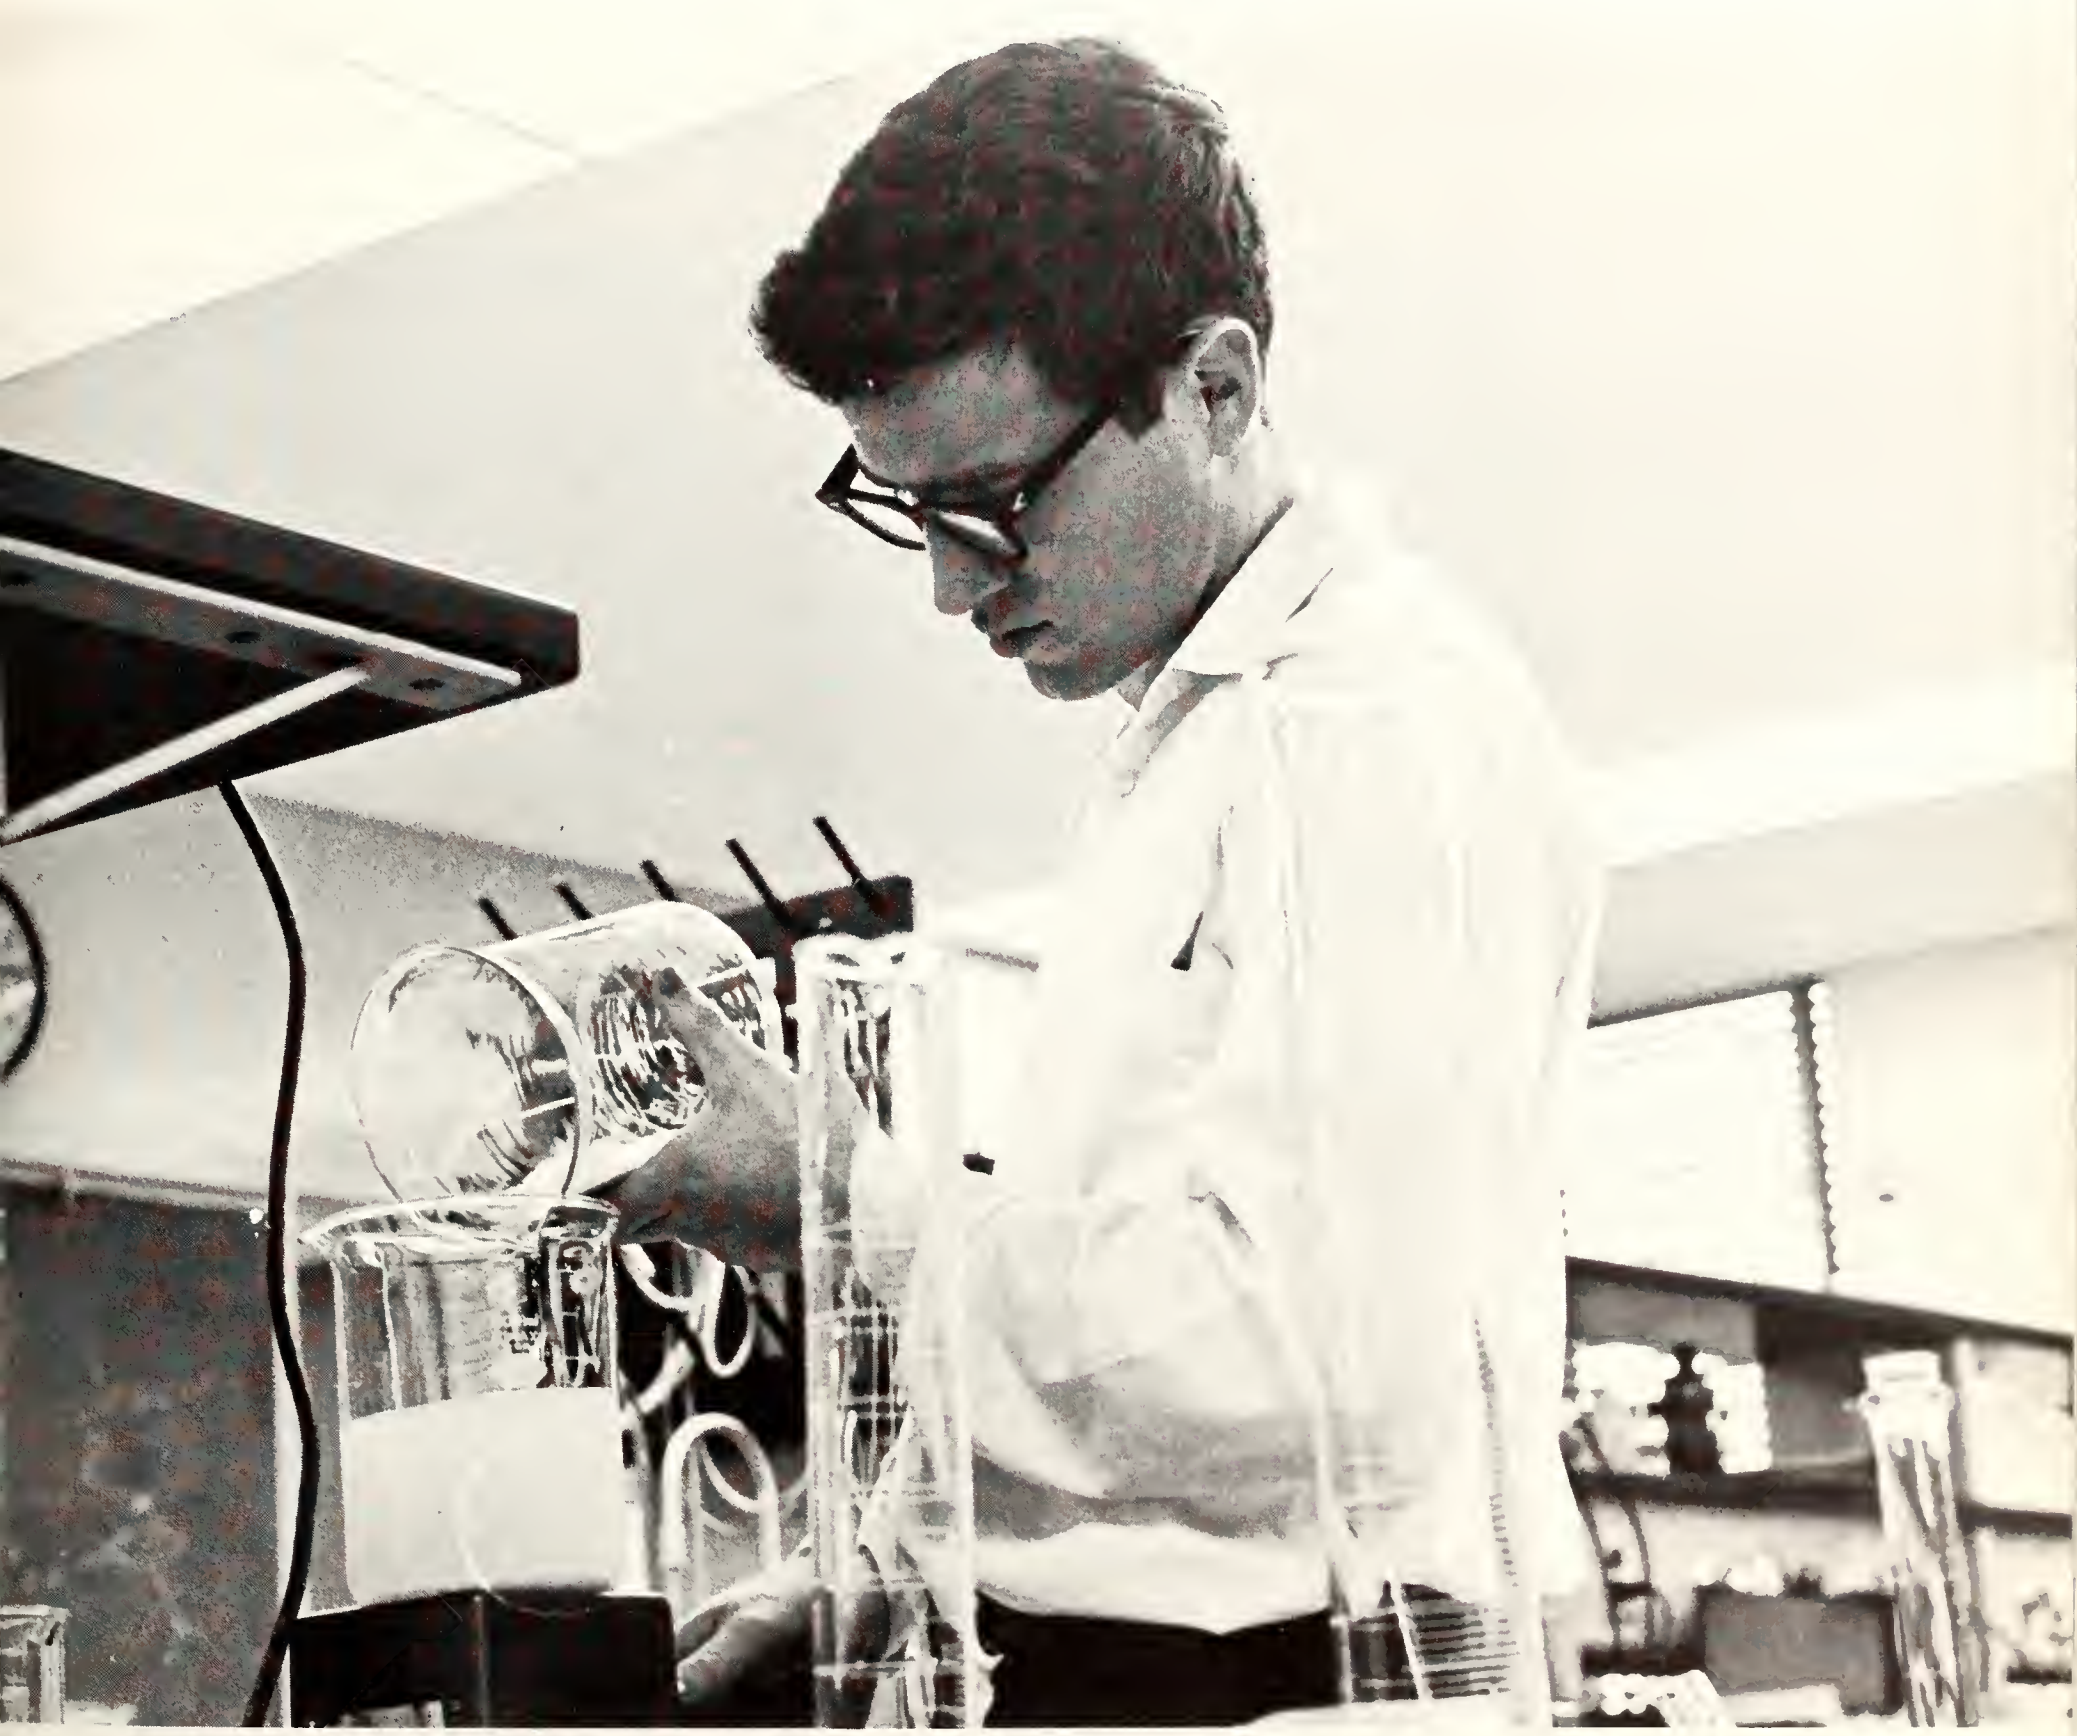
Plant science might not sound like a lab-oriented discipline, but the students in it soon learn better.

Natural Sciences: the Study of the Simple and the Complex.

Observation and experiment are the methods which students in the Natural Sciences use to discover the principles on which our universe operates. These lead to a knowledge of the methods which are the basis of the structure of the natural universe. Although this education is slightly specialized, it also gives the student essential knowledge in understanding social and political discoveries of comtemporary society.

Chemistry is one area where an intense curiosity must motivate the student. Because chemistry is notorious for having one of the most difficult curriculums, the students must possess not only curiosity, but perserverance. The time involved in studies makes it difficult to maintain interest in the subject. The department trys to help motivate this interest but they are more interested in the student who possesses a strong personal drive. The chemistry department also offers extended research programs for any persons advanced in this field. The program works on a graduate level and offers extensive experiments in many areas.

Organic chemistry lab often seems to require more of a cook than a chemist.



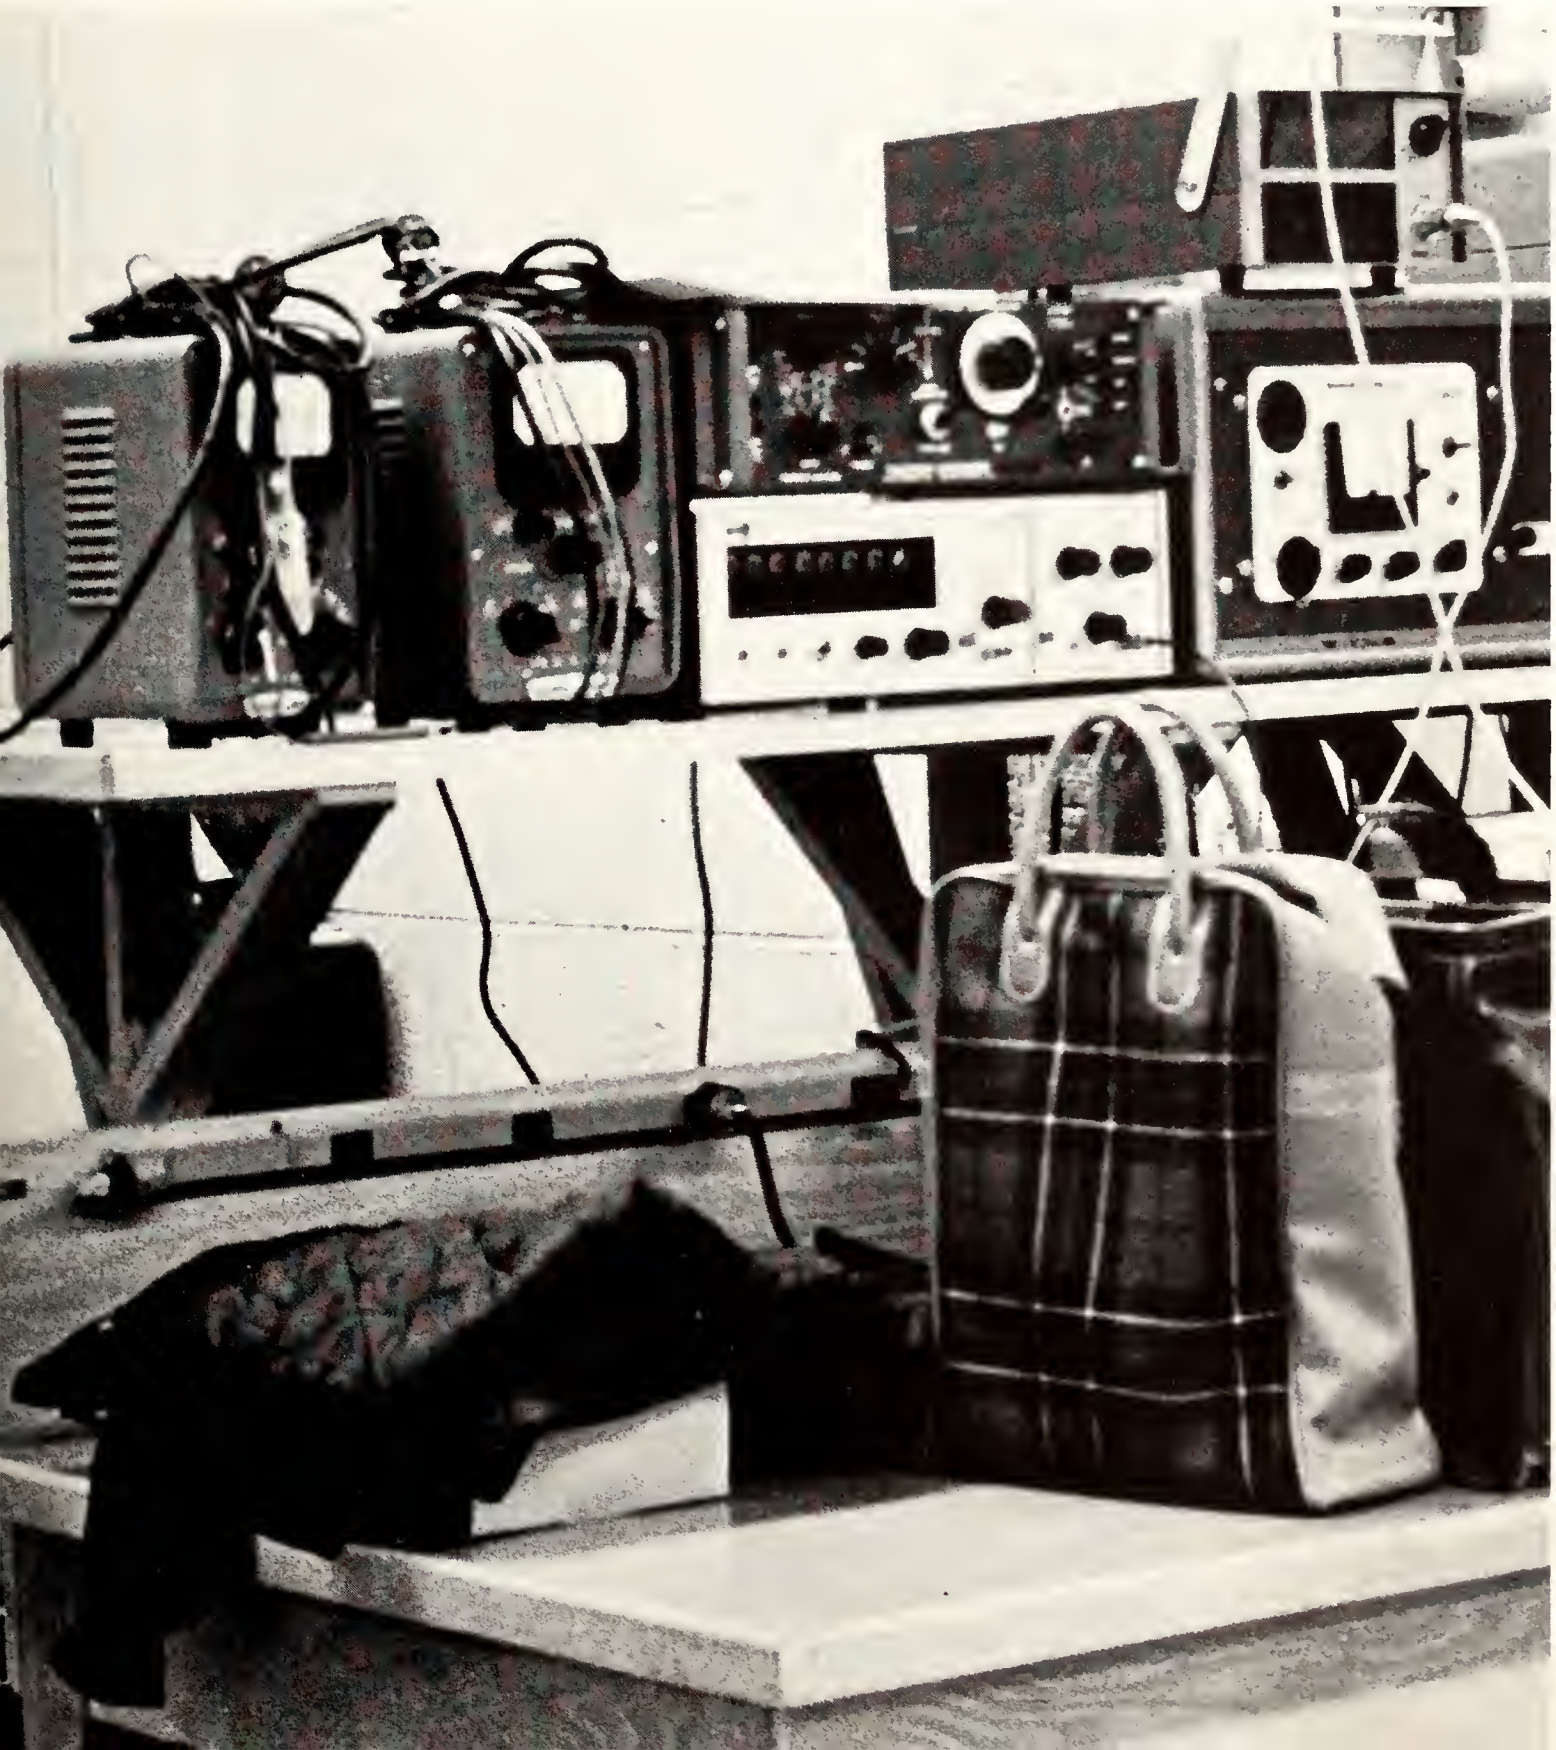
There are too many involved calculations in modern-day science for one man to handle. The computer can do these, but it can't write the programs that set up the calculations in the first place.

Physics is a simple subject, taught with simple objects: a yardstick, weights, masking tape, etc. Only the applications are hard.

All scientists need a language in which to express themselves as well as a discipline which acts as a grammar to channel many of their findings. Mathematics is that language and physics acts as it grammar. Like any language, the study of mathematics means one thing to a beginner and another to someone proficient in its use. For the novice, the language of numerals, abstract quantities, and symbols can be frustrating and nearly impossible to master. To a person trained in its every possibility, mathematics is merely the key which helps him to express himself in other disciplines. The intricacies of physics are often translatable into other sciences, among them chemistry, bio-chemistry, and even the far-removed subject of packaging. In all of these, the language is mathematics and the rules for its application are physics.

It all begins with the first rules of elementary algebra, learned only one way—practice.

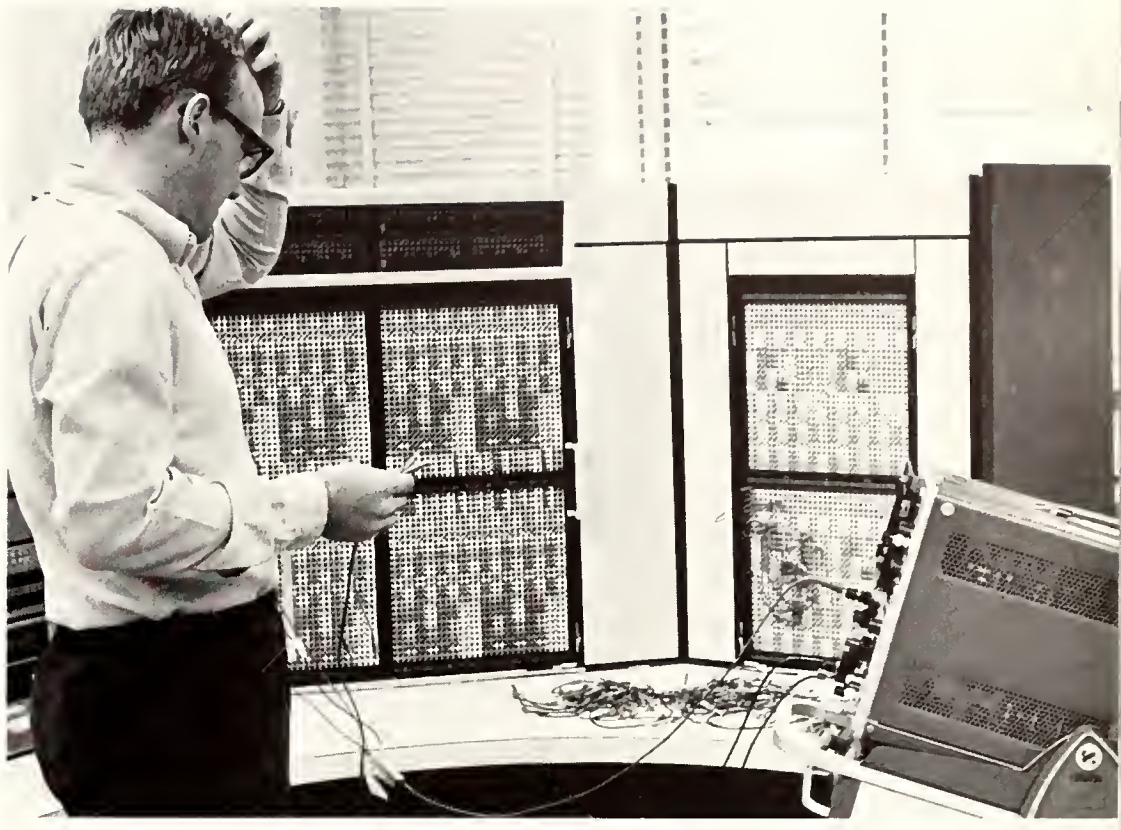
There is always a computer card-puneh somewhere in the vicinity of a science student.



The engineers on campus are often called a tight clique. They should be. Most of their courses are in the same building, they have their own honorary, and somebody has to help with those lab reports.

Surveying is only one of the subjects taught as a branch of the engineering curriculum.

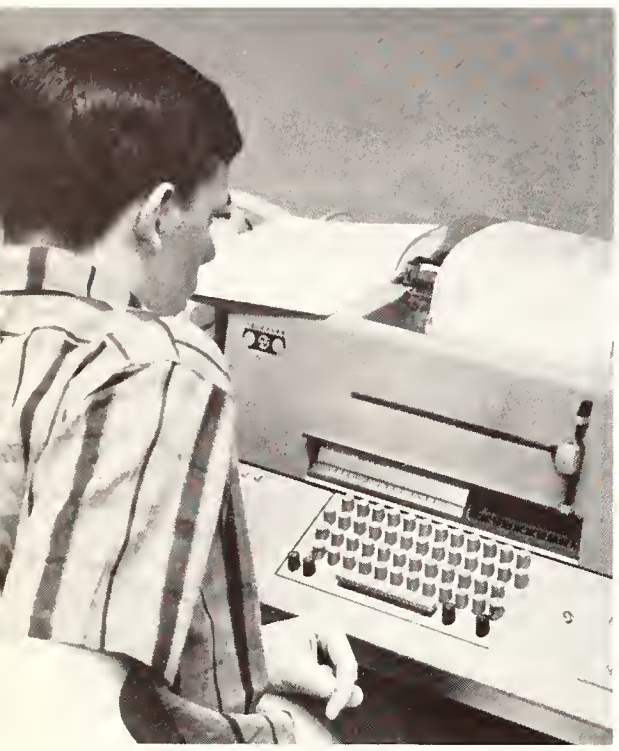
Engineering is another area which requires a broad knowledge in sciences. The engineering student must understand mathematics, since it is his second language; he relies on an understanding of the physical and life sciences to supply the raw material for which he applies his engineering. This broad background enables the engineer to be able to provide a creative solution to the problems which he will face in the future. He must be dedicated to his studies and committed to the field which he has chosen. The atmosphere, facilities, and faculty of the department all combine to aid in attaining this level of competence.

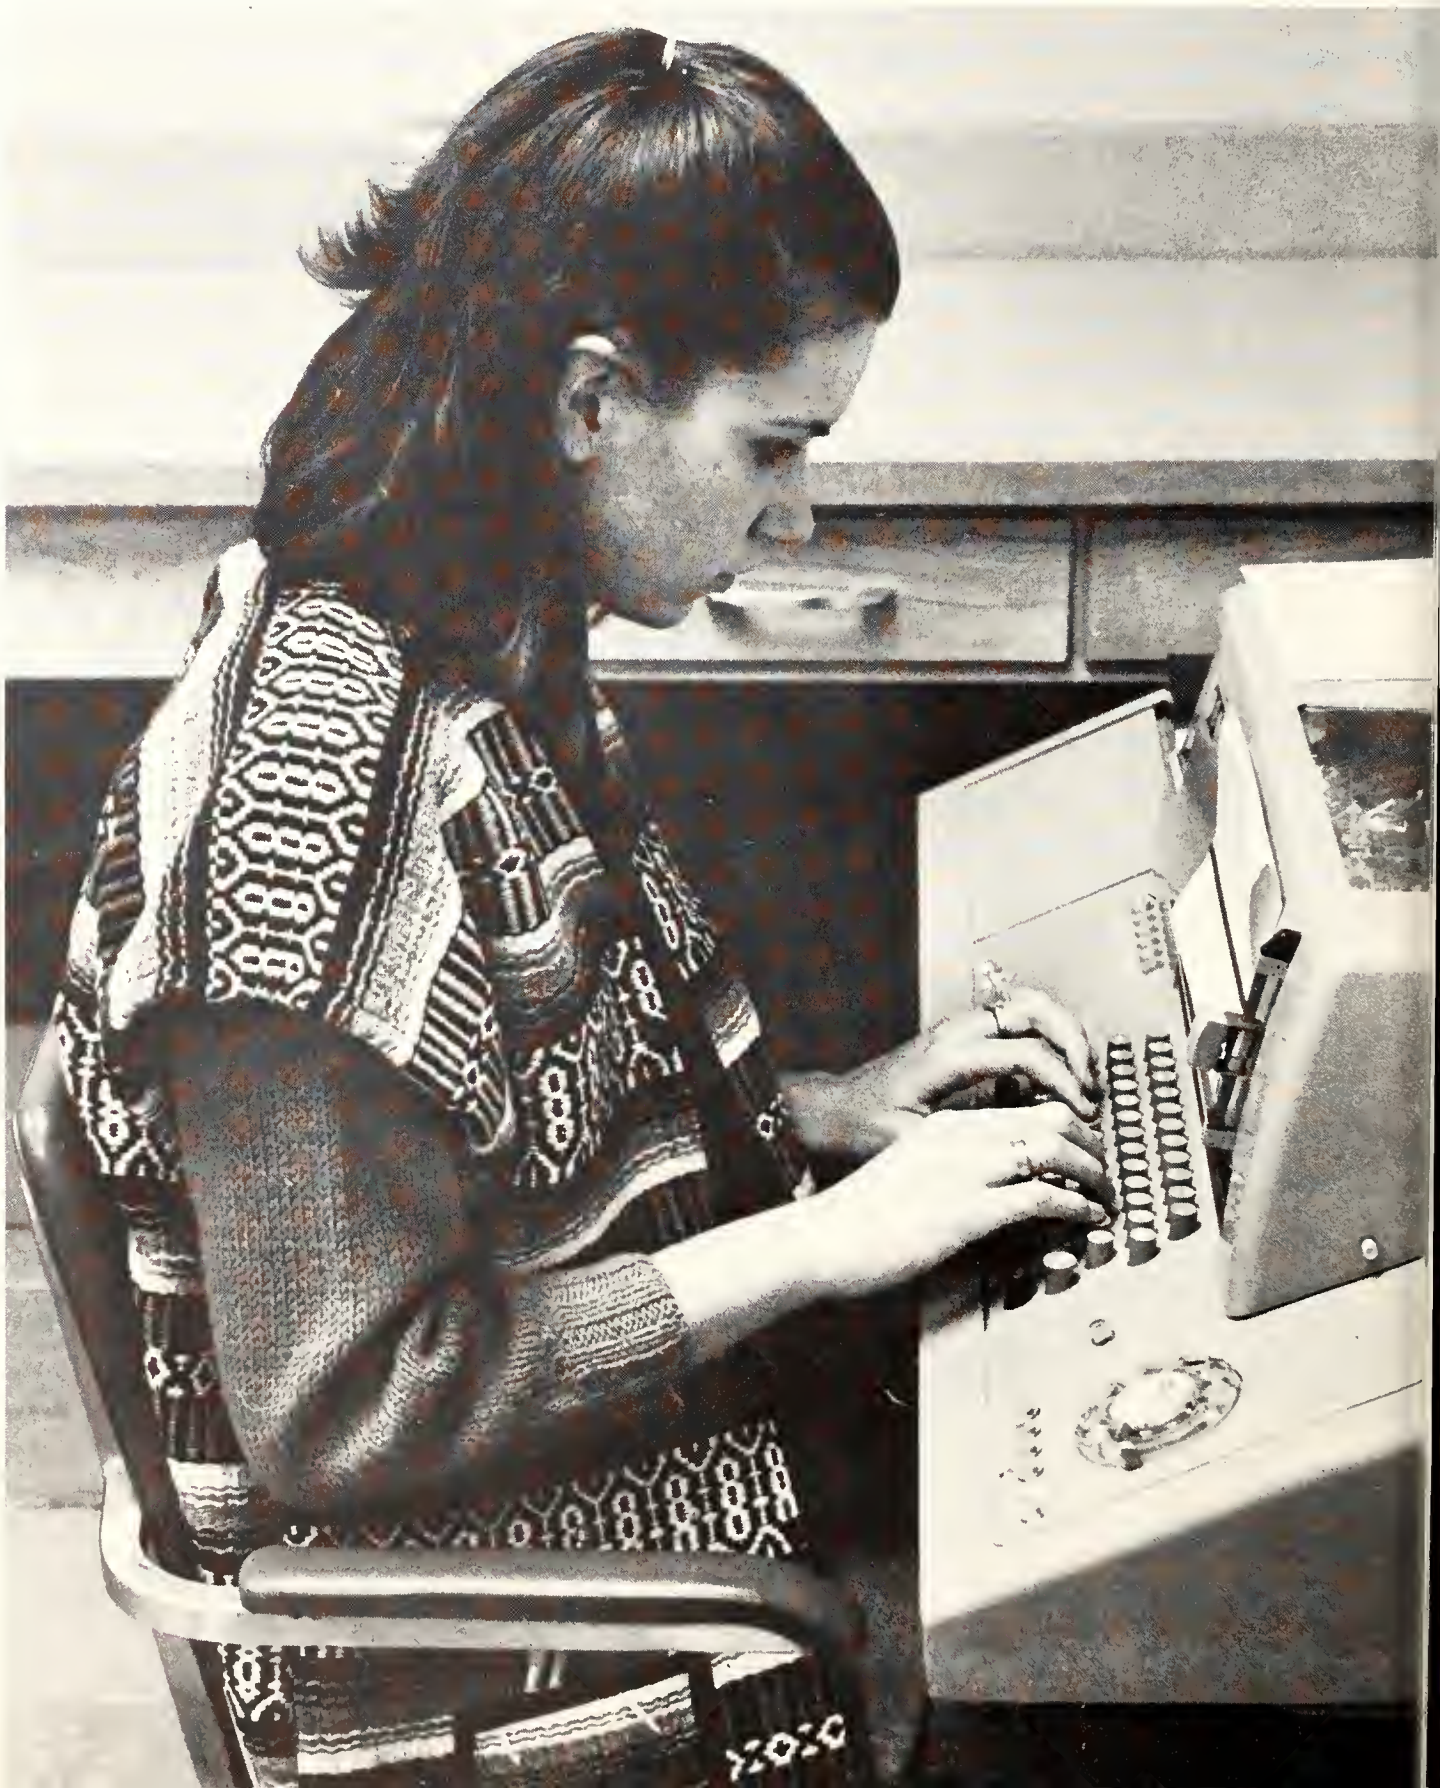


To us, the apparatus of science often looks unintelligible. To them . . .

The outside of a computer appears simple, but to the student assigned to design an information routing, a computer is not whirring reels and flashing lights.

The students in Briggs quickly become familiar with all the elements of computer operations. They have available to them several key punch machines as well as a direct link with the computer which permits instantaneous response to student-written programs.





Briggs College Combines Science with Society

LBC students discover the advantages ot teaching machines as they are exposed to technical subjects taught through the new techniques of teaching.

Lyman Briggs College is a residential college designed for students interested in a liberal education in the fields of the biological and physical sciences and mathematics. Degrees are offered in the sciences, pre-professional training, secondary education, management, and administration. All the advantages of a small college are available—a small community where students and faculty plan their curriculum together and students are stimulated intellectually, socially, and ethically. Particular emphasis is placed on the problems of science as they affect society today. To this end, Lyman Briggs integrates the technology of the sciences into all the traditional elements of college life.

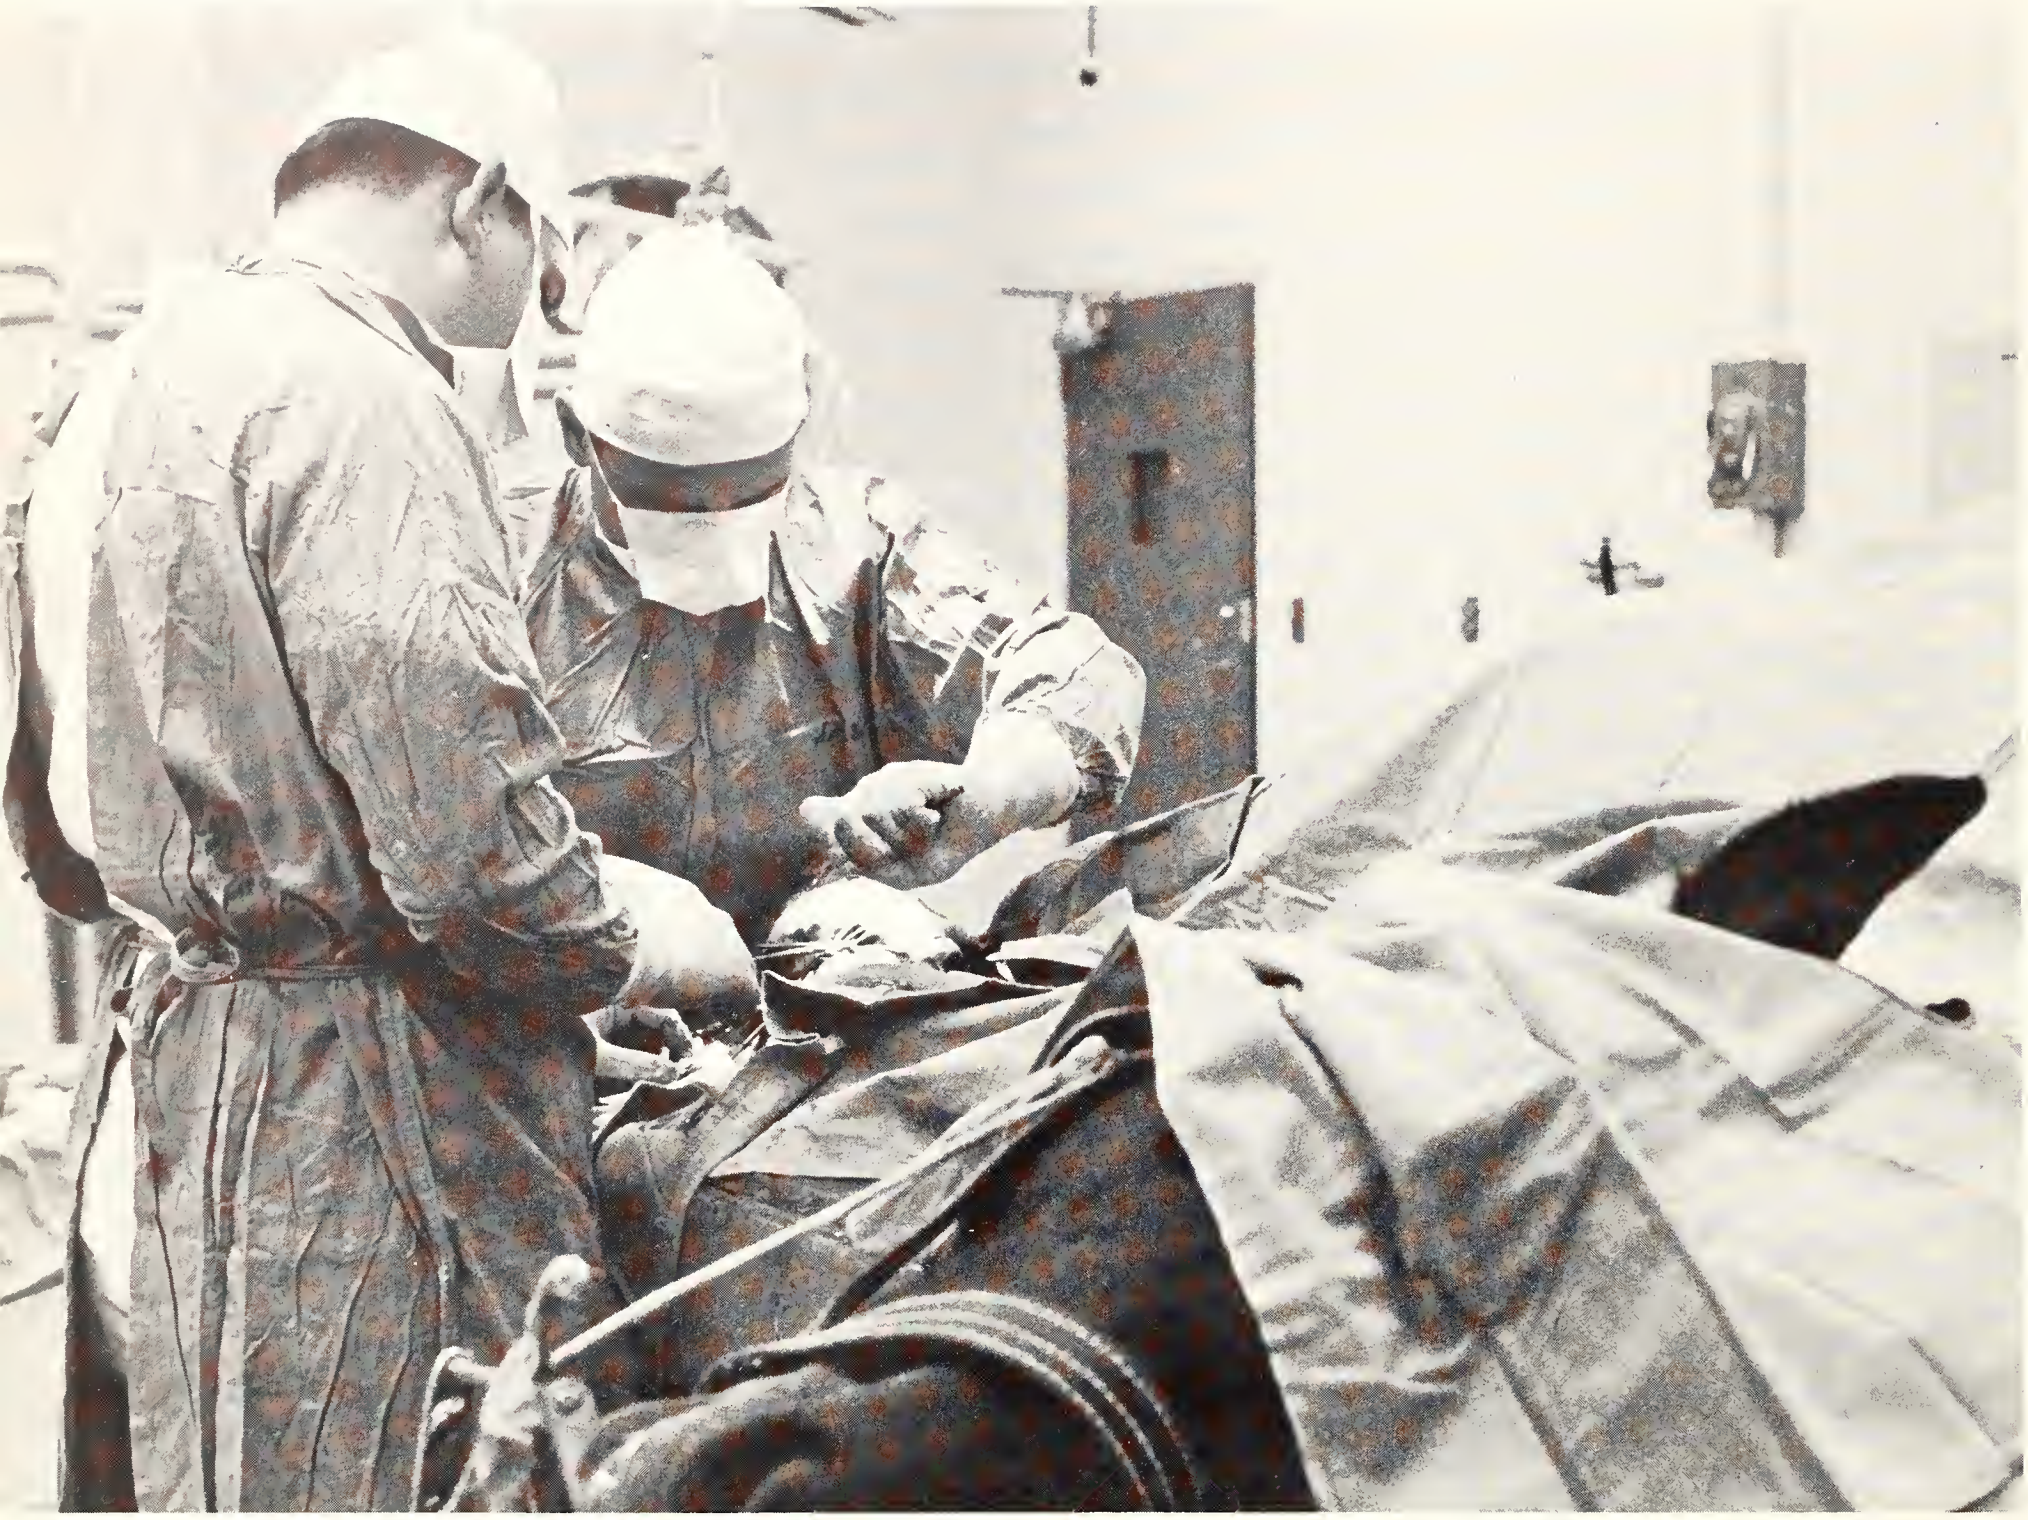
It might look like either a moon probe or a beginning Operation Mohole, but he knows what he's doing.

Agriculture is not a classroom-oriented discipline, but relys primarily on actual experience in work situations.

Experiments demand careful supervision and record-keeping. The staff to keep these records is drawn from all agricultural students. Even grads have to earn pin money somehow.

The first department of this university, in reality the first concern of the incipient M.S.U. was the School of Agriculture. The school has grown as fast or faster than the university, throwing out numerous offshoots as it grew. At present the words "agricultural school" do not necessarily imply "cow college," but conjure up a list of areas and interests seemingly without end. The activities of the school are widely diversified, but its purpose remains the same: to give to each student a background of liberal arts and an intensive training in the most modern aspects of his chosen field, whatever it is. There are several possible programs of education available, including a four-year program, a two-year Short Course, and a work-study program. This varied curricula is far different from the rigorous and specific courses first offered, but the quality of the product remains the same: the best in the nation.

A greenhouse is made largely of glass. Glass breaks.

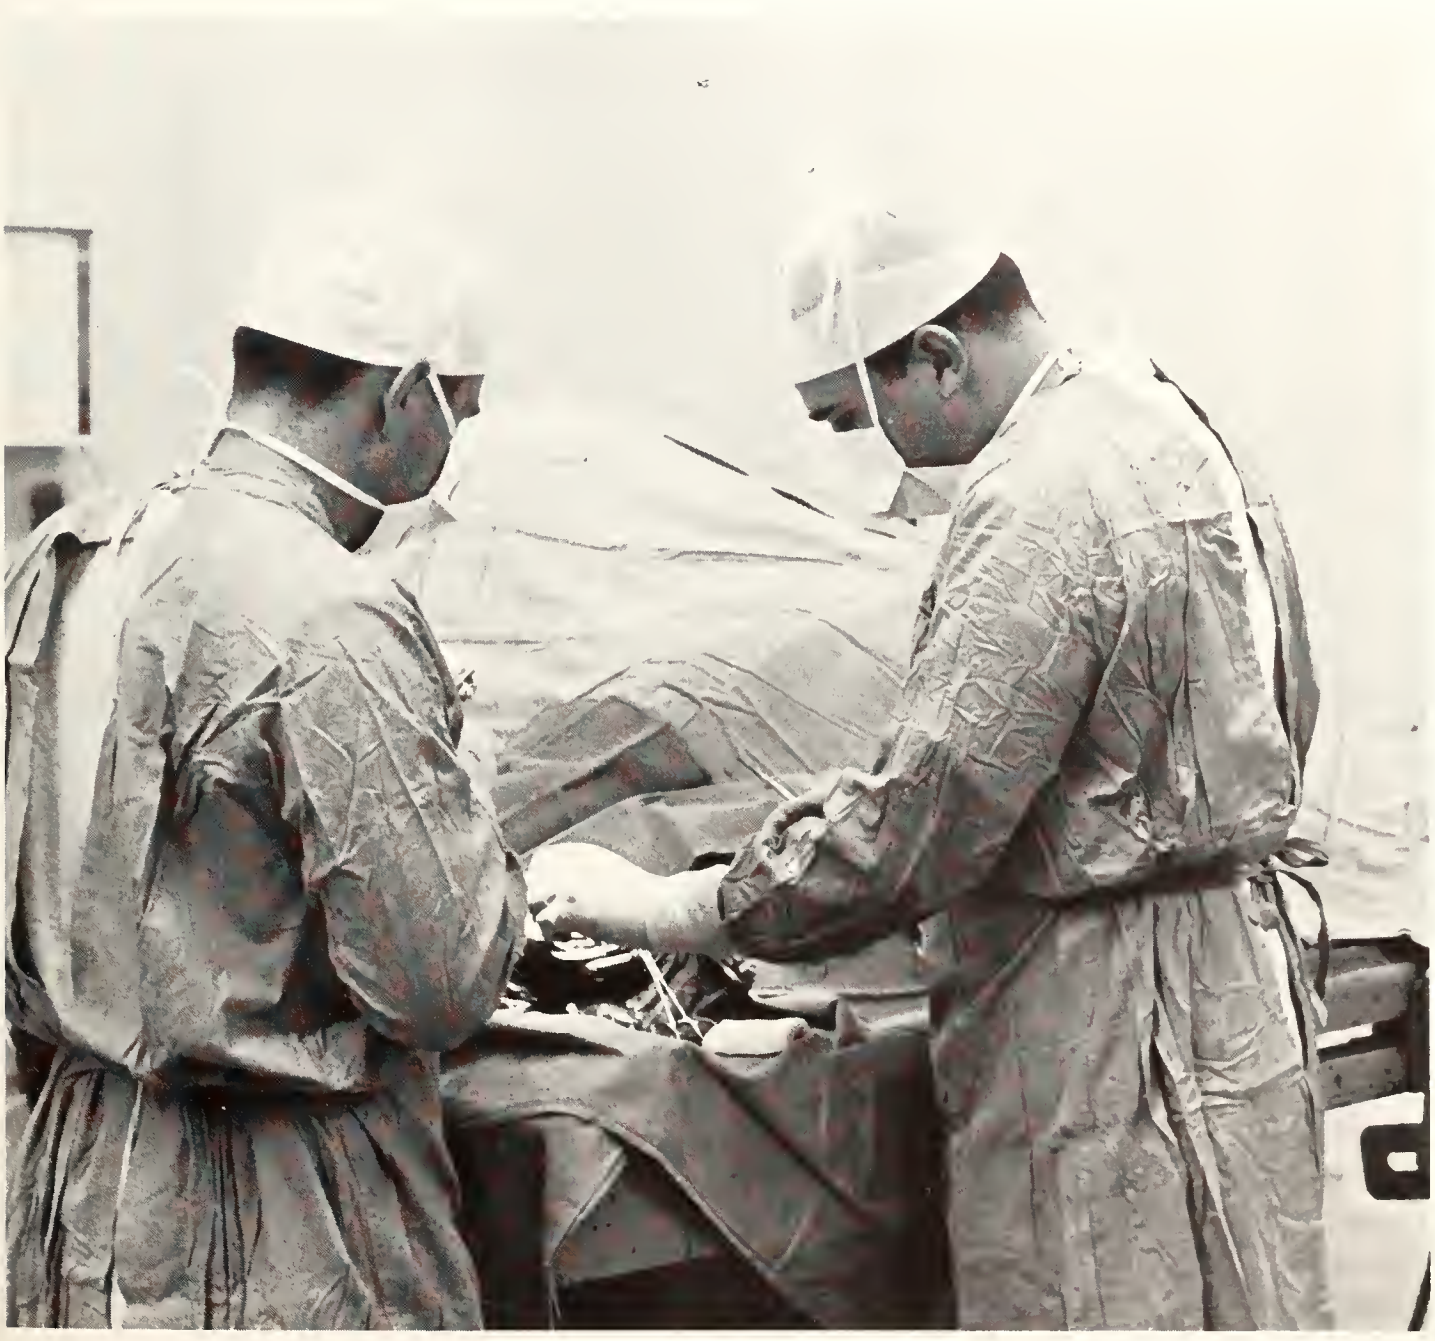


Medicine remains the treatment and cure of the patient, whether the patient is horse or human.

Following two years of liberal education, a student may apply for admittance to the Veterinary Medicine school. Fifty students are accepted each fall and spring. They must then average eighteen to twenty credits for eleven consecutive terms. In the Animal Clinic they handle outpatient cases with the assistance of a D.V.M. They have an opportunity to assist in some of the research which has given the school much national recognition. Some of the current topics of research are leukemia in dogs, genetic malfunctions, and effects of disease on primary functions, all subjects which have repercussions in human medicine.

The small animal clinic improves the Veterinary Medicine intern's "bedside manner" as well as affording him valuable experience.

The apparatus of medicine is constant as is the dedication of its practitioners. The operating room of the Vet. Clinic is as well-equipped as many hospitals.



One of the "accessories": a cow with a window in its side. That's right. A window.

Arts Curricula Offers Variety of Experiences

There are innumerable opportunities for a student enrolled in any of the arts curricula to obtain valuable training and experience by participating in extracurricular activities. There is a daily newspaper, both radio and television stations, drama clubs, choral groups, and even an art gallery. The student is encouraged to participate in any of these activities, and will be eliminating an important part of his college education if he bypasses them. The University sponsors such activities to assure the student of a well-rounded education, which involves a great deal more than academic studies. The student who receives an Arts degree has acquired not only the specialized training he sought, but a greater understanding of the world in general and his place in society.

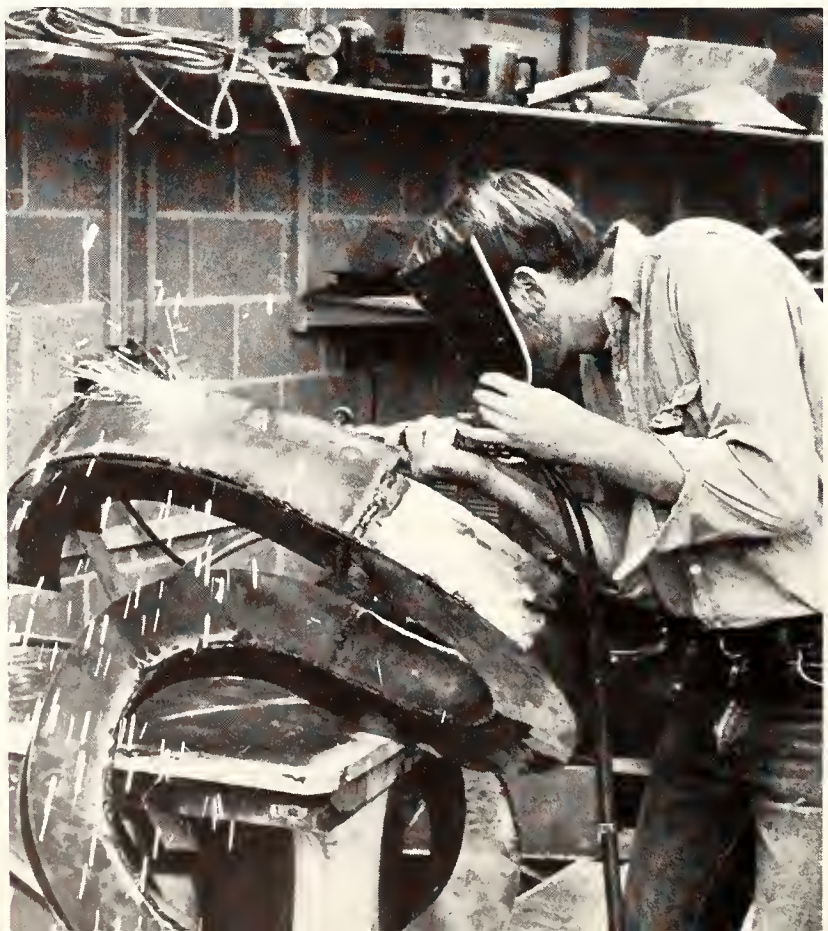
Kresge Art Center is a combination of art gallery, teaching center, and artist's workshop, all in technicolor.

Kresge Art Center has examples of many student art works, ranging from the traditional to frankly modernistic styles, such as the seulpture shown above.

To the uninitiated, it may look like welding together a lot of scrap metal. To the connoisseur, it is ART.



The Art department guides its students in developing their individual talents, and teaches them to appreciate art from the layman's viewpoint as well as from the professional's. The students examine the history of art and its significance in past civilizations, and relate these studies to contemporary art and society. The students are encouraged to expand their own abilities and strive to perform at the highest professional level. The department provides the students with the technical skills and practical experience they need, so that they may learn to work independently and discover their highest potential.

The gallery of the Art Center constantly changing its exhibited material to expose the student to as many genres of art as possible.

The College of Communication Arts operates on the principle that good communication is essential in a democratic society. The student who can effectively observe and comprehend, and, in turn, express his own thoughts and opinions will be a better citizen. The College tries to give the student a broad, liberal education while helping him to understand the many functions of communications in society. An important aspect of communications that many people tend to overlook is entertainment. The broadcasting and film media play an important role in society, and there is an increasing need for well-educated and experienced personnel to meet the challenges in this field. Through participation in student drama productions or the University's television and radio stations, the student gains valuable experience.

"O here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad." (Romeo and Juliet: II,iv).

". . . we two have come one road, Two of us looking through one pair of eyes./This is the way of traveling for the blind." (Antigone; 988-990).

"It looks good on the floor. Do we dare lift it onto the stage?" (backstage remark).

"I have a faint cold fear through my veins/That almost freezes up the heat of life." (Romeo and Juliet: IV,iii).

While not strictly the practice of a new language, that recorded letter home can do a lot to span a gap of miles and customs.

Somewhere behind the board which controls the tapes whieh control the students' responses and learning patterns sits a man who controls the whole class.

The study of a foreign language supplements a humanistic education and develops an awareness in the student of the customs and beliefs of other nationalities. Proficiency in a second or even third language may be used as a tool in such occupations as government service and scientific research. It will increase the pleasures of foreign travel and can lead to new and rewarding cultural experiences. For the foreign student, there are opportunities to meet people from many other nations, as well as Americans. To develop in student a useful command of the language, the department emphasizes speaking and comprehension. To facilitate learning of these skills, the department maintains three well-equipped language labs, one located in Morrill Hall, a second in Akers, and a new facility in Wells Hall.

To some students, the language lab is a weekly ordeal. To others, it is the best possible way to learn.

It looks like a machine that can't think. But the student begins to wonder when he hears, "Repeat after me: 'Je parle . . .'"

The best musicians are those who practice most.

Usually, the most appreciated of the liberal arts is music. At one time or another, everyone has seen or heard the Marching Band and nearly everyone knows somebody who is learning to play the recorder for their elementary education major or minor.

The Arts curriculum, encompassing many diversified fields of study, is designed to give the student a broad liberal education. Devoted to the education of the whole man, it aims at helping the individual to understand and accept his role in society. At the same time, it tries to stimulate aesthetic sensitivities and cultural awareness. The student learns how to express himself and how to communicate effectively with those around him.

An elementary education major must learn to play the recorder before he can advance to more sophisticated instruments.

In time, constant drill will eliminate false steps and wrong turns. The musical excellence comes from daily practice in the Music Building (facing page).

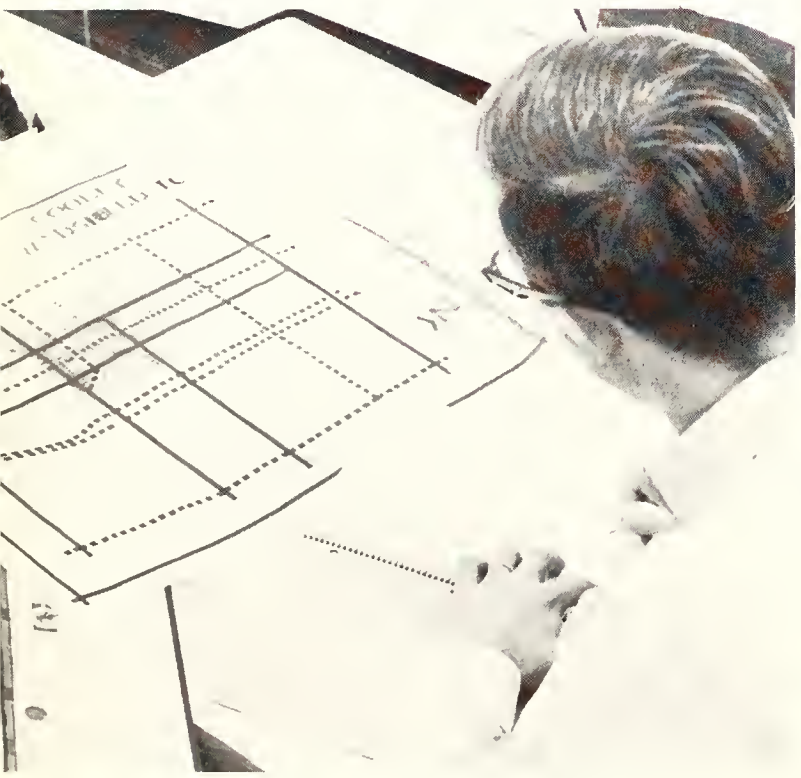
Both urban planning and geography demand a knowledge of not only the spatial relationships of the environment but also the various ways of representing these relationships. Either by means of maps (above and below) or by means of models either detailed or abstract (facing page), the student of these field must be able to present his ideas and solutions.



Social Sciences Integrate Man into Society

In our advanced society, the college student must acquire a thorough knowledge of human social institutions if he is to participate effectively in his environment. The college of Social Science functions to provide this background by developing knowledge within its various areas and offering training in certain related professional fields.

Geography, a science of comparison, concerns itself with the physical similarities and differences of the world and their relation to human affairs. The student learns to comprehend the spatial organization of the earth's physical phenomena. Geography may be thought of as a bridge between the natural and social sciences.

The student in urban planning and landscape architecture is concerned with development and improvement of the physical structure of cities and other urbanized areas, creating the best possible environment for their inhabitants. Unlike the geographer, the urban planner doesn't merely recognize the characteristics of his surroundings, he changes them to solve a specific problem. Before he formulates a solution he must understand all ramifications of the problem and must also forecast all the consequences of his solution. The discipline demands an extensive knowledge of all the social sciences in order to accomplish his goal.

The student in advertising or journalism does more than use the social sciences as background. He learns to use the disciplines of the field to make decisions which could affect an entire social structure. The journalist learns many writing techniques, but major emphasis is placed upon the responsibility of utilizing these techniques in ethical manner. Advertising is also a challenging field and is rapidly becoming a major area of mass communications. Courses in this department are designed to help the student contribute to the rising stature and social responsibility of the industry.

The schools of advertising and television-radio often work closely together in either the preparation or the production of TV commercials (above right and below). But the communication arts also include artwork for advertising or copyreading for journalism (above left and top right).

Cooperation is the byword for television-radio students preparing a commercial.

The program offered by the School of Business is designed to prepare its students for careers in business, law, labor relations or public affairs. Broad training is stressed in all areas, many business students expect to occupy executive positions in business or in public administration. The student of political science also requires a general education in the political and social sciences. He then continues with specialized training in political and administrative institutions and behavior in the United States and other countries of the world. There are a wide variety of careers open to the student who chooses to major in political science, including work in public relations, city management, and foreign service.

The field of education is the largest and one of the most important professions available. It is the professional educator in this field who forms the characteristics of our future population—the scientist, the factory worker, the consumer, the manufacturer. Each student of education is required to spend one full term working in a local school system. By living in the community and teaching under the guidance of an experienced supervising teacher, the student acquires valuable experience and insight into the duties and responsibilities of a teacher.

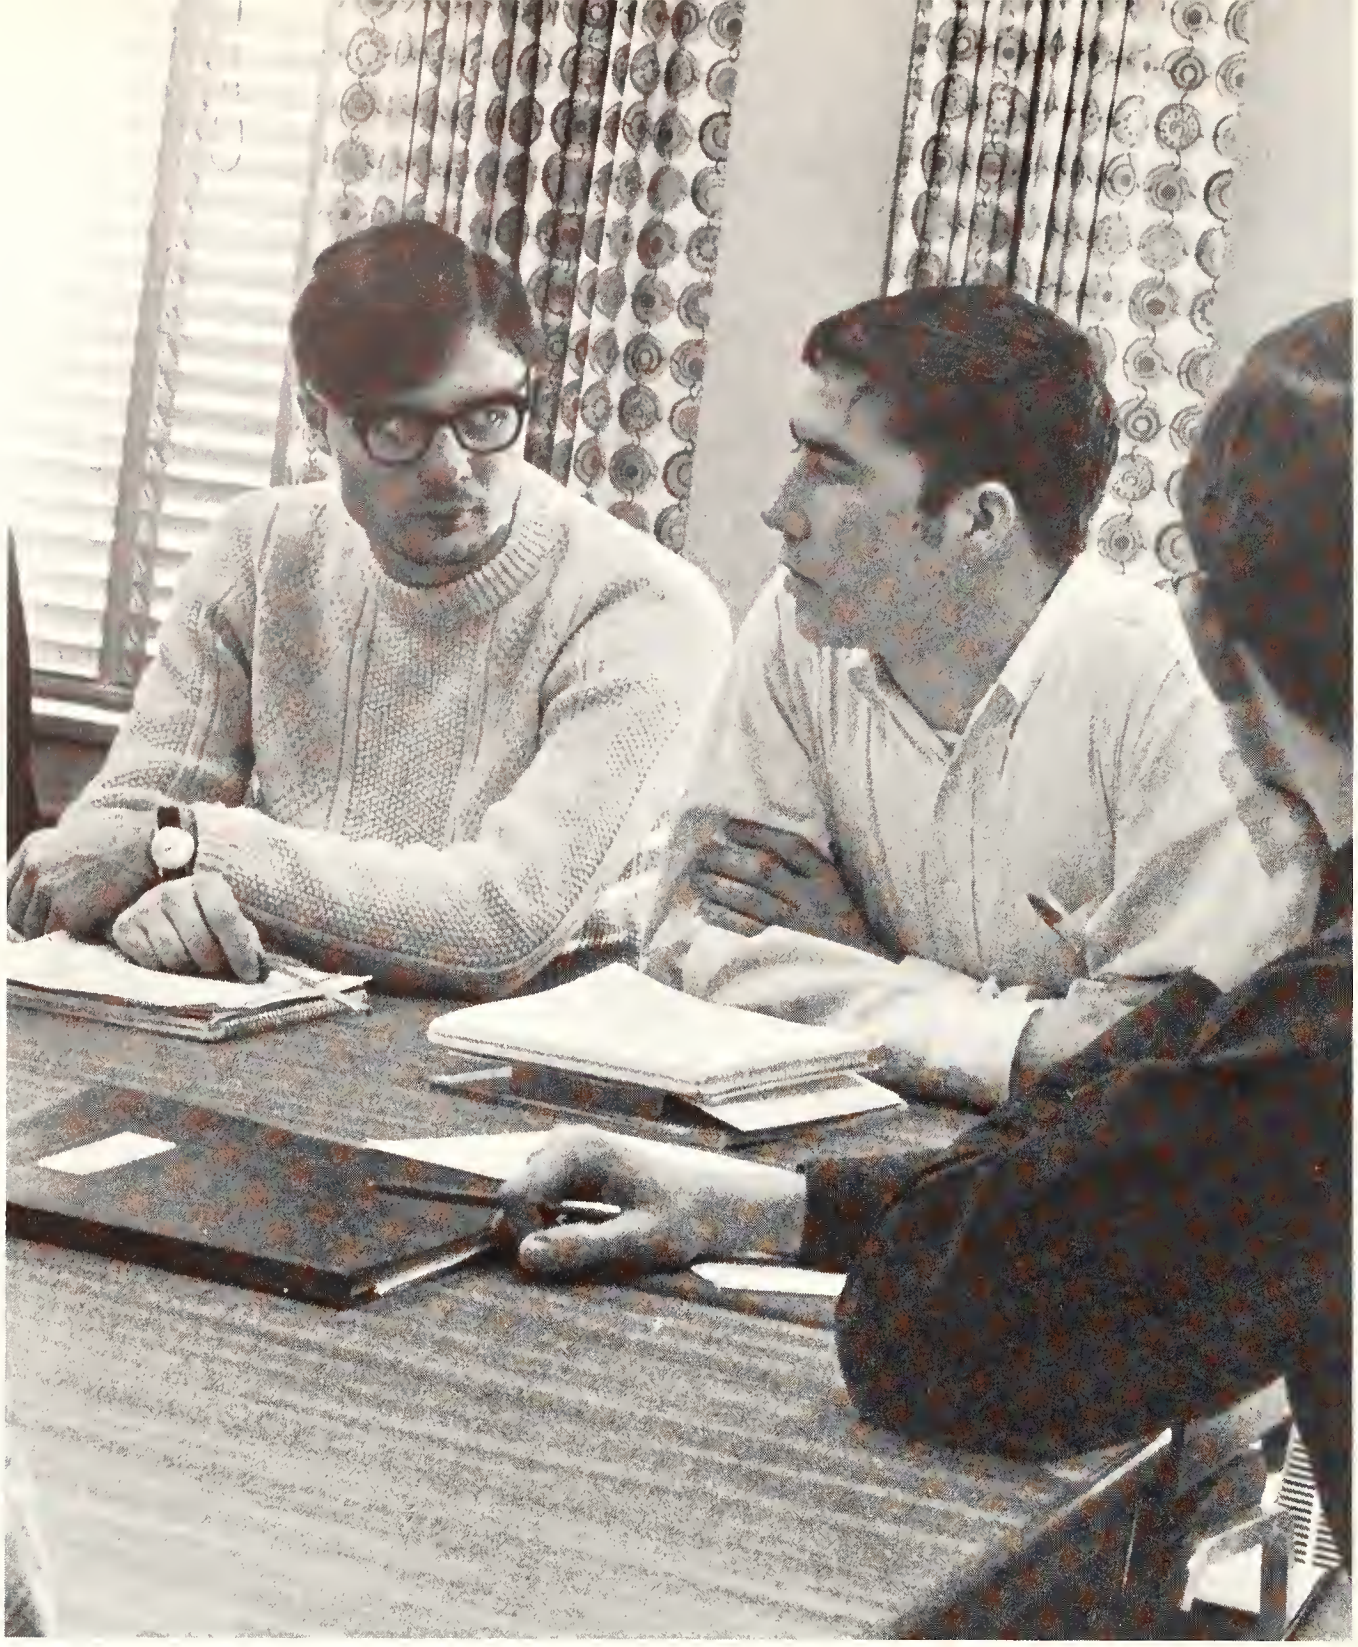
The Erickson Library provides education students with the materials they need for research and class preparation.

Spartan Nursery offers home economics students valuable "practice time" in working with young children.

It's often hard to tell who learns most from the sessions in the home management lab sessions, the children who are going to nursery school or the "big kids" who learn more than they expeeted.

Child's Play: A Means to Education

The field of home economics has been gradually changing and expanding to meet the needs of our dynamic society as there continues to be a high demand for people trained in the traditional specialized and service professions. Accompanying these traditional needs are demands for people with a background in human development and applied nutrition to work in community improvement programs. The student of home economics must apply her knowledge to the needs of the individual, family, and community, as they are affected by a changing environment. An increasing number of students from other disciplines are electing basic courses such as design, nutrition, and family economics to supplement their major requirements. Home economics has both an educational and a social value for it covers areas such as family stability, youth, and home life as well as the family's place in the community.



Many of the JMC classes are held in seminar-type sessions, giving each student the chance to listen and to respond without the barriers present in large class sections.

The learning process continues even through dinner.

Another JMC Focuses on Social Sciences

Harmonious integration between curricular and extracurricular activities is encouraged by housing classrooms, cultural programs, student social and dormitory rooms, and offices in a single residential-academic setting on the Michigan State University campus. The members of James Madison College study the major social, economics and political problems facing our society within the framework of the social sciences and related subjects. Problems of war and peace, economic poverty and opportunity, racial and religious intolerance and discrimination, urban blight and delinquency, and the future of a constitutional democracy in the current climate of public opinion provide the focus for study. A primary objective of this semi-autonomous, experimental college is to combine the advantages of a small liberal arts college with the great facilities of a major university.

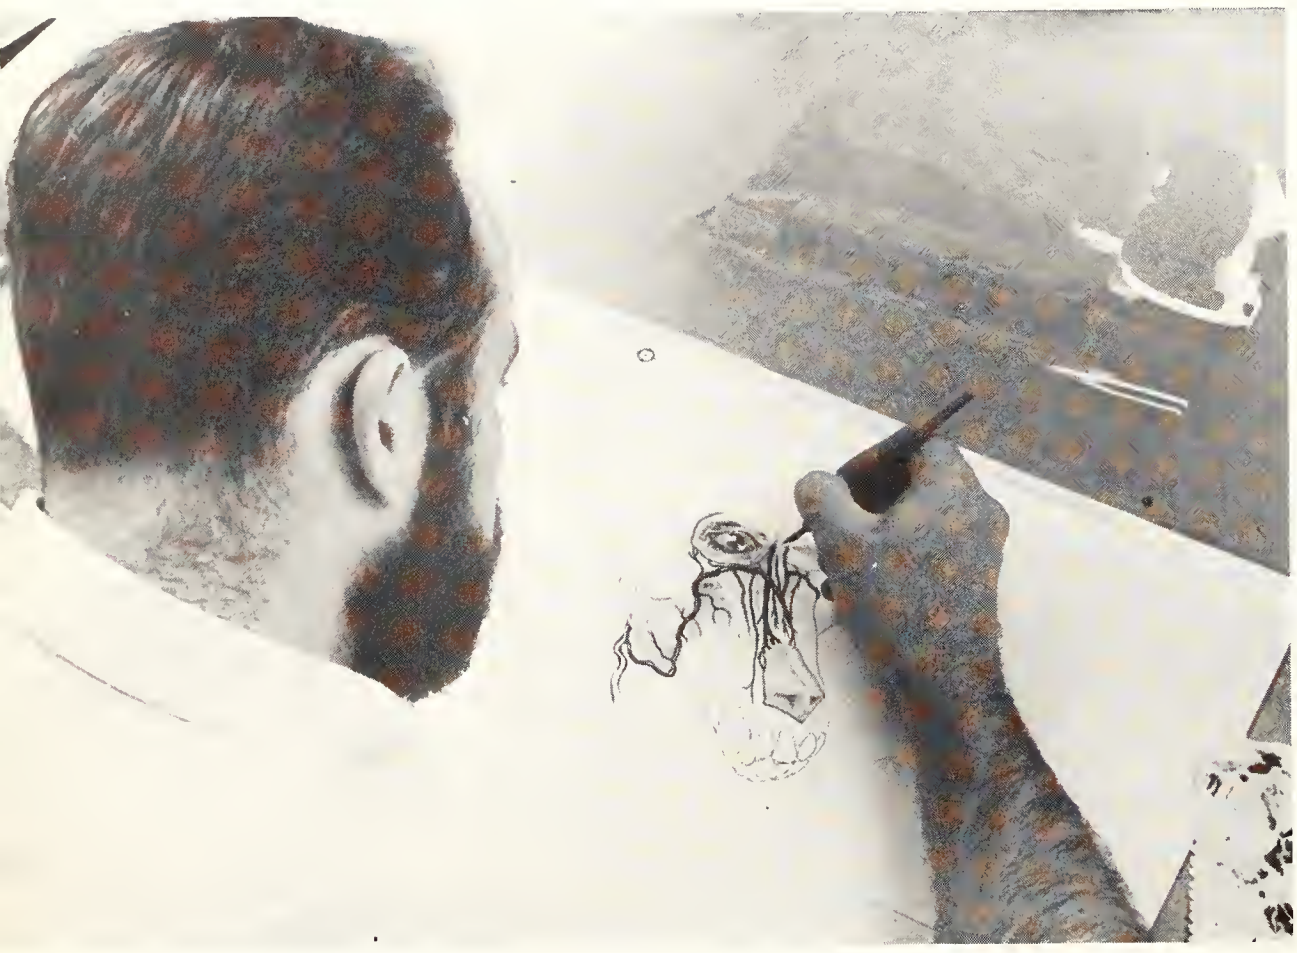
The Human Learning Research Institute, jointly sponsored by the Colleges of Education and Social Science, was founded to gain new knowledge that may be useful in the improvement of educational programs and processes. The main focus of interest is on problems of learning and conditions which affect the learning process. In the same vein, the Social Science Teaching Institute was established to promote better social science teaching. It is concerned mainly with the preparation of instructors, curricula development, teaching materials, and research aimed at improvement of social science programs in the schools.

Psychology is both a science and a profession concerned with behavior. As a science, it is concerned with theories, facts, and methods as they relate to understanding, predicting, and influencing behavior of humans and animals. Professionally, psychology involves the scientific application of its principles to aid individuals or groups who seek solutions to their psychological problems.

Psych Research makes use of many subjects, trained or spontaneous, rats or humans, in order to identify and solve the problems which face modern man.

Research in the social science has evolved from an interview with a stenographer present to record the dialogue to a conversation in a soundproof room under the eye of a TV camera and the ear of a tape recorder while a computer stands ready to assemble the data.

The study of man implies a perception, whether by microscopy (above) or through comparative anatomy (below) of the relationships between all living organisms.



Anthropology focuses on man as its central object of study and builds a framework demonstrating man's place in the world. The student examines man's evolutionary development, the organization of his cultural patterns and his social life, and the merging of culture and beliefs into societies. Emphasis is placed on the search for universal cultural institutions, the process of constant change in social structures, and the function of social institutions in comparable cultural systems.

The Study of Man: The Most Social of Sciences

For the medical student, the required four years of undergraduate study and the first two years of medical school are regarded as one continuous experience. The student who meets the requirements for admission enters at the level for which he is qualified and progresses according to his own ability. The program is designed to allow maximum flexibility, permitting the student to set his own pace, depending on his academic standing, interest and ability. An understanding of human behavior is essential for anyone who plans to assume responsibility for human health, for the patient cannot be cured physically until he can be taught to understand his situation.

In all sciences, the student is concerned with reactions to stimuli, especially those measurable quantitatively.

"By comparison, one hints. By dissection, one sees." Vesalius

Owen Hall provides a good setting for an exchange of ideas, whether between friends in the cafeteria (above) or a reader and an author (below).

Graduate School: The Making of a Scholar

Independence means freedom, but the freedom of the grad student is to study at his leisure.

Milton Muelder, Dean for Advaneed Graduate Studies: "The teacher should make the student independent at the earliest moment possible and should become a friend and a colleague to whom the student can turn in the pursuit of new knowledge."

Originally, the term scholar meant a "man of leisure." As the tempo of life speeds up in "University City," to quote the campus radio station, it gets increasingly difficult to fulfill this denfinition. After four years of quick-paced undergraduate education, the student often asks whether he will ever find the leisure-to-learn atmosphere which characterized the first scholar scholars. Graduate school is his opportunity to achieve that goal. At Michigan State, the graduate student is surrounded by all the clamor of a growing university, but he is still offered a chance to create his private scholastic environment, his own "leisure-to-learn."

The process of education goes on even over lunch in the Owen cafeteria.

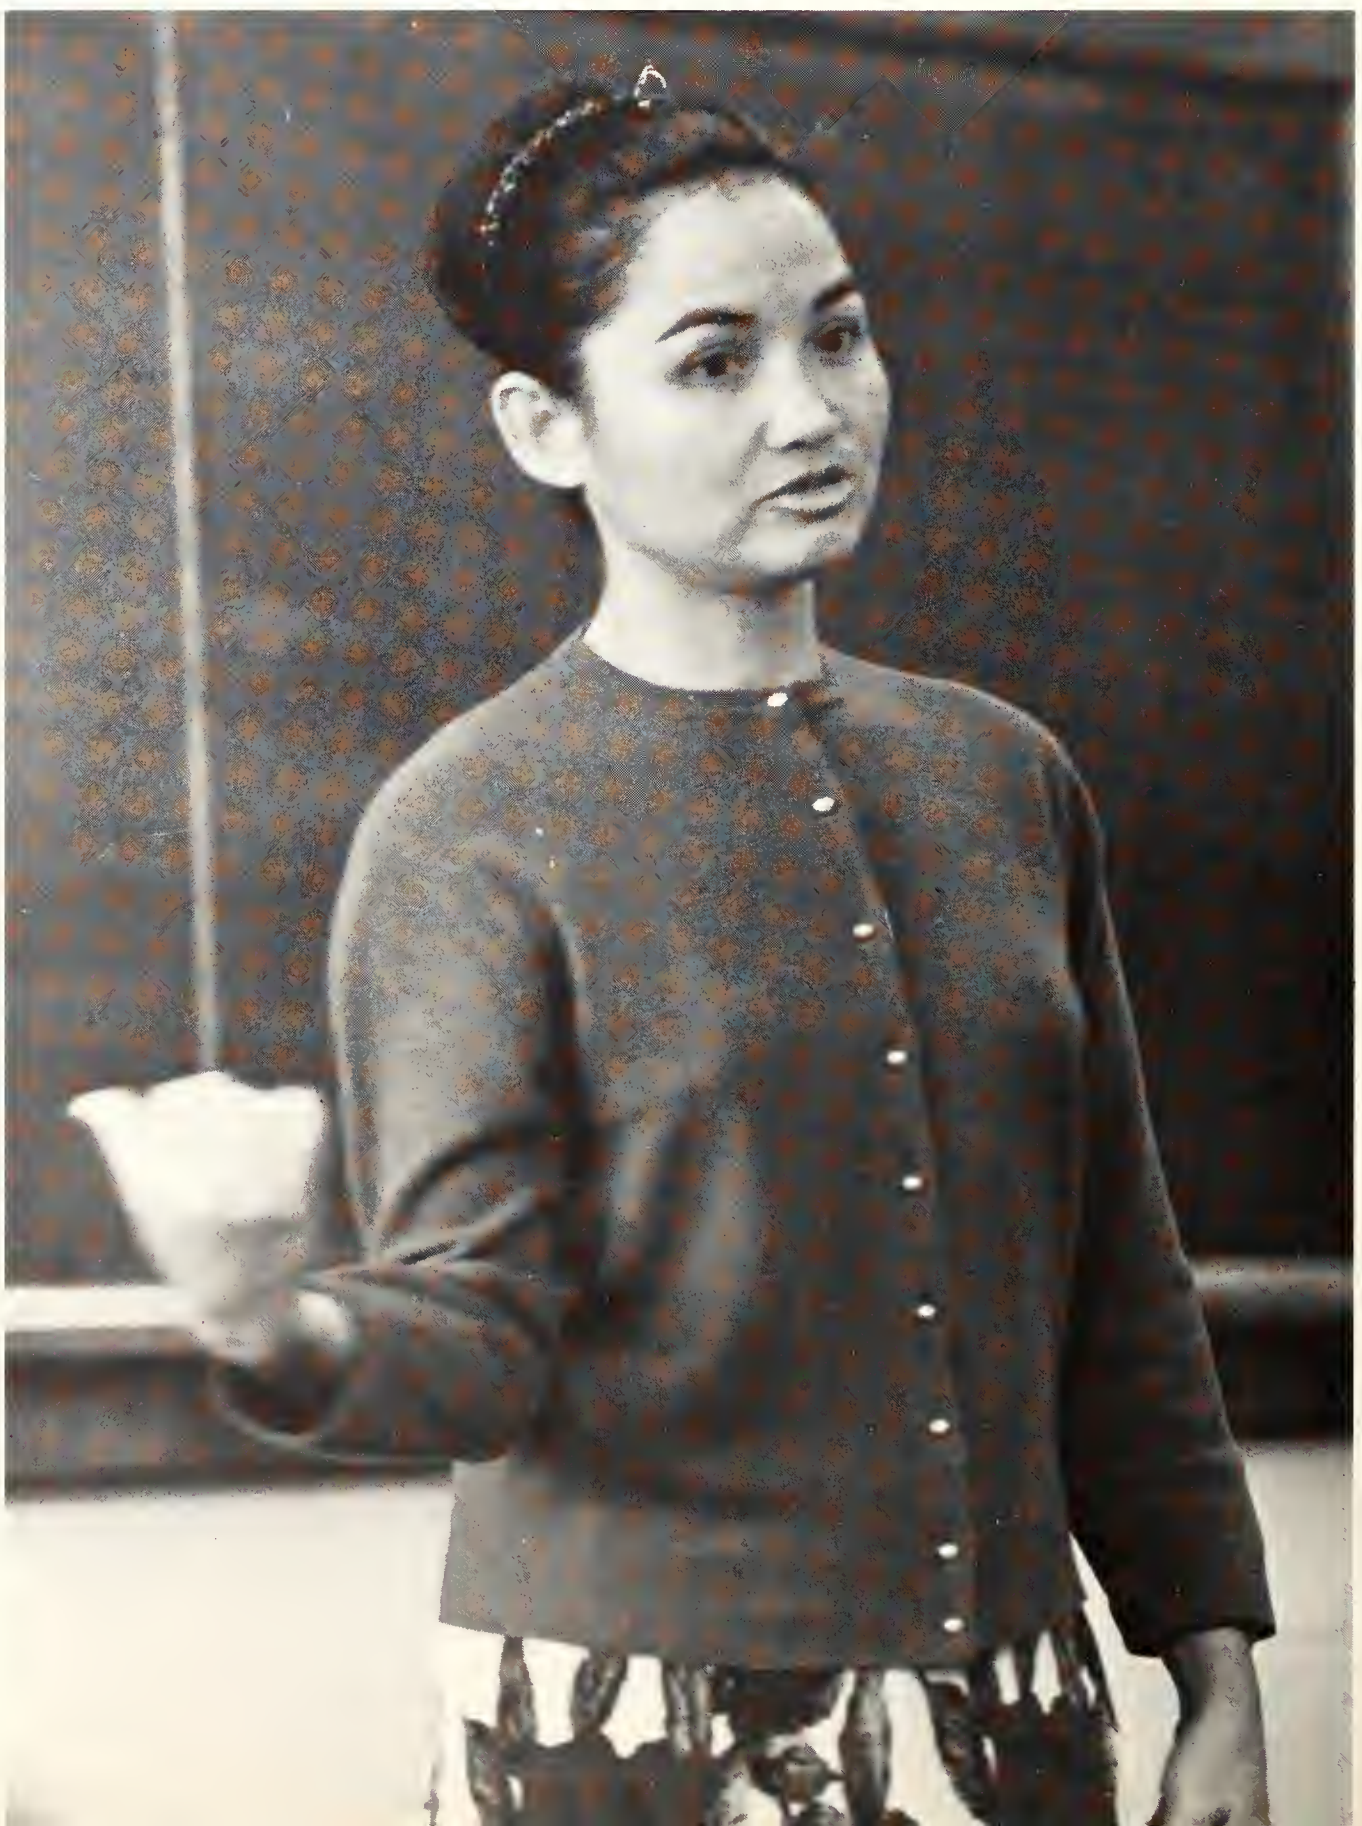
The individual graduate student is a person separated from the rest of academic life by a growing complex of education and experience. Academically, he is on his own, concerned with his educational progress. Socially, he is divided from the majority of students by age and maturity. He tends to exclude activities foreign to his area of interest and generally prefers the society of others like himself. He is in the midst of changing from a traditional student-teacher relationship to something approximating the spontaneous sharing of ideas between two friends working to solve a mutual problem. All these things tend to isolate him from the mass of students and force him into his own environment.

At the graduate level, education is often the exchange of thoughts and opinions in a seminar.

Graduate study in the sciences is less talk and more guided research.

The cyclotron is used by graduate students, but they don't control it.

Part of most graduate students' education is teaching an undergraduate section of a major-related course. They have little experience, but enthusiasm hopefully makes up the deficit.



The individual who emerges from this experience has changed. No longer does he move from organization to organization, from major to major, from course to course. No longer does he vacillate from security to insecurity, from knowledge to ignorance, from adulthood to childhood. He has learned his abilities and his limits. He has become self-sufficient and self-confident. He has learned how to learn. He has become a scholar.

Services

Beneath the polished exterior of academic and social life lies an intricate network of men and machinery known as university services. Several thousand anonymous people work daily to keep the student's environment functioning on a continuous plane. Although their wages represent a large part of student tuition and fees, they work almost without notice and so, their functions seem somewhat mysterious. Their skills assemble and maintain but students notice with only passive interest.

A tree is altered forever,

The faces belong to members of a team. Their jobs originate in a common purpose. Their goals are concerned with the student and his needs. Among themselves, they know each other's names, hobbies and interests. Among the students, they are known only by generic terms —the janitor, the tree-trimmer, the meter maid. Their jobs have replaced their names. To the university community, the members of the university services are known not as persons, but people with jobs to be done. We rarely realize that they are persons. They are.

Teamwork is dependent upon an efficient and complementary blending of distinctive skills and personalities. A specific service demands a wide range of ability and requires a vast amount of different skills. The importance of each person's contribution to the entire system is the same. Each task has an equal importance, and each requires a certain, distinctive personality to perform that task.

A question is asked—A thoughtful answer given . . . a university service has been performed.

Although the student may have only a passive awareness of the people who perform various services, the people behind those services are acutely aware of him. Whether he is in need of emergency first aid, a job introduction, a cultural diversion or the more domestic services provided by the dormitory system, there is someone to help him. But "someone" helps and still remains someone.

Aesthetics, entertainment, education or information, from within the diversity come the accents to everyday life. The accents become integrated into the student's daily routine. He doesn't appreciate their sources, nor does he realize exactly what they consist of. When someone does a poor job, he complains. If the quality is good, accent is neither appreciated nor noticed. The student doesn't seek certain services but they do have direct and specific effects on him.

The anonymous faces provide services passively sought, actively criticized, but seldom praised. To what does this lead? Call it a level of awareness. The awareness in which there is no particular want, but yet a specific feeling of loss when the service is inadequate or abandoned. The student may learn that these, too, are an intricate part of university services, lying somewhere between the often mysterious under currents and the creation—the student.

Beyond the services neither appreciated or noticed are those that are actively sought by the student. They are the elite. Their natural publicity is unique among university services, for the faces they present are not anonymous, but well-known; not noticed, but applauded. The service they present is not necessarily one which aids the student physically, but is intended to mold and influence him mentally and emotionally. They make the longlasting impression and are an unforgettable addition to everyday life.

These are the services that the student will wait in line for through the frosty early morning hours. Top notch performers and road companies brought to the campus by the Lecture-Concert Series are always eagerly awaited. Partly due to student demand, and partly due to the demands of the general public, MSU provides entertaining and educational services that fill the demand for quality in cultural entertainment.

Is the individual who performs the service as important to the student as the end result of the function performed by all the university services? Or can it be that the student is truly interested in the personality that sort's his mail, drives his bus, or speaks to him through a broadcast medium? Moreover, does he realize how the effort of so many people even further behind the scenes of university services combines to make everything operate smoothly?

The rising spire of a smokestack stands sentinel over the asphalt veins and brick muscles of the multiversity. Life never grows stagnant here . . . there is no time. To be "number one" we must build and expand faster than anyone else because in size there is power. Progress is felt as the destructive force which demolishes the old to make way for the new. But somewhere behind those shells of concrete there is a man who designed both the destruction and contruction which will follow.

From inside the patrol car, the students take their turn at looking like an anonymous multitude.

The currents beneath the crisp outlines of the university's physique provide the power for its mechanistic progress from day to day, month to month, through innovation and imagination to reality. The specific services change, responding to new demands and a larger public domain. The motive which guides this change, however, is a constant factor within the university: a need to serve the individual student and to provide him with the necessities which do the most to aid his education.

A treat . . . the quality of which is gone forever.

Perhaps these are the charts that know the story of why the dairy is only a memory.

July 1, 1967 brought the end of one of the two top dairies in the nation. The services the dairy store rendered the student and the dairy industry went relatively unnoticed while the store was in production. Few students realized that they were receiving products which no dairy store in the area could duplicate; in that the facilities were so good that dairy specialists and food science majors from all over the United States and foreign countries used our dairy program as a model; that sales tripled within the last three years yet the plant never undersold anyone. The students never realized that the plant was completely self-sustaining, with the profits being reinvested in new equipment and research. Yet, this enterprising industry came to an end with Spring Term of 1967. Why? . . . no one seems to know.

And only the building remains—waiting for its name change—still no one knows why.

The dairy was small . . . but then so were some of its customers.

As the student looks at university services, he sees a collage of activity, a collage whose participants often mean little to him. He seems to look through them, leaving them unremarked.

Occasionally, however, the individual personalities of those who are part of university services reach out to touch his awareness and ask for some sort of reaction.

It is then that the once shadowed faces are defined. It is then that they take on meaning and consequence. It is then that the student responds with awareness.

But this is not the norm. The student usually sees the services as a nondescript whole, a reflection of little structure and less meaning, a reflection of a reflection. Nothing.

What could be more relaxing than a concert under the stars?

The 1967 edition of South Campus Weekend lived up to its advance billing as "the most successful and entertaining complex activity ever staged." The activities began Friday night with an outdoor mixer-concert which set the tempo for the weekend. The pace was fast, the planning well conceived, and the execution was near-perfect. Saturday morning's Wilson Wipeout attracted nearly twice as many entrants as the previous year and was generally recognized as a true rally, a test of both car and driver. The festivities drew to a close with Sunday dinner served out-doors—fried chicken for all with unlimited seconds while they lasted. It was an excellent departure from the ordinary weekend routine.

Junior 500 Combines Beauty and the Beasts

It all started 21 years ago when some Lambda Chi Alpha brothers built a push-cart and challenged another fraternity to a race. A year later, they sponsored a race between all the fraternities and the following year included the sororities. Later they invited the residence halls and co-ops to participate. That first race between two fraternities grew into the present epic marathon called the Lambda Chi Junior 500 which last year totaled 70 living units in competition. With bands, singing groups, a queen, her attendants and such personages as New York Giant quarterback Earl Morrall, the Junior 500 has gotten to be a regular spring spectacular. Such thrills as overturned or disintegrating carts, neck and neck finishes and the antics of rival cheerleaders make this annual affair a must on the spring social calendar.

After winning their heat, Delts placed second behind Asher House.

Water Carnival Highlights Spring

Water Carnival '67, the annual spring spectacle, began the October of the preceding year with the appointment of twelve committee chairmen. After months of planning for the two-day affair, "ABC Darian, The Building Blocks of Life," unfolded along the Red Cedar and turned the usual grayish, muddy water into a mysterious, shimmery production line of 30 floats to the delight of the students, parents and alumni who attended. Last year, the student body was proud to dedicate the Water Carnival to President and Mrs. John Hannah in observance of their twenty-fifth year at Michigan State.

ASMSU Fall Pop Entertainment

Bob Hope and Simon and Garfunkel performed on campus this year as part of the ASMSU Pop Entertainment Series. Bob Hope immediately won the audience as he aimed his barbs at everybody from Duffy Daugherty to the "credibility gap" between the stage and the audience in Jenison Fieldhouse. Appearing with Hope were Miss California, the Jack Runyan Band, and David DeLa Rose and Brooks. Another feature of the Fall Pop Entertainment Series was the Simon and Garfunkel concert also held in Jenison. The audience was their own personal sounding board as Simon and Garfunkel didn't sing at the students but to them. Paul did all of the talking (almost) and Art stood on his head and whistled as they captivated their listeners with their contemporary sound and uptight personalities. The folksingers were called back twice by the audience, and at the end the duo invited the crowd to join them on stage.

The Ramsey Lewis Trio and the Four Freshmen completed ASMSU's Fall Term Pop Entertainment package. After a medley of slow soft ballads and an attempt at light patter by the Four Freshmen, "Ramsey and the boys" took over the crowd with their sophisticated jazz arrangements of popular songs as well as their rendition of their own compositions. With Ramsey Lewis controlling both the beat and the action from behind his Steinway, the trio won large applause and demands for several encores with their versions of "The In Crowd" and "Wade in the Water".

Preceding the Ramsey Lewis Trio were the Four Freshmen, who have their own distinct style of four-part harmony.

Winter Pop Entertainment Features 'Spoonful'

The 'Lovin' Spoonful', ASMSU'S pop entertainment for winter term, performed to a full house in the auditorium. Their versatility in music ranged from folk and country rock to the psychedelic sounds of today. The crowd was entertained by the 'Spoonful' as they sang some of their past hits, including "Do You Believe in Magic", "What a Day For a Daydream", and "Summer in the City." In spite of equipment trouble, the group was enthusiastically received and was called back to the stage by the audience.

The 'Lovin' Spoonful' perform "Nashville Cats."

Abigail Adams, Homecoming Queen

Miss Abigail Adams was chosen Homecoming Queen from a field of twenty semi-finalists after careful judging and interviews by Blue Key, men's honorary. Abby is a sophomore from Washington, D.C., a member of Alpha Phi sorority, and is majoring in interior design. Outstanding talent, poise and personal appearance were qualities which distinguished her as Homecoming Queen. After appearing at the MSU-OSU game, Abby reigned over the Homecoming Dance and spoke before alumni at their annual dinner.

Enthusiasm Keynotes Homecoming '67

Selection of a queen, float building, dancing, and of course the football game against Ohio State were all factors contributing to the enjoyment and enthusiasm of Homecoming Weekend. Finishing first in their respective divisions were the floats of Asher House, Delta Delta Delta and Theta Chi. Although the Spartans were defeated by the Buckeyes 21-7, the excitement of the weekend continued until the closing minutes of the Homecoming Dance.

Kathy Hwass, Miss MSU

Miss Kathy Hwass, Short Hills, N.J., junior was named Miss MSU after ten weeks of interviews, talent presentations and judging. Evening gown, swimsuit and talent competition singled out five finalists who were then interviewed again in the final phase of the Miss MSU Pageant. A French major, and a little sister of Theta Delta Chi, Kathy is social chairman of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and was the Zeta Beta Tau sweetheart for 1966-67. She was second runner-up in last years Miss MSU Pageant and also second runner-up for the 1967 Homecoming Queen. During her reign as Miss MSU, Kathy will participate in the Miss Michigan Pageant, a preliminary to the Miss America Pageant, and will make public appearances throughout the state.

MSU Is for Students, Not Numbers

Somewhere between an endless list of student numbers during registration week and the sound of a lonely hammer being wielded two minutes before the Water Carnival deadline lies Michigan State University.

The publicized campus-wide events are important, to be sure, but without individual involvement in these activities, they would have no meaning, no reason to continue. Although someone might choose a Miss MSU or stage a Junior 500, neither event would really happen if it wasn't accepted and supported by the students as individuals, not as members of some faceless crowd. Athletics are the prime example for this kind of "involvement". The team would play their games and the people would pay their money and sit in the stands and cheer, but the sport wouldn't be part of the university unless the fans were Michigan Staters first and fans second. What matters is not student numbers, but students.

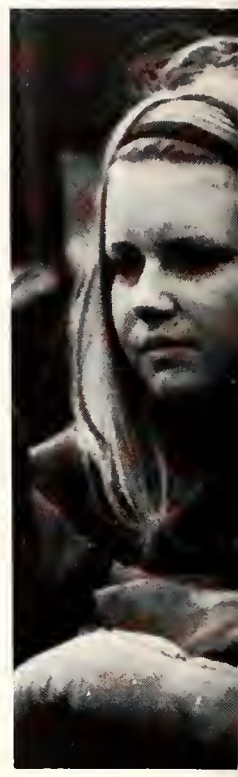
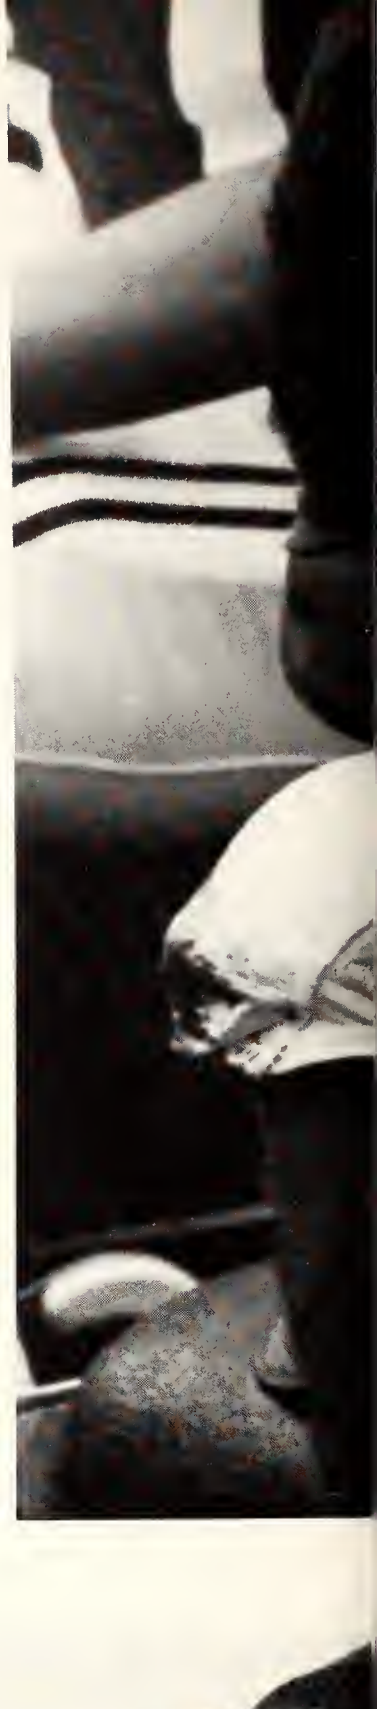
"The era of the super-athlete at Michigan State is over. We had a windfall of exceptional stars, great performers blessed with wonderful competitive attitudes. They made us into an outstanding team for two years. Now they're gone and we're back to playing with the boys again."

Duffy Daugherty



Cheers, Like Victories, Were Only Memories

Fast powerful linemen stopped many of the Spartans attempts to score.



A familiar scene—Coach Duffy Daugherty confers with quarterback Jimmy Raye.

Injuries were many in the 1967 season.

With the return to school in the fall of 1967, the Michigan State student's mind naturally turned to football. After two years of undefeated regular season play, MSU students had good reason to be proud of their team. And despite the loss of 13 first-string performers, including 5 All-Americans, there was talk of a third consecutive conference title and a Rose Bowl bid for the young Spartan team.

By season's end, indeed by its midpoint, this hope seemed ludicrous as fair-weather fans watched in shock while the 1966 Big Ten champions crumpled.

Serious trouble was indicated for the Spartans after their first game against Houston. The game was a 37 to 7 rout, as MSU was unable to plug the holes the hard-charging Cougar line opened for speedster Warren McVea.

Southern California, with a beginning legend in O. J. Simpson, next met the Spartans in a hard-fought battle at East Lansing. Still smarting from their first loss in 20 regular season games, a fired up Spartan squad held the Trojans to two touchdowns in the first half. Forging a 17—14 halftime lead, USC scored first of the second half and a penalty deprived MSU of a go-ahead touchdown late in the third quarter. Two more drives also bogged down deep in Trojan territory later in the game made the final score USC 21, MSU 17. The tone had been set for the rest of the season.

Kick-off: Hopes of "Maybe this time . . ."

Two impressive conference victories followed over Wisconsin and Michigan. The Michigan game was particularly enjoyed by MSU students as Jimmy Raye gleefully rebounded from a lackluster showing in the first two games and wreaked havoc with the Wolverine defense.

The Spartan performance sent the campus buzzing with talk of another conference title. But hopes quickly were snuffed out as MSU lost the next five games on their rugged schedule.

The Notre Dame game is notable simply in its contrast with the '66 season. The old axiom "what a difference a year makes" was never truer than in this game.

Just a year before, with players like Clinton Jones, Bubba Smith and Gene Washington sparking the lineup, MSU had matched Notre Dame's powerhouse display. This year six players were suspended before the game by Coach Duffy Daugherty in a disciplinary move, and four other regular players were lost because of injuries. Playing with such a lack of depth, MSU was no match for the superior Irish squad.

Indiana, on their way to a conference title and their first Rose Bowl trip had a rough time with the Spartans before putting them down, 14—13. The sophomore-studded Hoosier team had to rally from behind to defeat a team sagging in strength and spirit.

Michigan State closed out its worst season since 1917 with a victory over Northwestern on a cold and blustery day before 45,000 fans, one of the smallest crowds in recent years.

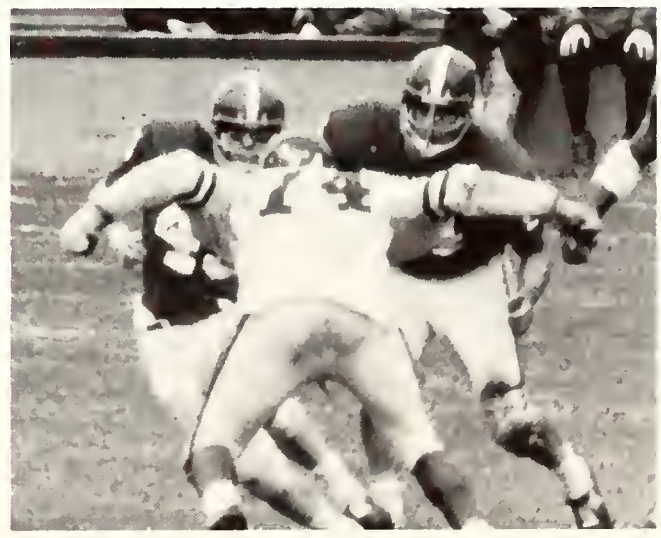
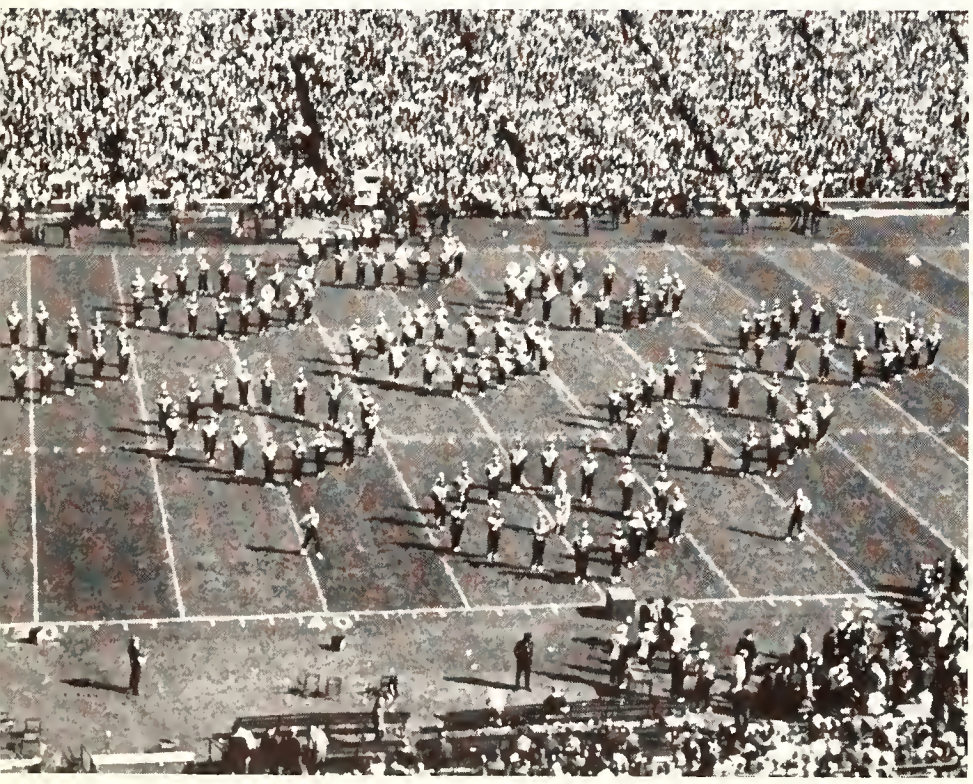
If nothing else, at least the 1967 football season proved that the Michigan State football team is indeed vulnerable. Everyone suspected that it was, but after two years, we began to hope that it could go on. It couldn't. The bubble burst, the party's over, the super-athlete is gone, at least for awhile.



Sometimes the hardest part of performing before 76,000 people is waiting through a cold first half before the half-time show dispels the chill.

The "Patterns of Motion" approach to marching formations pioneered by Mr. Moffit results in an almost kaleidoscopic effect as formations shift into other patterns with a minimum of confusion.



"Patterns of Motion" Spell Band's Success

A sharp blast on a silver whistle, a muted ruffle of drumbeats which quickly grows into a sustained thunder, an impression of synchronized speed as 176 men race out onto the field—this is the spectators' introduction to the MSU Marching Band. But the band is not made in a single performance before 76,000 fans on a Saturday afternoon. The halftime show in October began in August when the band met for six-hour practices, six days a week for six solid weeks of work. The effort continued into the term with practices held in rain, snow or "merely" cold that froze the bandsmen's fingers to their instruments. The crowd doesn't know about that part of the band. They see only the precision of fourman squads and the patterns which they form. They hear only the practiced cadence of the drums and a sharp blast on a silver whistle.

One of the distinetive features of the marching band is their faultless footwork, learned through hours of painstaking practice.

BASKETBALL

Expectations for a winning season were high as head coach John Benington led his team out onto the floor to begin a new basketball season. In two years Benington had transformed a lack-luster team into a Big Ten champion squad, and predictions for the season ranged from cautious optimism to wild fantasy.

It soon became apparent, however, that this was not the year, as the Spartan efforts ran in spurts of on-again off-again effectiveness. Early season games, oddly enough, were some of the best the cagers played. But as the schedule wore on, Big Ten opponents made it painfully clear that something was lacking in the Spartan attack. That "something" was consistency. There were times when Michigan State displayed excellent ball control. At other times, as in the Minnesota game late in the season, ball handling was ineffectual. Defense, one of the stronger assets of last year's team suffered also. Shooting percentages for the '68 squad were considerable lower than for the previous year. These problems are common ones for a team made up of new personnel, but Coach Benington had lost only two of last year's starters through graduation.

This season, as in the last, Coach Benington went through a series of player-juggling, freely substituting when any one player faltered. The usual starting line-up saw Lee Lafayette, Captain John Bailey, Bernie Copeland, Harrison Stepter and Steve Rymal in action, but this was an arbitary and easily-changed group. Of the five, Bailey and Rymal will be lost through graduation.

In evaluating individual performances over the season, Benington singled out Bailey, Rymal and junior forward Bob Gale as exceptional. Gale was a steady performer before sustaining an injury late in the season. Rymal and Bailey have both starred for the Spartans for three years.

Benington is counting on a better season next year, and will probably get one. If the Spartans have a star it is Lee Lafayette, the team's high scorer, who will return for his senior season. Also returning will be Stepter and Copeland. These three will form the nucleus, the other two slots are up for grabs.

Soccer

Playing soccer at MSU can be a lonely experience. Overshadowed by football, the Spartan kickers have traditionally played to relatively small crowds, despite a team that has consistently ranked as one of the best in the nation. The 1967 season, however, differed markedly from this sterotype. A disastrous football season with an accompanying slack in attendance found many more students rallying in response to an undefeated team as the Spartans tied with St. Louis for the national championship.

The work of Coach Gene Kenny demands recognition. In eleven years as head coach, he has compiled a fantastic record of 100—10—9, one of the most impressive figures for any sport in the Big Ten.

A Familiar Question at MSU: Who Is No. 1?

Kenny's kickers breezed through the regular season again, with the only real excitement being a 1—1 tie against St. Louis, the Spartan's traditional rival. The real test of the season proved to be a disappointment for both teams involved as MSU met St. Louis on a rainy Saturday for the national championship game at St. Louis. The game was stopped with two minutes left in the first period because of "unplayable field conditions". It was declared a 0—0 tie and the Spartans shared the crown with the Billikens.

Standouts for the '67 season were Peter Hens, Ernie Tuchscherer, Trevor Harris and Guy Busch, all All-Americans. Of the four, Harris and Tuchscherer will return next year. Besides Harris and Tuchscherer, Coach Kenny is looking for an improved performance next year from All-American forward Tony Keyes and goalie Kevin O'Connell. An atmosphere of determined optimism pervades Kenny's office: the coach doesn't want to share the '68 title with any team, especially St. Louis.

A disappointed but determined Fran Dittrich is looking for better things next year after a season he would rather forget. The Spartan cross country coach is still smarting from the worst showing any of his teams have ever made: 8th in the conference and 1—4 for the season. In 17 previous years the MSU harriers had finished no lower than 2nd in the Big Ten. The reason for this year s miserable record is obvious. Dittrich lost three of the most outstanding runners he has ever coached through graduation last year, including All American captain Dick Sharkey, George Balthrop and Eric Zemper. This left Dittrich with an all sophomore and junior squad. Captain Dean Rosenberg, a junior, was the sparkplug of the team, and junior Roger Merchant led the squad in points scored, but competition this year was rugged. The young team just managed to edge Eastern Michigan, 29—26 for its only win. Merchant promises to be the most exciting runner on the Spartan squad next year. He placed 11th in the conference meet and 27th in the IC4A meet against 250 competitors. Coach Dittrich leans heavily on Merchant to add strength to next year's team and with virtually all of the squad returning, expects a much better year.

Up, up and away.

The Spartan indoor track season was both a surprise and a disappointment to thinclad fans this year. Surprising because few people expected the team to do well after losing stars like Gene Washington, Das Campbell, Clinton Jones or Dick Sharkey. Disappointing because after a strong showing in preliminary meets, the team was only able to nail fourth place in Big Ten competition. Along the way, however, Michigan State's performance turned quite a few heads. In the first meet of the season, the Western Michigan relays, pole vaulter Roland Carter set a new Spartan indoor record with a leap of 16 feet. At the Michigan Federation meets, in Ann Arbor, Carter tied that mark while the sprint medley team, paced by sophomore Bill Wehrwein, broke meet, fieldhouse and MSU records with a time of 3:27:6. The thinclads also broke the Yost Fieldhouse record in the mile relay with a time of 3:18:4.

Charley Pollard successfully defended his hold on the 70-yard high hurdles in the MSU relays, and the Spartan shuttle hurdlerelay team tied the American record in a losing effort against Western Michigan. After losing to Ohio State, the thinclads soundly defeated Purdue, 77—57. In the Ohio State meet, Carter bested his old record with a vault of 16 1/2 feet.

Coach Fran Dittrich had high hope for several Spartan victories in the Big Ten Meet, but the only championship the team could capture was the mile relay with a time of 3:14:4.

GYMNASTICS

In a relatively poor sports year at MSU, it's nice to have one athletic team that consistently places in the upper division of the Big Ten.

Coached by Veteran George Syzpula, the gymnastics team members combine strength and co-ordination to make difficult exercises look simple to the uninitiated. Spartan senior Dave Thor, generally acknowledged as one of the best gymnasts in the country, capped a fine season by becoming the third man ever to win three-straight all-around gymnastics titles. Thor is a "very good possibility" for the 1968 US Olympic team, according to his coach. Toby Towson, another Spartan stand-out, successfully defended his floor exercise crown in the Big Ten Gymnastics meet held in Jenison.

Michigan State won the meet, and after a 5—2 regular season record tied with Michigan and Iowa for the Big Ten Championship. It was an upset that was "absolutely incredible" according to Coach Syzpula. As a result, MSU qualified half the team for the national championships this year. Syzpula predicted a strong Spartan showing, saying, "We are now the yardstick for the Big Ten and we intend to compete accordingly."

WRESTLING

For the third consecutive year Coach Grady Peninger's wrestlers walked away with the Big Ten crown. The grapplers began the year winning their first two out of three meets, and from then on lost only to powerful Oklahoma. Breaking the jinx, State edged Michigan, 17—14, the first time since 1962, as Spartan heavyweight Jeff Smith, ending the season with a 19—1 record and a Big Ten Heavyweight Champion title, lost only to Arizona State's defending NCAA champion Curley Culp. Mike Bradley and Dale Anderson, also won honors at the Big Ten meet, both individual champions. The wrestling team, with the exception of the gymnastics, was the only team to put MSU on the 1967-68 Big Ten Champion board.

FENCING

With one letterman, seven non-lettermen and seven sophomores heading up the 1968 fencing team, Coach Charles Schmitter designated this year as a rebuilding year. And that it was, as the bladesmen finished the season with a 6—8 record, and fifth in the Big Ten. However, some promising performances were given by two sophomores, Bobby Tyler (epee) and Glenn Williams (foil). Together with Don Stachell and Gary Norcutt, Williams helped to make the foil aggregation MSU's most potent weapon. Captain Charles Baer continued to be coach Schmitter's hottest fencer as he steadily improved through the season with a 36—6 record. As last year, epee was the team's biggest weakness, but hopes ride high with sophomore Bobby Tyler to remedy this.

HOCKEY

The 1967-68 hockey team was unable to shake off the misfortune that has remained with them since they won the national championship in 1966. Plagued with graduation and eligibility difficulties, Amo Bessone's icemen showed little of the power that took them to the WCHA title two years ago.

One of the necessities for an effective team effort in hockey is a capable goalie. The Spartans had one of the best in Gaye Cooley, a native of North Bay, Ontario. But Cooley accepted a contract to try out for the New York Rangers of the NHL. That left Coach Bessone with two sophomore goalies to mind the nets.

Besides Cooley, nine other veteran MSU hockey players are off the roster this year. The Spartans lost three outstanding scorers in Sandy McAndrew, Doug Volmer and Mike Jacobson. Tom Mikkola, a standout performer and the team's top scorer last year was eligible for only four league games this year. The icers opened the season surprisingly well, with victories over St. Lawrence and a tie with Clarkson. Mikkola broke a twelve-year scoring record in addition to his own career assists record. After this, however, things went from bad to worse, and at one time the Spartans were laboring under an 8-game losing streak. The icers ended up in sixth place, their lowest finish in years.

SWIMMING

Third place finishes are beginning to be a habit with the Spartan swimming team, a habit that Coach Charles McCaffree would like to see broken. For the fourth year in a row MSU finished in the third slot for Big Ten competition, combining eight victories in dual meets with losses to Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin. The Wisconsin loss was the first to that school in 30 years.

The tankers began the season as they ended it: finishing third behind Indiana and Michigan in the first meet of the season, the Big Ten relays. This year, the team had the services of ten lettermen, five of them all-Americans, but lost seven lettermen through graduations. "Generally, the team performed very well," said McCaffree, "but when you are competing against teams like Indiana, all you can do is try as hard as you can." In the Big Ten relays, Indiana won all events with 152 points. Freestyler-backstroker Pete Williams was again a consistent performer. This year he added a new UM pool record in the 200-yard individual medley to his string of honors reaching back three years. Williams, who graduates this year, is one of the finest swimmers in MSU history. A pleasant surprise for coach McCaffree was the performance of sophomore Bruce Richards, who teamed up with Greg Brown and Rolf Groseth in relay events during the season. Richards took important places all season and in the Big Ten championship meet set a new MSU varsity record for the 200 breast stroke of 2:15:51. Coach McCaffree emphasizes the strength of the seven juniors returning next year. Amidst guarded predictions for a "strong team" next year, McCaffree waits and prepares for the national championships.

BASEBALL

Faced with the loss of 17 ballplayers, Coach Danny Litwiler had anticipated a building year for the Spartan batsmen in 1967. Following their coach's expectations, the Spartans laid the groundwork for a fine team. Michigan State finished 6th in the Big Ten competition with an 8—10 record, while the overall record was a not too impressive 23—24—1 mark, Coach Litwiler feels however, that his players gained much poise and self-assurance through the course of the '67 season despite the disappointing outcome.

Sorely missed this year will be the services of third baseman Bill Peterson, outfielder John Walters and pitchers Dick Kenny and Bob Steckley. Steckley, the team sparkplug, led the team in batting at a .325 pace and was named to the Big Ten and NCAA District All Star Teams.

Experience will be the key this year as at least fourteen letterwinners are back. Three outstanding pitchers return. Mickey Knight, Zana Easton and Mel Behney compiled a record of 12 wins and 6 losses and finished 1—2—3 respectively in E.R.A. on the team.

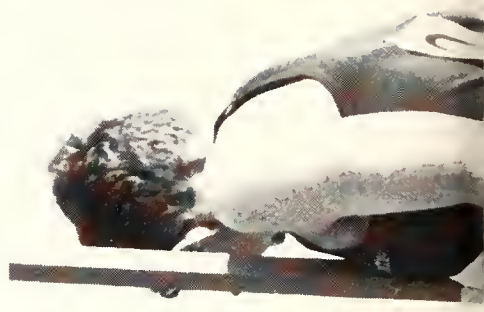
TRACK



The old adage, "a game of inches" has found a berth over the heads of the Michigan State track squad, for in track, inches mean time, and time means the difference between first and second place. In what would be considered by most standards a highly successful season, Coach Fran Dittrich was disappointed by second place finishes in both the Big Ten and Central Collegiate meets. Well stocked with record-breaking performers, States cindermen lacked the ability to win that one point necessary to push them into first place.

The season record shows that the Spartans finished second in four dual meets by a combined total of five points. In Big Ten and Central Collegiate competition, State was nosed out both times by the University of Iowa by 1/2 and 3/4 of a point. Nevertheless, several record-setting performances studded the '67 season. For an unprecedented second straight year, Bob Steele captured the NCAA Championship in the 440 hurdles while establishing a new Big Ten record of 50.1 seconds in that event. Also highlighting the season were hurdler Gene Washington, middle distance runner John Spain, two-miler Dick Sharkey, high jumper Mike Bowers and vaulter Roland Carter, all record-breakers in their special events.

The '68 season looks anything but rosy for the Spartan cindermen. With the loss of their top three point getters, Washington, Steele and Sharkey, several positions must be filled in order to be in contention.

TENNIS

The 1967 tennis team met and surpassed the highest expectations of Coach Stan Drobac with a dual match record of 11—0 and the first MSU Big Ten tennis title since 1951. "Without a doubt, the finest team I have ever coached," said Drobac.

The netters battled the University of Michigan to the wire, and at the end of the regular season were on the short end of a 71—70 point war with the Wolverines. A "fantastic" performance by MSU in the conference tournament at Ann Arbor turned the tide as the team racked up 64 1/2 points to take the crown with 134 1/2 points.

Each of the three MSU doubles teams won the 1967 Big Ten Championships in their respective classes. Individually, John Good was Big Ten Champion at No. 4 singles, while Jim Phillips, a 1967 graduate, made off with the No. 6 spot. Team captain Vic Dhooge combined with Phillips to nab the No. 3 doubles championship. No. 1 doubles honors went to Chuck Brainard and Richard Monan, and Mickey Szilagyi teamed with John Good to take the No. 2 spot and complete the sweep.

Prospects for the 1968 season look bright, with lettermen Brainard, Monan, Szilagyi, Good and Schafer returning. Coach Drobac says that he will be "very happy" with a repeat of last year's performance.

GOLF

The 1967 golf team continued to move upward under the able coaching of Bruce Fossum. They placed sixth in the nation and third in the Big Ten last year, the highest national ranking of any MSU links team in history.

Sparkplugs of the Spartan attack were co-captains Sandy McAndrew and Troy Campbell, who combined for a 79.3 18-hole average. Steve Benson had the lowest average for the season with 77.8. The 1968 team is captained by Benson and fellow senior John Baily, who plays guard on the Spartan varsity basketball squad. Coach Fossum was highly optimistic about the season and called the '68 squad "the best we've had here yet."

CLUB SPORTS

Within the university there always exists groups of students sharing a common interest in athletic activities outside the intramural and varsity sports. Whether it is karate or skiing, cycling or crew, the need to express oneself and to improve through constructive criticism has manifested itself through the 17 club sports at MSU. It could be a noisy meeting planning the next outing excursion, a briefing on an intricate judo hold, or the total abandonment one feels as he glides through the air. Whatever it is, it becomes the source of enjoyment and competition to the student who longs to continue his athletic hobbies amidst the tedium of books. Club sports provide the opportunity to explore new interests, an opportunity that might not be available before or after college. And above all, they offer a special kind of fellowship that accompanies any enthusiastic participation.

Men's Intramurals

An Outlet for Everyone.

Over 200 men entered the annual All-University Turkey Trot.

In any large university, the keen competition for success is a strong motivating force, often causing students to push hard in attempting to reach lofty goals. Sometimes they push too hard, and failure brings feeling of anxiety and depression. At times like these, one feels the need to run, to jump, to win.

For men, intramurals provided an outlet for this need. From the first thud of the pigskin to the last crack of the ball bat, intramurals at Michigan State University are a haven from the tedium that lurks in the books.

Intramural sports: friendly competition between neighbors.

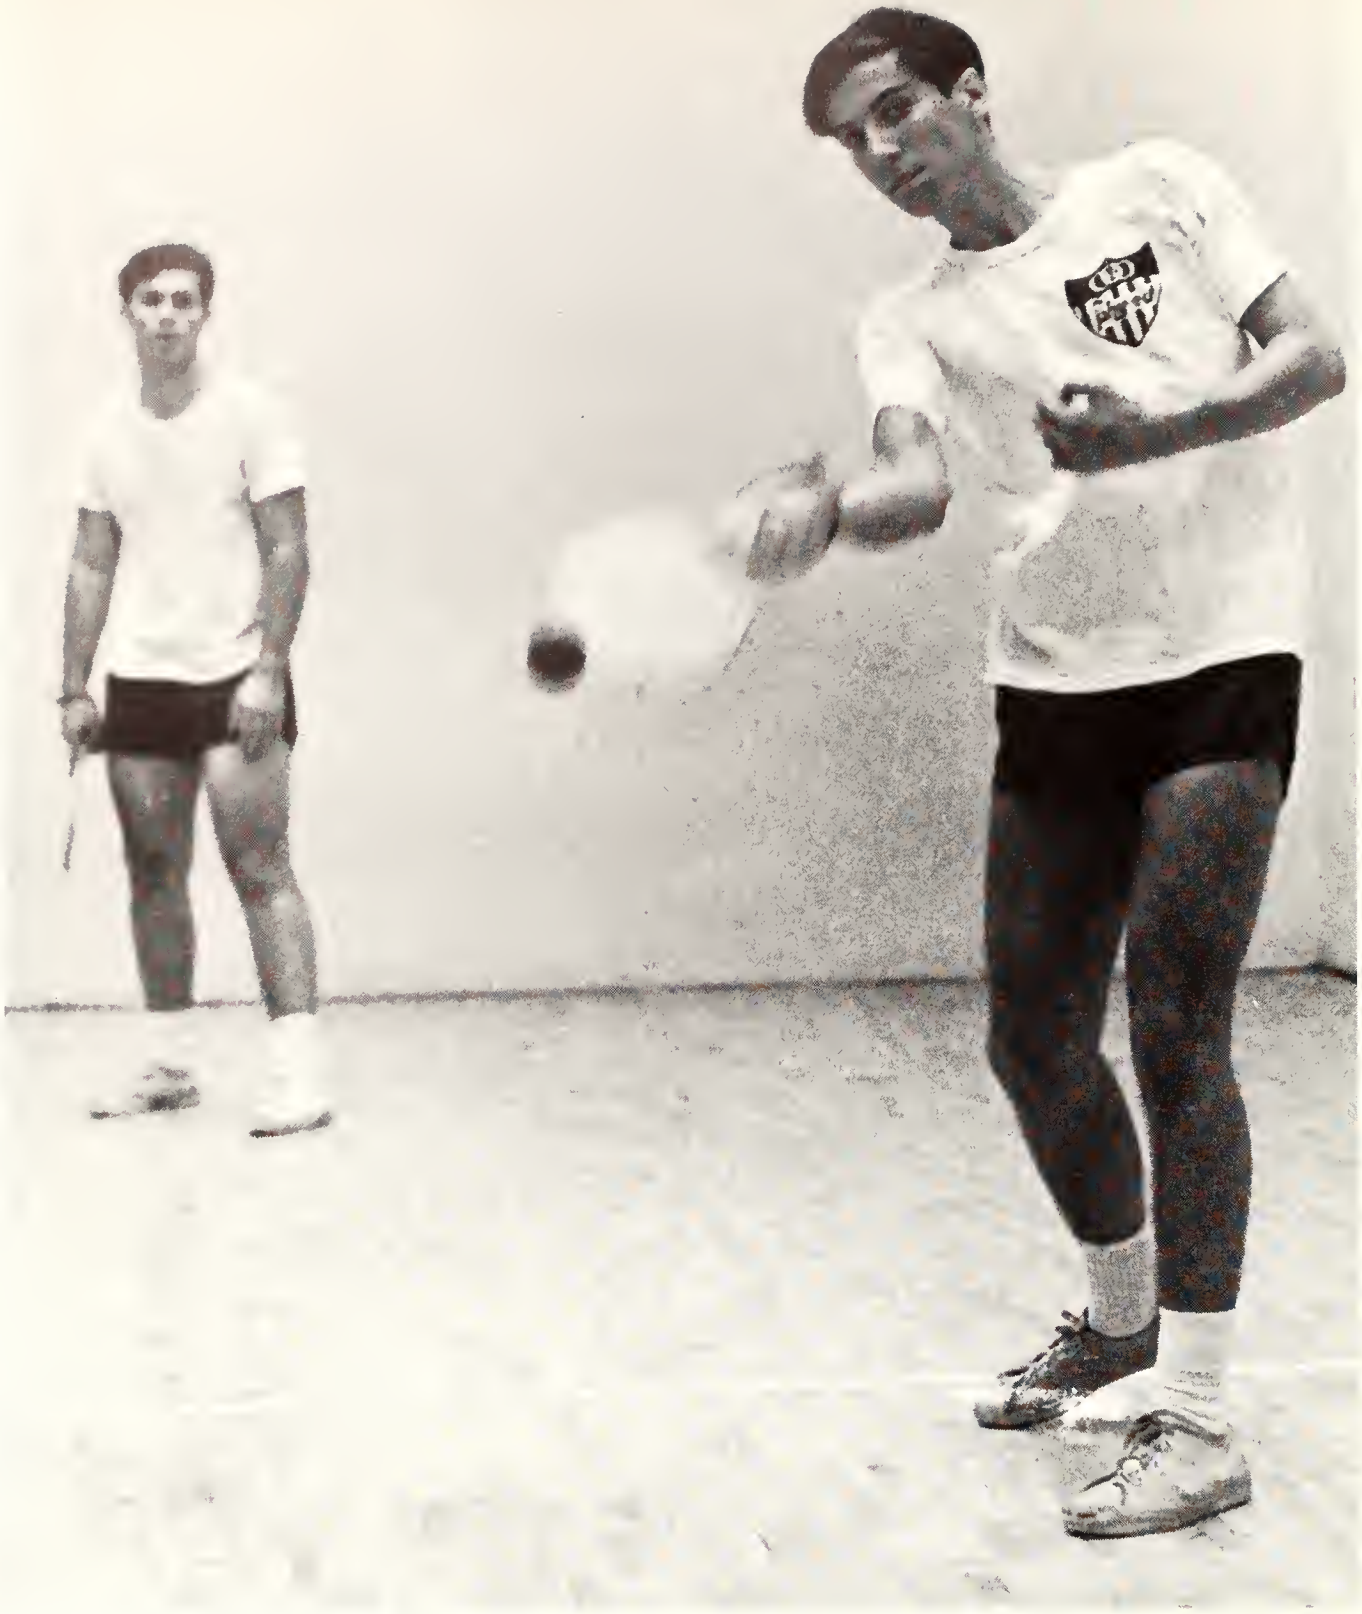
IM wrestling: A class for every amateur.

For men, Intramurals provides the outlet for this need. From the first thud of the pigskin to the last smack of the ball bat, intramurals at Michigan State mean a haven from the tedium that waits in the dormitory or the house.

For most men, intramural sports begin fall term. The sport then is football, but football somewhat different from the conventional game. For one thing, you can pass beyond the line of scrimmage, to anyone. IM football is confusing to watch, but a delight to play. Although football is the major intramural sport during fall term, diversity is the name of the the game, with badminton, wrestling, bowling, soccer, paddleball handball, volleyball and the sports skills contests all offering competition, and for the lucky few, trophies.

A successful pass to a teammate could mean an IM championship.



Handball: Competition, skill and a good work-out.

Basketball and Handball take precedence during the winter season.

Time out to look for a contaet lense.

Basketball takes over as the major winter sport winter term, with competition divided into residence hall, fraternity and independence leagues. The three champions play off for all-University honors in post season contests.

The huge Intramural building is the center of campus athletics winter term when the snow and cold eliminate most outdoor activity. Here the intramural theme of "sports for all" comes alive. In the Men's IM building there are seven basketball courts, eight tennis courts, 12 volleyball courts, 26 badminton courts, 12 handball courts and four squash courts. In addition, there are rooms for wrestling and tumbling, fencing and archery, weightlifting and fitness. Rounding out the facilities is the 121-foot-long-indoor pool. Handball and basketball are the most popular IM sports during winter term, as anyone who has ever tried to reserve a court can testify.

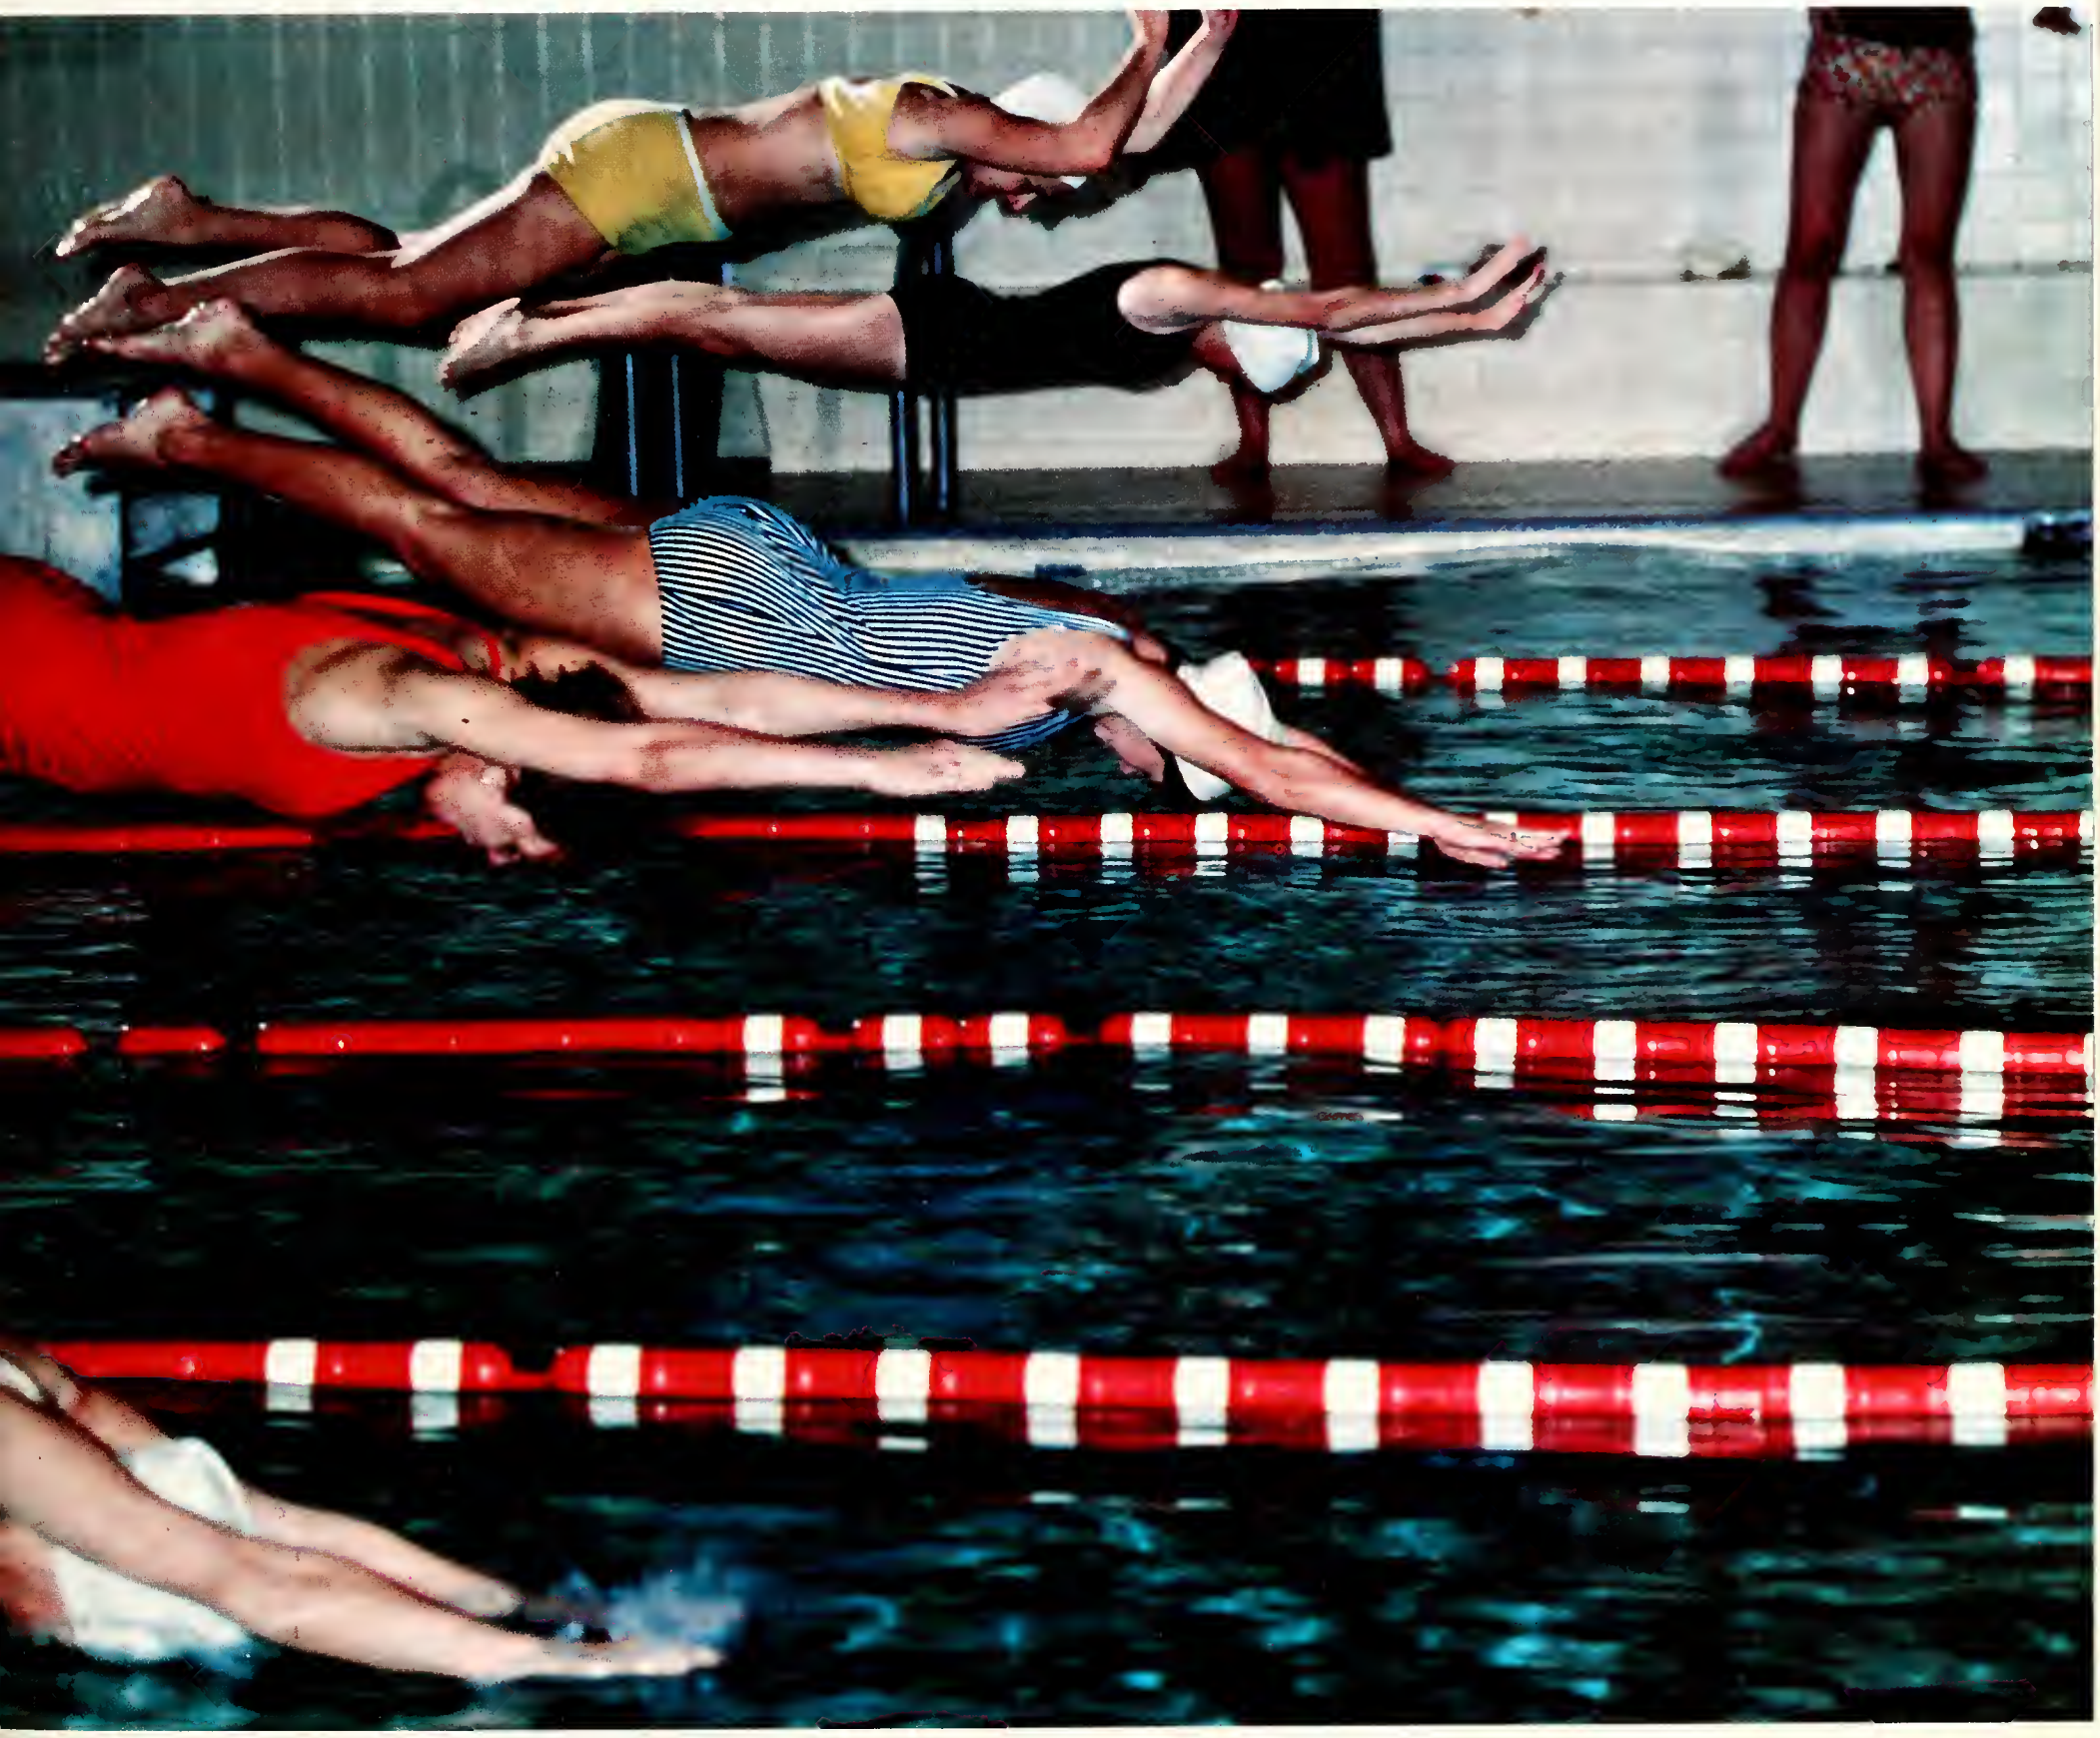
Fencing adds a medieval touch to the I.M. sporting agenda.

Spring comes . . . finally, and what does a young man's fancy turn to? Well, besides that: baseball. For men in organized IM it is softball played hard. Softball's importance is accentuated because, along with track and tennis, it offers the last chance to gain points toward the coveted all-sports trophy.

Last year Sigma Chi carried off the marbles for the second consecutive year in the Fraternity division. Akers nabbed the residence hall spot and a well organized Impressions took independent team honors. Hedrick House won the independent individuals slot.

As indicated by the three league classifications of fraternity, residence hall and independent, men's intramurals at Michigan State University do represent achievement of the goal set by intramural director Frank Beeman: "Sports for all."

WOMEN'S INTRAMURALS



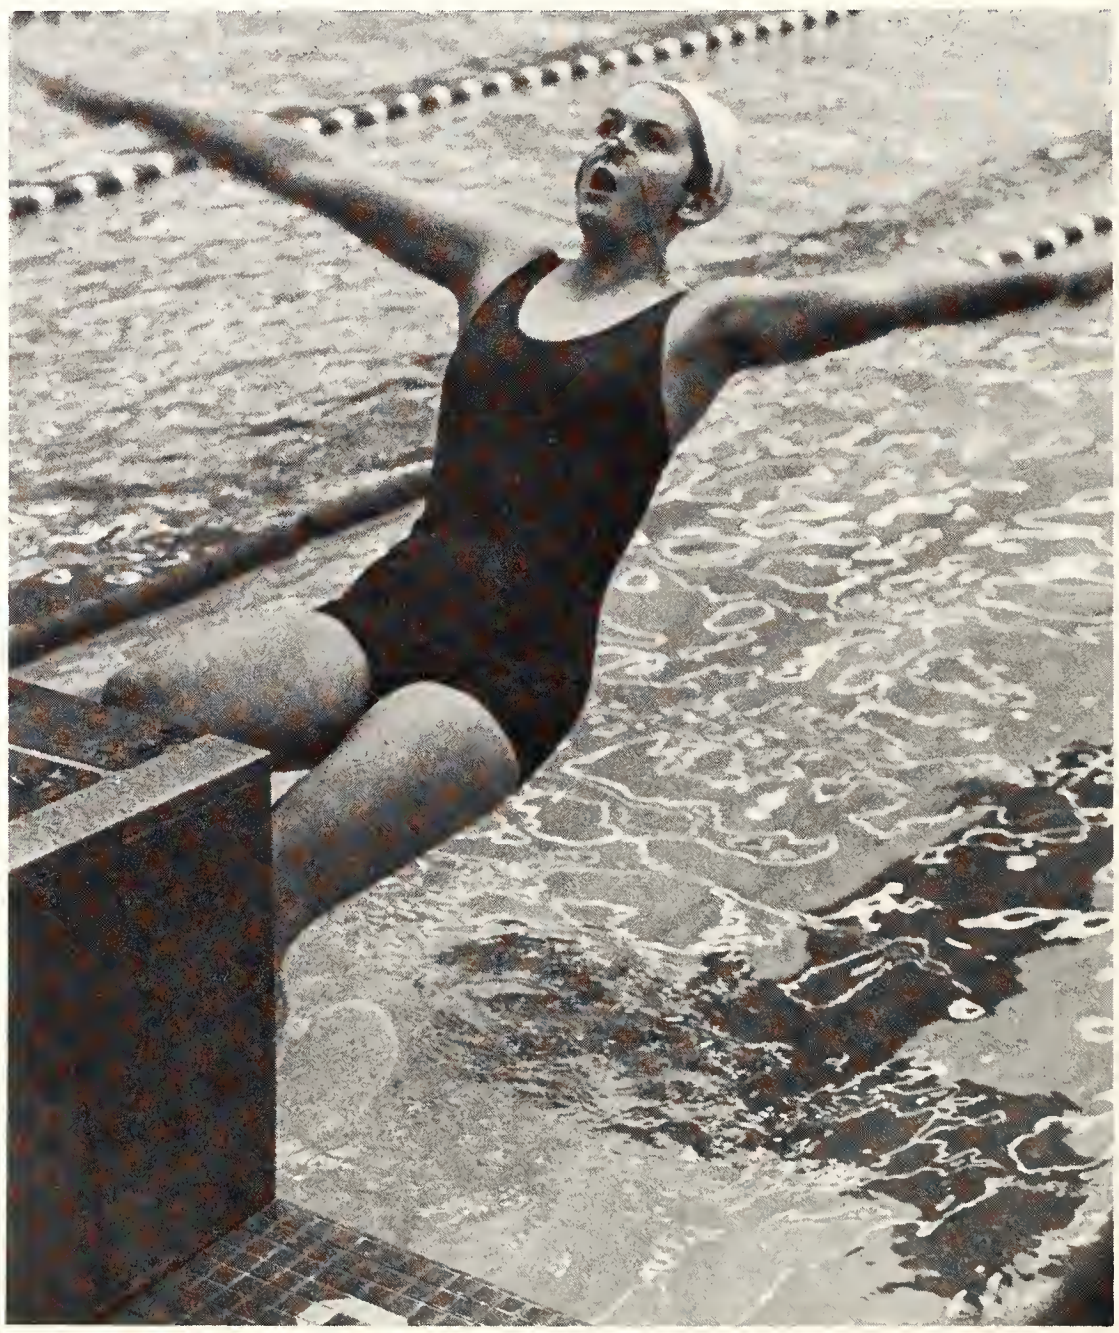
Companionship, not competition, is the theme for Women's intramurals at MSU. Although the program offers competitive events in almost every sport, the fun of participating in athletics is emphasized.

Very few girls imagine themselves as star athletes. The philosophy of the Women's Intramurals Program mirrors this view. "We have purposely arranged our department with the needs of today's college girl in mind," says Miss Judith Hall, Women's IM co-director, "and we encourage coeds to drop in and visit any time."

Those that do, return often, for the women's athletic facilities at Michigan State rate with the best. Spartan coeds have their choice of two swimming pools, two gymnasiums, an exercise room, a steam room, a tastefully decorated lounge and other supplementary equipment to round out a fine program.

An interesting aspect of women's intramurals is that it is by no means limited to women. Any male student or faculty member may use the facilities at designated times. Male students must be accompanied by a coed; faculty members may come alone. Men are permitted to use either of the two pools, gymnasiums, or exercise rooms.

The women's intramural philosophy of de-emphasizing competition manifests itself in many ways. Even in regularly scheduled contests there is no elimination of losers. Each team is guaranteed a pre-determined number of games regardless of the number of games it wins or loses. In fact, the vast majority of participation in the IM programs is on a drop-in basis. Realizing this, the staff has established an extensive assortment of equipment available at any time.



IM bowling: a combination of fun with fitness.

IM basketball: one of the highlights of the winter season.

The women's intramurals facilitates coeducational recreation.

An IM participant executes perfect form in a back cutaway.

Balance and concentration: the essence of perfection for this co-ed.

The Women's Intramural Program may well be strengthened this year by a rule which will allow girls participating in varsity sports to compete in intramurals. Girls with superior athletic ability have been frustrated because as varsity contenders they could not participate in IM-sponsored events. Since varsity sports for the girls make up such a minor part of the athletic budget, however, the intramural staff has decided to allow the more talented varsity girls to sharpen their skills by participation in the IM programs. However, the spirit of women's intramurals remains unchanged: Femininity through fitness.

WILLIAMS HALL

LIFE

University Villa Apartments.

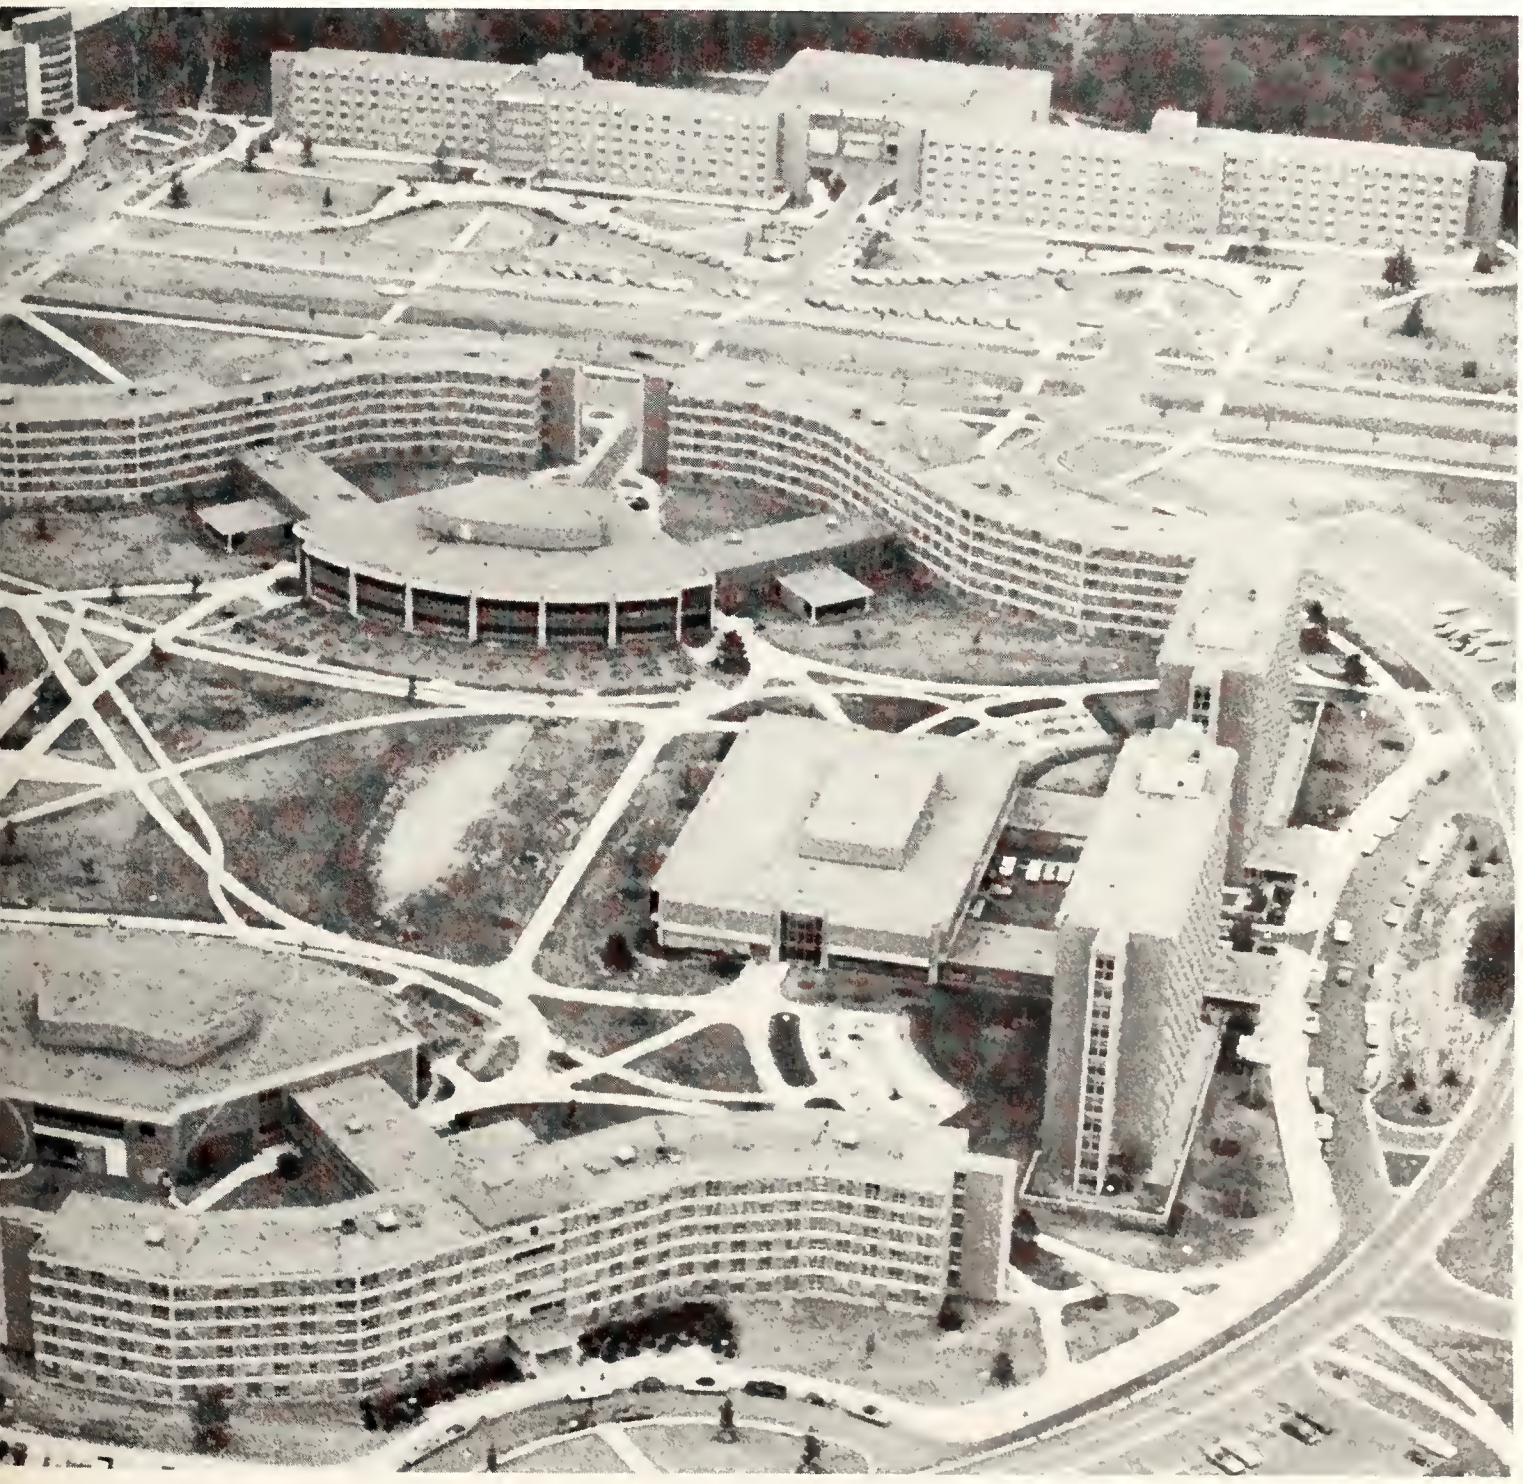
Married Housing: University Village

Living Units: Diverse in Character but Unified in Purpose

Student residences are many and diverse. Each is a different combination of brick, glass, wood and mortar, in dozens of sizes, shapes and styles. They may appear cozy, luxurious, or starkly institutional. They are located in quiet residential neighborhoods, in apartment complexes, or on the fringes of the campus. But, whatever the location, the size, or the type, student residences have this in common: for at least nine months every year, they are homes.

Holden Hall

East Complex: Fee, Hubbard, Akers, Holmes and McDonel Halls.



Before the students come to campus, their homes are barren and isolated. No matter how carefully designed, how skillfully landscaped, they look bleak and sterile. They stand aloof, without character, without personality, without life—empty.

But, when a new term begins, student residences come alive. Parking lots fill, lobbies bustle, signs appear in windows. Halls echo with music, laughter, and occasional pleas for silence. Dining rooms hear the clatter of knives and forks; refrigerators get a new supply of basic essentials, telephones ring, lights burn till well into the night. The students have returned. For ten more weeks, they are home.

Education Underlies Everyday Living in the MSU Community

No matter where he lives, getting up for an eight o'clock is a trying experience for any student. Reasons for cutting the class run through a student's mind even before he leaves his warm bed. The urge to fall back into bed becomes even greater when he looks out at the latest version of Michigan's unpredictable weather. A warm breakfast prepares him for a long day of notes, tests, lectures and discussions. Between classes, he may accomplish errands along Grand River or meet with friends in the grill for coffee and conversation. In the evening, studying can be a problem, with blaring radios down the hall or an unanswered phone constantly ringing. Time must also be found for such chores as washing, ironing, cleaning the room and mending clothes—all a part of everyday living at Michigan State.

Haireuts by friends may not be professional, but they save the busy student time and money.

Dinner with friends is a relaxing end to a busy day.

Early morning shaves make growing a beard an attraetive idea to many men.

A game of cards or the Wall Street Journal—the form of relaxation varies with the individual.

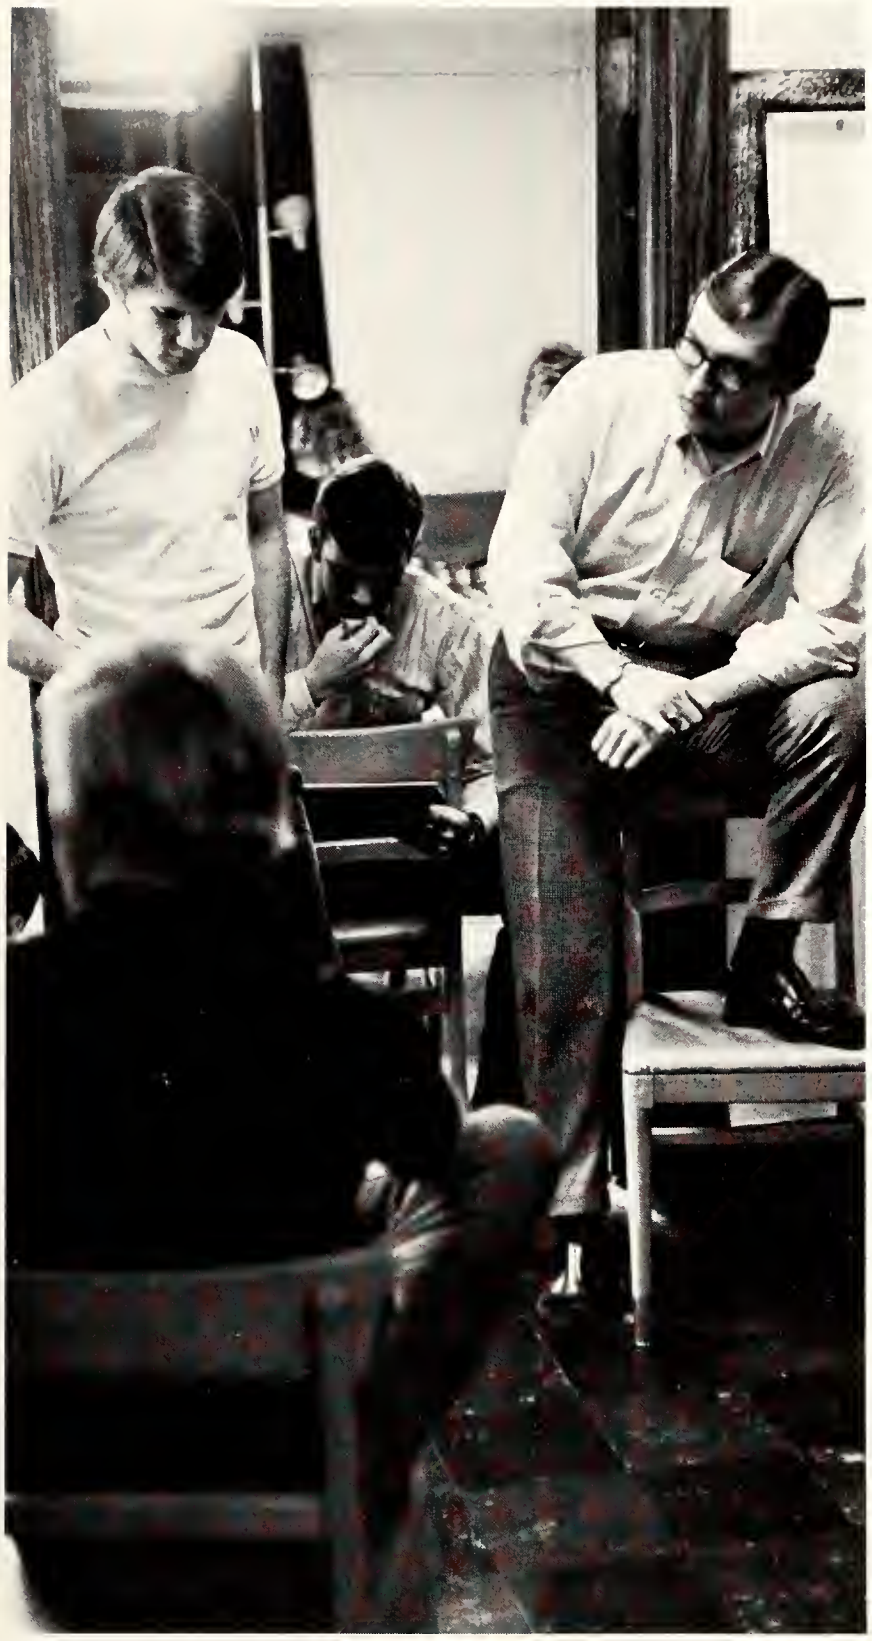
There comes a certain time of the day when a relaxed atmosphere pervades all student residences. Out comes the deck of cards or a guitar for an informal hootenanny. It's a time to play a loud record while someone attempts the latest dance step or just to shout at the top of your lungs without the fear of someone yelling "quiet hours!" Late afternoon naps try to make up for the hours lost the night before studying. Girlish chatter—"Do you know who's in my Humanities class?"—and bull sessions on the war in Vietnam, the football team, or the opposite sex relax the individual, give him an opportunity to state his opinions, and provide a chance to catch up on the latest news.



A bull session before dinner might even take place in the hall.

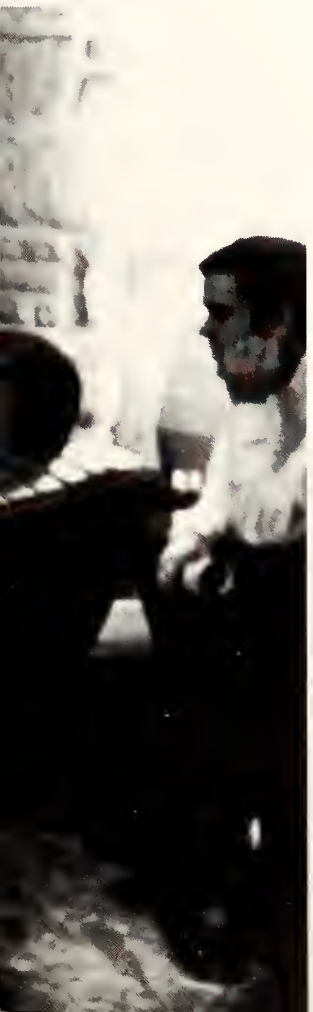
For some apartment dwellers, crowded parties are a regular weekend happening.



TGIF has a special meaning for MSU students who find it necessary to unwind after studying the entire week. Mixers, apartment parties, ASMSU pop entertainment, the movies, and athletic events make the weekends eagerly anticipated by all. Sometimes just the thought of being able to sleep late on the weekend can make the long week of studying worthwhile. For those who like live entertainment, there are such hangouts as the newly-opened Mickey's Hideaway or the Coral Gables where MSU students can always be found. At the dorm or apartment, a game of cards, a quiet talk or watching television with a date is a pleasant way to spend an evening. With so much happening on the weekends, the most common complaint from parents is "Aren't you ever coming home?"

Students take time, usually late at night, to wash clothes for the next day.

Household Tasks Make Studies Wait

The hectic routine of college life demands unconventional approaches to the mundane tasks of daily living. At some time in their college careers, all students find themselves washing clothes at three A.M., warming a frozen pizza for dinner or wearing a sweater to hide an unironed shirt. While these methods may not be the ideal of household efficiency, they sometimes become a necessity for the busy student.

The disadvantage of good home cooking is the mess left after the meal.

Cooperation is the keynote to sueeessful meal planning.

No student can escape the weekly jobs of washing and ironing clothes and cleaning up the room, but students living in apartments or co-ops learn that they have added, unsuspected responsibilities. Finding out that there isn't any food in the refrigerator at dinnertime because no one went shopping last week or having the telephone go dead because of an unpaid phone bill can start memories of last year's irresponsibility.

Independence and all the comforts and responsibilities of home.

Group Living Leads to Organization and Activities

In almost any type of residence, the emphasis is on group living. Constant interaction between individuals facilitates the development of organized group activities. Systems of government are formed, ranging from the very structured legislative, executive and judicial set-up of residence halls to the less formal elections of officers in Greek houses and co-ops. Meetings too, are a common feature of group life. Hall meetings, fraternity meetings or committees take time, but also provide a means of expression for individual concerns and ideas. Out of meetings come plans—for parties, educational events, or improvements in the house or hall—plans which provide an outlet for the skills and energy of residents.

Living unit activities require many kinds of preparation—even carving pumpkins for decoration.

Fall Events Generate Enthusiasm in Living Units

Each autumn, students have hardly settled into the routine of campus life when they are faced with plans for two important fall term events. For weeks in advance of Homecoming, students plan and build elaborate displays, stuffing chicken wire and painting backdrops for the glory of their respective living units. For one exciting Saturday, these colorful expressions of greeting to Alumni decorate the campus and the East Lansing area, only to be torn down the next day, leaving just a few stray Kleenex as reminders. The MSU version of the Gold Cup Races, the Shaw Hall Canoe Race, takes place on the beautiful Red Cedar River later in the term. Overturned canoes and wet participants are common sights at this event, in which representatives from living units struggle to bring victory to their group.

Dialogue '67: Student-Planned Living-Learning

An informal discussion late one night in Holmes Hall furnished the impetus for Dialogue '67, one of the most ambitious residence hall programs ever. Organized completely by Holmes residents, the event filled nine days fall term with four-man panel discussions, small group talks, and afternoon seminars, all aimed at providing a maximum of interaction between students and a large number of prominent campus and Lansing area personalities. Beginning with the Keynote Banquet on Friday evening featuring an address by Nobel Prize-winning physicist William Shockley of Stanford University. Dialogue Week drew campus-wide attention through the following Thursday when it was concluded with a speech by Leroy Augenstein, professor of Biophysics and member of the State Board of Education. The great success of the project has generated such enthusiasm among Holmes residents that plans for Dialogue '68 began immediately after this year's program closed.

Professors George A. Borgstrom, Lester F. Wolterink, Albert P. Linnell and Thomas H. Osgood discuss the value of space exploration in an evening Dialogue session.

John Taylor, professor of philosophy, continues to present his viewpoint informally after the close of a panel discussion.

Over 300 persons attended the opening banquet held in Holmes Hall cafeteria.

The Keynote Speaker, Nobel Prize Winner William Shockley.

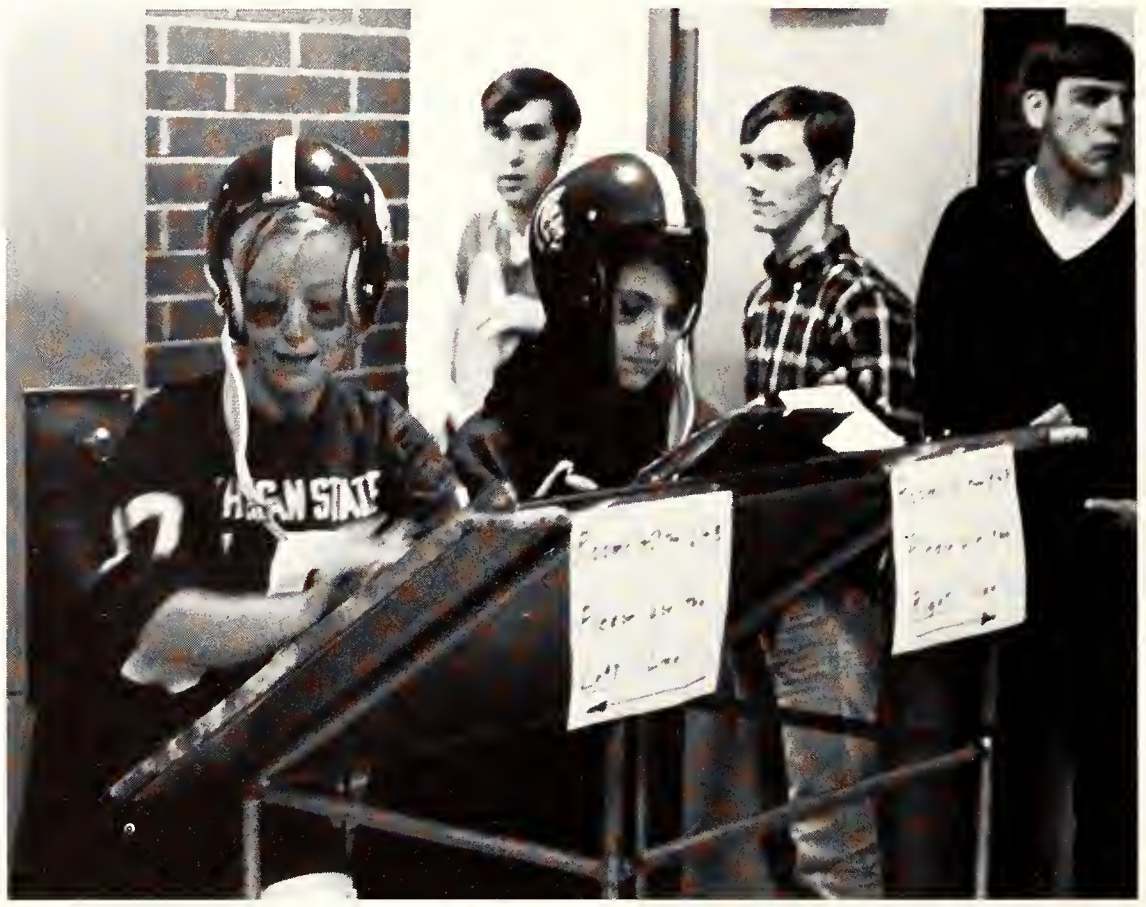
Even the checkers entered into the spirit of the Wilson Hall Halloween Party.

Trick or Treating was a feature of many Halloween open houses.



Derby Day events delighted spectators but disconcerted some participants.

Social Events Feature Costumes and Contests

By the end of October, living units were once again looking for new forms of recreation. As part of the first fall term Greek Weekend, leviclad sorority members tested their skill at a variety of "field events" at the Sigma Chi Derby Day. Sponsored by the local chapter for the first time this year, Derby Day is a traditional Sigma Chi event at which sorority members compete in a series of contests and races, to the amusement of themselves and spectators alike. A week later, residence halls and other groups observed Halloween with a variety of events. Almost every hall sponsored a costume dinner, with some adding pumpkin-carving contests, special dances, or parties for underprivileged children.

Holiday Celebrations Take Many Forms

Sunday evening before finals week is traditionally the time for the Pi Beta Phi—Delta Tau Delta Christmas Tree Lighting ceremony outside the Union Building.

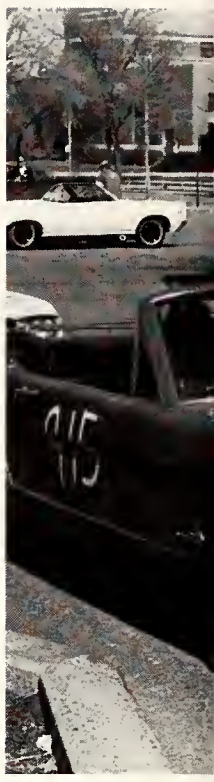
Handmade decorations are varied in shape but always festive.

Asher women trimmed the streets of East Lansing with Christmas greenery.

Christmas parties almost always include children, as did this one at Wilson Hall.

Almost as soon as Thanksgiving was over, thoughts turned simultaneously to Christmas and finals week. Activities in living units ranged from frantic catching up on reading assignments to decorating the streets of East Lansing. Residence halls and sororities sponsored children's parties and invited special guests to dinner. Decorations of all styles were found in halls and houses, from painted windows to ornate door trimmings. Christmas carols, gift exchanges, tree trimming and sending cards were mixed with term papers and tests, as fall term came quickly to a close.

Cheery Spring Renews Campus Activities



Participation in living unit activities seems to increase as the year progresses. From the doldrums of winter term, with only an occasional art show, ski trip, or coffee house to break the monotony of snow and classes, campus groups move into spring with vigor and enthusiasm. Suddenly, outdoors is "the place to be" for activities ranging from complex picnics as part of East and South Campus Weekends to ever-popular afternoon sunbathing.

With Michigan's unpredictable weather, students have learned to take advantage of any available spring weather to capture that precious status symbol, a golden tan.

The Wilson Wipeout was a chance for the guys to drag without being caught by campus police.

Complex picnics provided an opportunity for residents to solve the riddle: does dorm food taste the same even when eaten outside at a picnic?

Both jazz and folk enthusiasts to psychedelic hippies populated coffeehouses located all over campus.

Childhood skills again become important in the annual tricycle race.

The women of Pi Beta Phi performed a medley from Kismet as their entry in Greek sing.

The Junior 500 requires physical fitness, team co-operation and practice.

Greek Feast was one of many picnics held by various groups in spring.

Greek Activities Add Variety to Campus Life

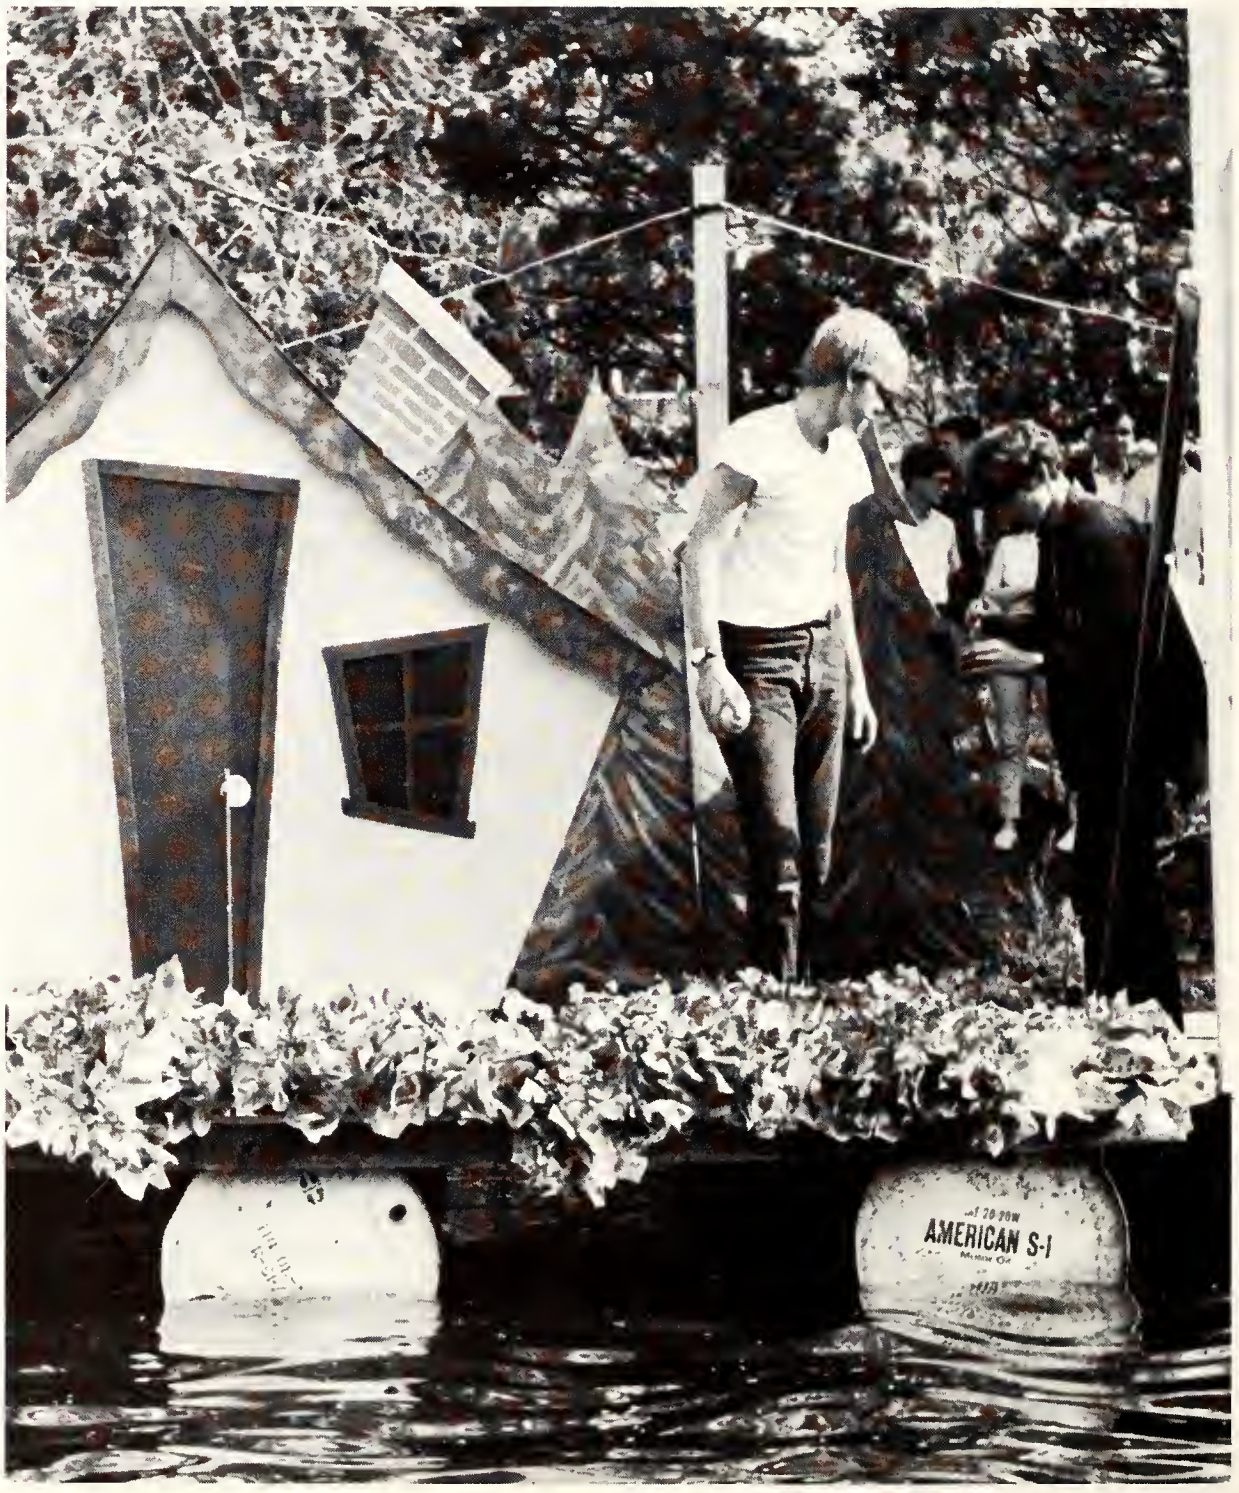
While actively participating in all-university events, Greek living units also sponsor and engage in their own activities. A major event held each year is Greek Week, which includes such diverse activities as community service projects, Greek Sing, and Greek Feast. Other Greek-sponsored activities involving the whole campus include the Lambda Chi Alpha Junior 500, and the Sigma Alpha Mu Tricycle Race, where the spirit of competition is high and the result is enjoyment for all.

A last strategy session before the start of the Junior 500.

Water Carnival: End to a Busy Year

Water Carnival provides living units with a major activity with which to end the year. Each group works for weeks planning its entry, and residents spend many evenings along the Red Cedar actually constructing each float. The hours are long, and inevitable complications arise, but wet feet, paint-spattered clothes and aching muscles suddenly become worthwhile when the show begins and the judges announce the winners.

Behind-the-scenes production is sometimes messy, but always fun.



Slowly the floats begin to take on character of their own.

"Say Ahhh"—A paper mache sculpture receives a final check-up before mounting a float.

The floats are finally completed and ready for their cruise down the river.

Students often find studying together very helpful.

Late at night one finds students studying in their most comfortable clothes.

Studying in solitude is often the only way to complete your work.

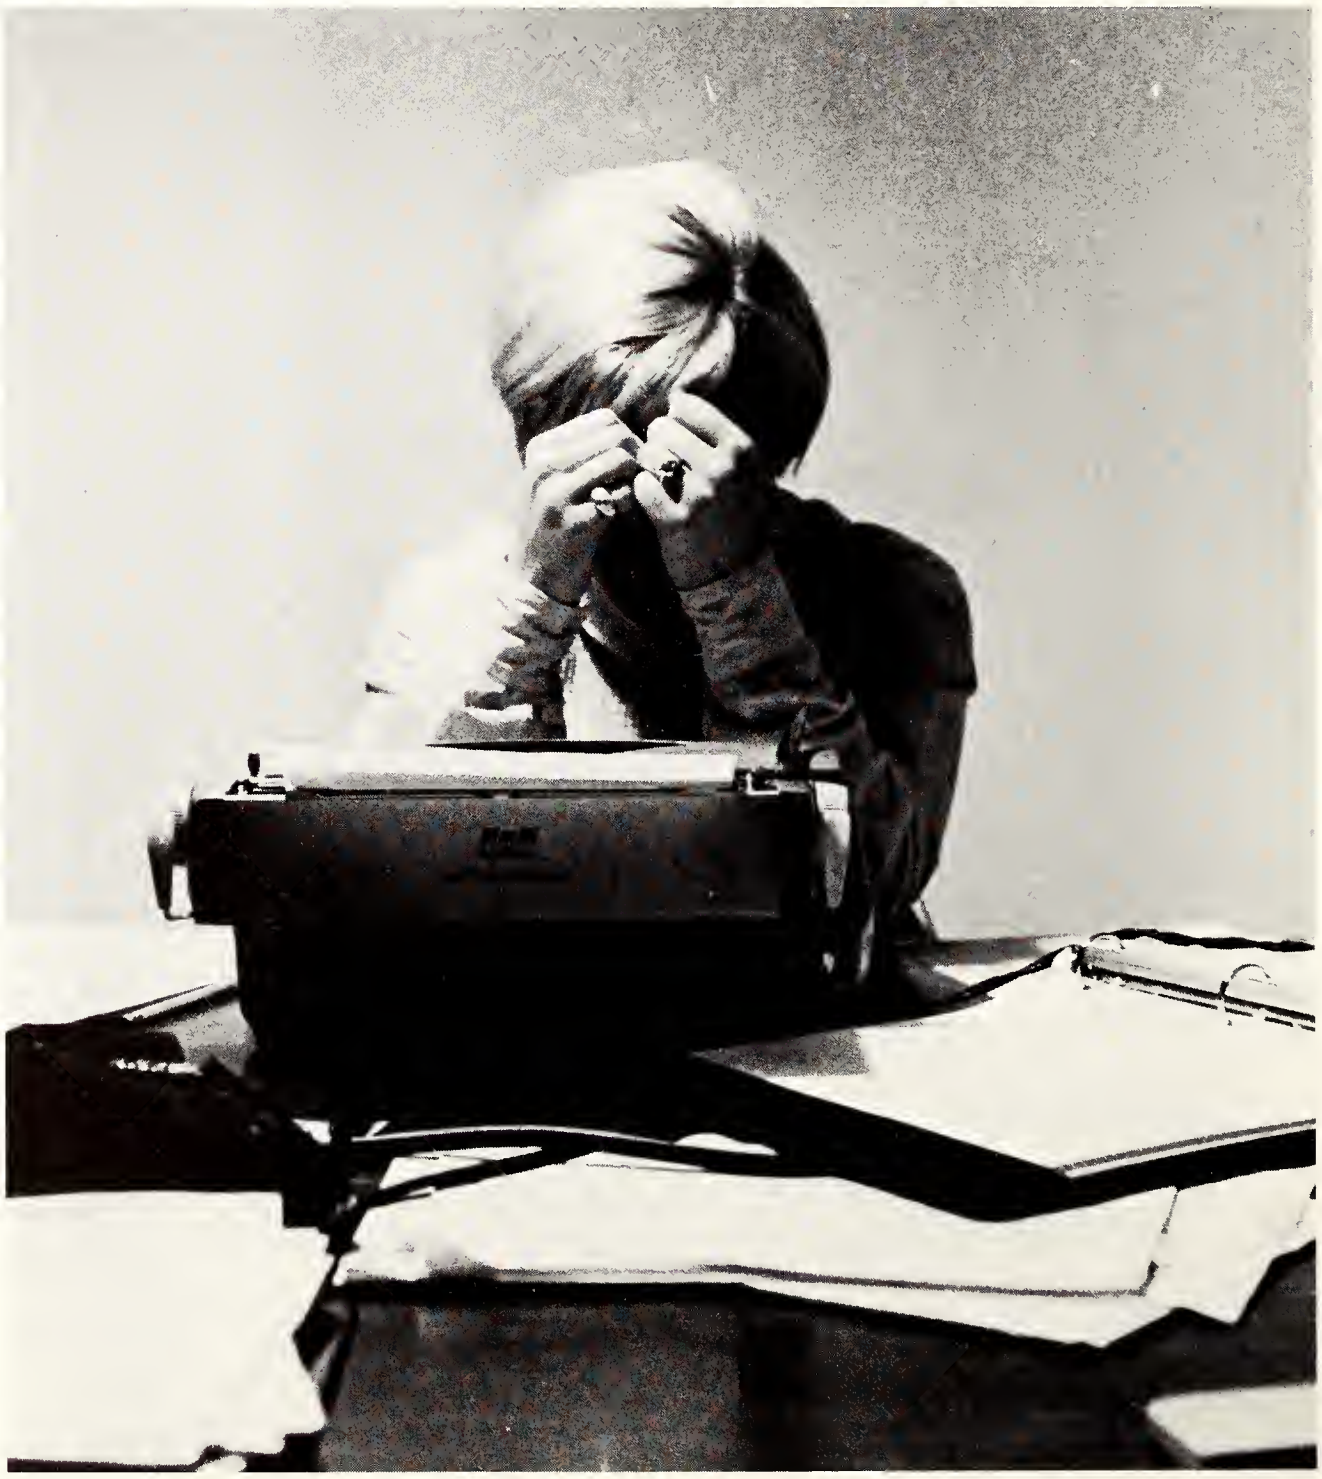
Every spare minute counts in studying, even while on the job.

Methods of Study Vary, But Goal of Learning Remains

The desk and book shelves seem to be the most important pieces of furniture in student residences, but the amount of use these facilities receive varies with the individual. Some students pore over their books for hours every night, while others spend frantic "all-nighters" to atone for weeks of neglect. One person can concentrate on anything from Chaucer to Thermodynamics in the midst of blaring Motown sound and the chatter of friends, while another demands complete silence and solitude for study. But, one way or another, the term ends and so does the work.

A comfortable couch adds to the atmosphere of concentration and study.

Regardless of where a student lives, he has a wide choice of places to study. Dorm residents may remain in their rooms, go to empty classrooms and cafeterias, or seek out more remote corners of their residence hall. Greek houses often conduct study tables to enforce strict silence and concentration, as well as encourgaging a more relaxed study atmosphere in other areas of the house. Apartment dwellers may like to study in the comfort of their living rooms, but sometimes find it more practical to escape roommates, phone calls and television at a public study area on or off campus. The decision of where, when and how much to study varies with the individual, but the ultimate purpose is the same: to learn, to assimilate, and to become aware.



Term papers are a frustrating part of college life.

Unused classrooms accommodate many people looking for a quiet place to study.

Even a residence hall grill can provide a study atmosphere for some.

A dorm room is often the most comfortable place to do one's work.

AKERS

Akers began the year with a new constitution which provided for a co-ed student government. Under this new governmental system, residents and student leaders are striving to set a tradition of quality programs in the hall. An orientation program was instituted at the beginning of fall term to acquaint new residents with the hall. On the academic and cultural level, several experimental programs were sponsored in co-operation with the College of Arts and Letters, located in Akers, to give the living-learning concept more meaning for residents. Throughout the year, Akers participates actively in intramural sports and all-university activities.

BAILEY

Known for extensive participation in all-university sports events, Bailey Hall proudly displays many trophies collected throughout the years by the efforts of its residents. The great interest in sports, however, extends beyond intramural championships to leadership in support of the United States Olympic Team through a campus-wide fund drive. The hall was attractively redecorated this year with the installation of new carpeting and furniture for the main lobby, the addition of a new activities room equipped with a ping pong table, and the opening of an office for the legislative body of the hall government.

BRYAN

In an attempt to foster better faculty-student relationships, each house in Bryan Hall has selected its own "faculty advisor". The professors chosen for this honor visit the houses frequently for dinner and informal discussions, thus creating more personal interaction between students and faculty. In keeping with the theme of personal contact, the hall also sponsors a tutorial program in which students help each other with difficult classes, and a series of very small group discussions tailored to the special interests of residents.

BUTTERFIELD

The Butterfield Hall Pin Club, a service-oriented organization, was introduced to honor outstanding residents. A spring tapping coincides with those of Mortar Board and Circle Honorary. Besides winning the complex scholarship trophy for the fifth consecutive year, Butterfield is also involved in activities of a social nature. These include building a display for Homecoming and a Water Carnival entry, a ski weekend, a Christmas party for orphans and a mother's weekend.

CAMPBELL

With a combined government and food service, North and South Campbell are acting like a residence hall with two front doors. An avid participant in all university events, Campbell is represented by residents at such functions as the annual canoe race in the fall and the Junior 500 in the spring. In co-operation with their brother dorm, East Shaw, residents annually sponsor a Halloween party and a term party. Following long-standing tradition, the holidays are observed by making Thanksgiving food baskets, trimming the hall's Christmas tree, and holding holiday parties for residents.

GILCHRIST

As the meeting place for West Circle residents, the Gilchrist Pub has given the hall a unique atmosphere and an attractive reputation on campus. With only 208 residents, hall officers can work more closely with the girls in developing hall activities. The Miss Maude Gilchrist Contest, an annual all-hall competition, allows the girls to put on skits together and earn money for their yearly orphan party. Other activities include an Easter party for underprivileged children, mother's and little sister's weekends, and informal discussion with President Hannah, and a lecture on how to watch football from Duffy Daugherty.

NORTH CASE

This year, North Case worked hard toward achieving internal unity between the students of the newly established James Madison College and the older residents of the hall. One very successful effort toward this goal was the creation of a Big Sister's program, in which upperclass co-eds became the "big sisters" of the Madison College freshmen. To show that older residents are not forgotten, the hall traditionally presents graduating seniors with roses. Other favorite Case events include Little Sister Weekend, mock Olympic Games with South Case, and an orphan's party winter term.

SOUTH CASE

A major goal of South Case is to achieve improved communications between the administration, the government, and the students it represents. To facilitate this, the hall government has initiated open general council meetings and regular conferences with the administration of James Madison College. A hall newspaper has also been started by James Madison students. Other projects sponsored by the hall include a dorm-wide bundle party with North Case, all-university mixers, and the popular annual picnic at Lake Lansing.

The cafeteria and the recreation rooms are popular areas with Holden residents.

HOLDEN

Holden, the newest residence hall on campus, has already captured several honors. After winning the complex IM football championship, Holden went on to second place in all-residence hall competition. A Halloween party for orphans started off the year, with a little sister's and little brother's weekend, and a coffeehouse in the planning stages. A wide variety of social activities such as mixers, scholastic honorary dinners, a formal term party and a wide range of group discussions were arranged to initiate Holden residents into the swing of university affairs.

Many out-of-class hours are spent in the Hubbard Grill.

HUBBARD

Last year's innovation became this year's strength as Hubbard Hall improved on their new co-ed governmental structure. Both men and women are represented by a common general council, and a ten-member judicial board. This year, adjusting to the new constitution, residents have attempted to present more meaningful and enjoyable activities to residents. Such innovations as presenting live band music during Sunday dinner and offering special lighting effects at mixers have been introduced. Imaginative parties, such as a Halloween costume dinner, and the annual term party, held on a casino theme, also added to the hall's new imaginative spirit.

EMMONS

Emmons Hall justified its athletic orientation by taking top honors in several sports. Residents took first place in the Shaw Canoe Race and placed third in the annual Turkey Trot. Emmons' teams shared the all-residence hall football championship with Holden Hall and won the fall term all-university sports championship. Last spring, Emmons representatives captured second place in the all-university golf tournament. Extra emphasis on scholastic achievement fall term was rewarded by a record number of four-points. Ski trips, mixers, featuring regular "Battles of the Bands", and speakers such as Dwight McDonald, University College Symposium participant, are other of Emmons more publicized activities.

WEST HOLMES

Dialogue '67, a week-long series of speakers and panel discussions, was a product of the ingenuity of Holmes Hall residents. Participating in the dialogues were representatives from the campus and the Lansing area. William Shockley, Nobel Prize winner in Physics, was a special guest. Always searching for self-improvement, the women of West Holmes arranged for a Joan Jewett make-up demonstration. A coffeehouse, powder puff football, term parties, and ski weekends also offered entertainment to many interested residents.

EAST LANDON

East Landon sponsored a variety of activities this year. The girls took part in all-university events such as Homecoming and Water Carnival, building prize-winning floats with the help of their brother dorm. Powder puff football on Landon field was a popular fall term pastime, along with listening to the late afternoon rehearsels of the MSU Marching Band. The women of East Landon also sponsored a large variety of community service projects, speakers, and special dinners.

WEST LANDON

West Landon consistently maintains one of the highest grade point averages on campus, a distinction which is reflected by two of the hall's traditional activities. These are the annual Senior Dinner, which recognizes outstanding senior women for their contributions to the hall, and the Landon honorary, which recognizes other outstanding co-eds. Another favorite feature of West Landon living is holiday dinners given to celebrate Christmas, Thanksgiving, Halloween, and Valentine's Day. Residents placed third in the Junior 500 last spring, and also take part in many other all-university activities.

MASON

Slow, romantic music played on a nearby piano; couples talking in low tones or a foursome playing bridge; a quiet figure just sitting in a bay window gazing at the falling snow. These sights are commonly found in the lobby of ivy-covered Mason Hall. The women of Mason found themselves redecorating this year, renovating the main lobby and adding a long-awaited music room. Striving for scholastic excellence, the women maintained an intense study atmosphere and provided incentive by offering scholastic rewards: a rose to each girl attaining a 3.5 average. Each year, the "Mrs. Gill Scholarship", named for a former housemother, is awarded to a resident on the basis of grade point average and financial need. This year's charitable project was the sponsorship of Yolanda, a Mexican orphan.

EAST MAYO

The unity and tradition of East Mayo are first introduced to new residents when they receive orientation folders from their hall during the summer before they arrive on campus. This orientation program is just one phase of the genuine effort made by the women of East Mayo to create a real community of interest within their hall. Once they arrive, residents take part in all-university events such as Water Carnival and Homecoming as well as the hall's term party and intramural sports activities.

WEST MARY MAYO

West Mary Mayo, often referred to as "The smallest and friendliest" residence hall on campus, utilizes its size and warmth to create an academic, social and community-minded atmosphere. Scholarship dinners, hall discussions, and speakers stimulate the academic interests of the women. Events such as powder-puff football, exchange dinners, and term parties provide recreation and enjoyment. A new attitude toward the Lansing community and its problems was evident this year, resulting in several new service projects. For instance, in November, the hall choir entertained senior citizens at the Provincial House, and East Lansing convalescent home. The hall celebrated Christmas by inviting faculty guests to Sunday dinner, and at Easter held an Easter egg hunt for orphans.

EAST McDONEL

East McDonel, maintaining its tradition as a largely upperclass hall, continued to move forward this year. The Inter-McDonel Programs for Active Cultural Themes, better known as "I.M.P.A.C.T.", was the first student organization on campus to produce a movie dealing with life in a specific residence hall. The popular McDonel coffeehouses were continued and expanded, along with a Sunday movie program. A major emphasis was also placed on cultural and academic development, including a series of experimental study open houses held winter term.

RATHER

Operation Friendship, an off-shoot of the National Big Brothers organization, was an extremely successful community service project sponsored by Rather Hall. In this case, however, the women of Rather established a "Big Sisters" program with underprivileged girls in the Lansing area. Elementary and junior high school girls met their "big sisters" in Rather and spent several weekends in the dorm participating in specially planned activities. The women also initiated a series of fireside chats with faculty members and various guest speakers. After the Brody complex symposium, the lecturers were invited to the hall for informal coffee hours and talks.

EAST SHAW

The men of East Shaw are known for their service in community projects and for an all-around program of sports and intellectual activities. This year, in conjunction with the annual Shaw Hall Canoe Race, a "Miss Red Cedar" was elected. Shaw men, masquerading as co-eds, competed for this honor by collecting pennies, each of which was counted as one vote. This money was then combined with funds raised by the popular Shaw mixers and contributed to sponsor an operation at Sparrow Hospital for a needy youth. The men of East Shaw are also proud of their Dinner Lecture Series which sponsored speakers Leroy Augenstein, Marion Kinget, Edward Blackman, and Donald Hamachek.

WEST SHAW

West Shaw offers its residents a wide variety of activities, ranging from symposiums on drugs and alcohol to implementation of the Academic Freedom Report. Situated along the Red Cedar, West Shaw co-sponsors the annual fall canoe race, as well as popular weekly mixers and WKME radio. Red Cross first aid instruction and lectures on the history of American music were also popular programs. Hall social activities include three term parties, a party for underprivileged children, and a spectacular Mardi Gras event.

SNYDER

Snyder Hall is proud of being a place where men can do more than just eat, sleep and study. Several all-university mixers, two jazz workshops, open houses every weekend, a toboggan party and a ski weekend highlighted this year's social calendar. Snyder, which has been the home of Justin Morrill College for the past three years, has consistently had one of the highest GPA's on campus.

VAN HOOSEN

Van Hoosen Hall, unique among on-campus residences, is designed to provide women with apartment living under University supervision. Like all university residence halls, it has a lobby, lounge, and study areas plus a communal kitchen where girls may serve guests at any time.The apartments, occupied by four to six women, are composed of a living-study area, kitchen, bath, and bedroom. The occupants of each apartment are solely responsible for meal-planning, cooking, and cleaning. In addition to her apartment responsibilities, each girl serves as receptionist in the lobby for one hour every week. The women of Van Hoosen also display a high standard of academic excellence by having the highest grade point average of any undergraduate hall on campus.

WEST WILSON

In forming an all-hall honorary, West Wilson salutes girls who have made outstanding contributions to the hall. Another form of recognition for residents is a weekly contest in which cakes are awarded to the houses picking the winning football scores. A major's night offers information on possible future careers to the uncertain students. On Little Sisters Weekend, West Wilson overflows with children. A slave auction rounds out the long list of social functions offered by this active hall.

SOUTH WONDERS

South Wonders residents participate in several activities designed to both demonstrate and improve hall spirit, ranging from study break mixers on Sunday nights to a semiformal winter term party. Moving up a traditional activity, South Wonders women entertained underprivileged children at a Halloween costume party. At the Hall Christmas party, the advisory staff presented a skit, while other residents sang carols in a candlelight procession through the halls. South Wonders also takes active part in all-university and complex events, especially South Campus Weekend.

YAKELEY

Street dances and guest speakers exemplify the wide range of activities sponsored by Yakeley Hall. As part of the campus-wide Dialogue Week winter term, residents heard a series of talks on "Identity in a Mass Society." Other speakers to visit the hall throughout the year included Dr. Mandelstamm of Economics, Dr. Pipes of Humanities, and Donald Adams, Director of Residence Hall Programs. Other hall activities include participation in intramural basketball and volleyball, a scholarship dinner each term, and frequent exchange dinners with men's halls.

Whether as a participant in Mortar Board, Green Splash, Tower Guard, Senior Council, Union Board, or the MSU Players, each Alpha Chi sister lends her spirit toward a successful venture. Entertaining a group of cerebral palsied children with the aid of the Figi's is another function the Alpha Chi's look forward to each winter. The Alpha Chi's should also pride themselves on their physical fitness, for this year they won the All-University Woman's Volleyball Championship, the Basketball Championship and placed second in the Canoe Race.

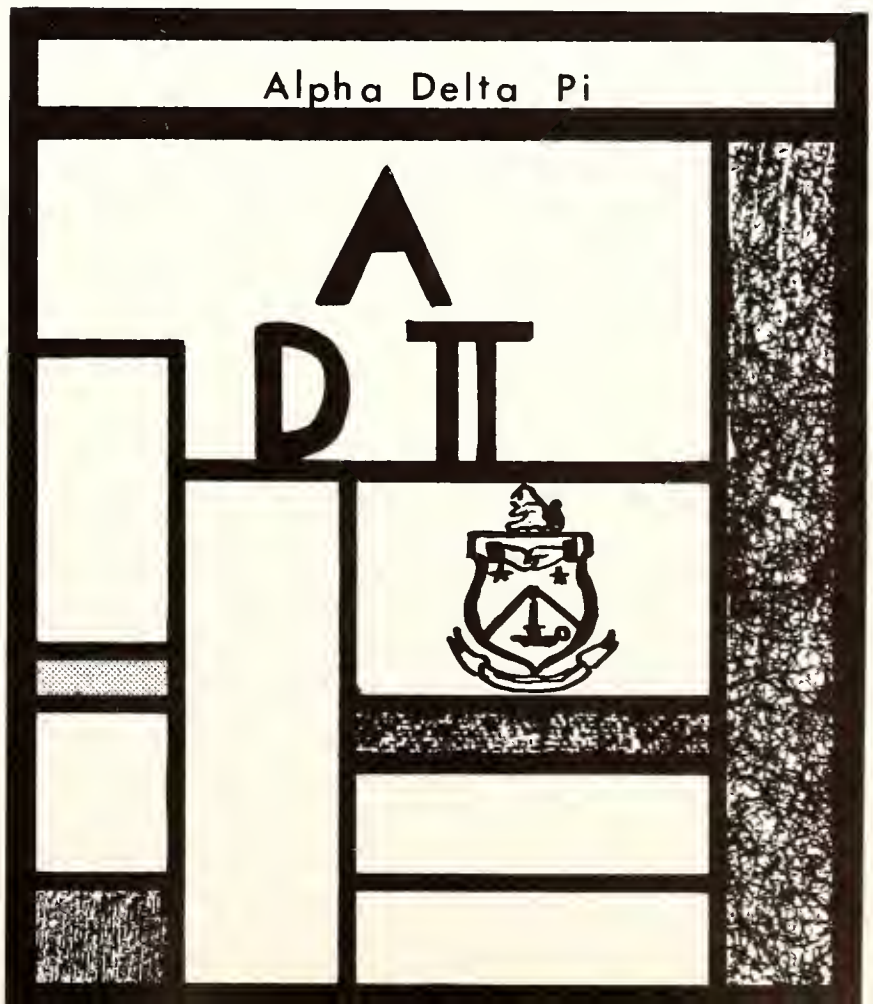
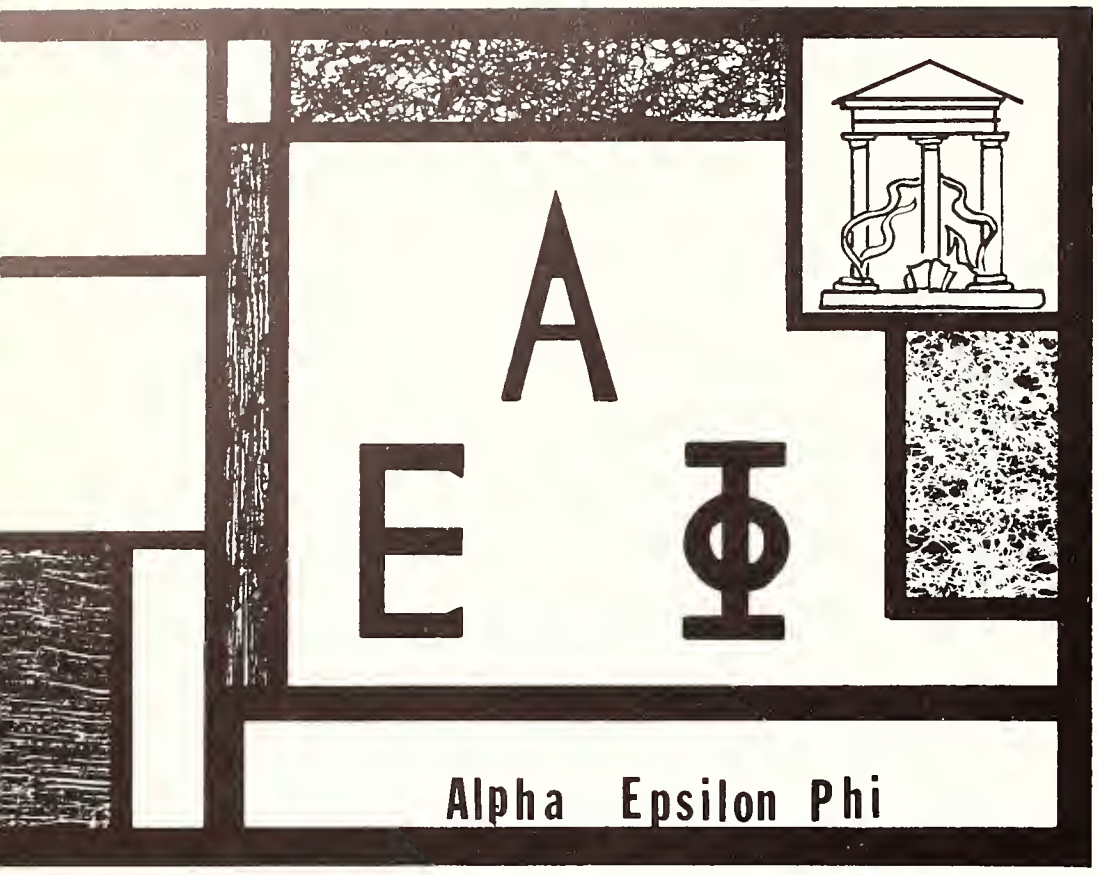
Participation in student government is a specialty at Alpha Delta Pi, as a list of sisters includes the President and Secretary of AWS, the Standards Chairman of Panhel and officers of many professional and honorary organizations. Sisters also distinguished themselves by placing first in the A E Phi Art Contest, first in the Turkey Trot and second in Homecoming competition. But Alpha Delta Pi reaches beyond the University and even beyond the U.S. boundaries to include a very special sister, Chan Kwi Lin, a foster child in Hong Kong.





With the advent of Spring Term 1967 came the opening of the new A E Phi house. Participating in many university functions, the sorority has members contributing to Water Carnival, the State News, and Green Splash. One member holds the vice-chairmanship of SCOPE. An Art Show sponsored during Greek Week is another original idea of A E Phi which will become a yearly project and a source of entertainment for Parent's Weekend in the Spring. Their motto "Molta Chorda, Una Causa" (Many hearts, one purpose) is exemplified by the community spirit and active involvement of all the members.

As members of the oldest established sorority on campus, the Alpha Gams find themselves endowed with many customs. The rose necklace awarded each term to the sister showing the greatest scholastic improvement, and the May morning breakfast given in honor of the senior members add a rich air of tradition to the house. Each member of Alpha Gamma Delta contributes to the house as a unique individual, whether it be as ASMSU board member, Chairman of SCOPE, a campus queen, or a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Tower Guard or Alpha Lambda Delta. Alpha Gams serve their community by aiding the cerebral palsied in Lansing.

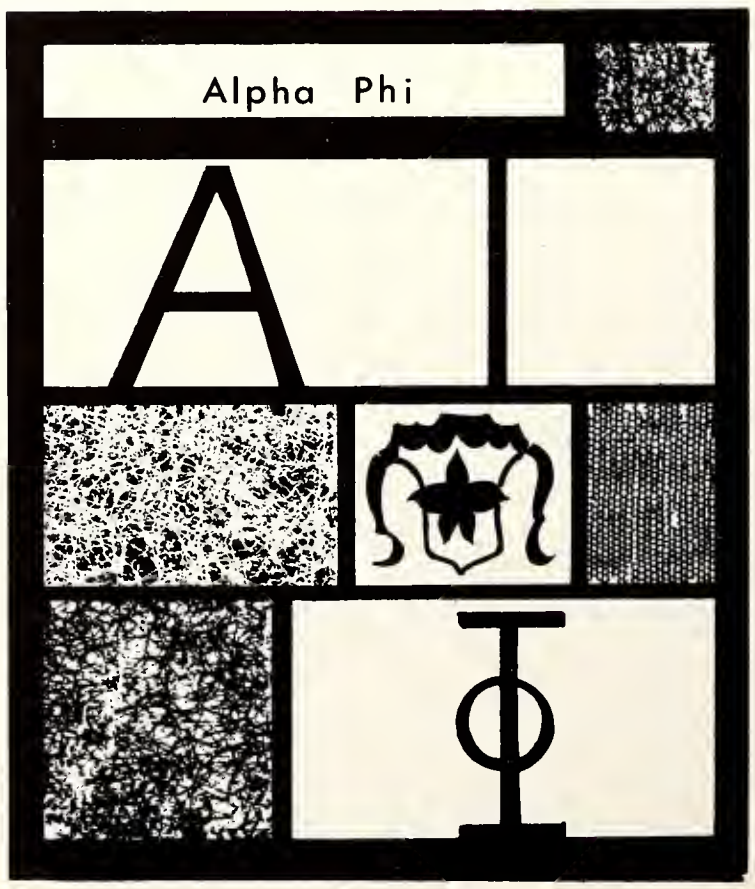
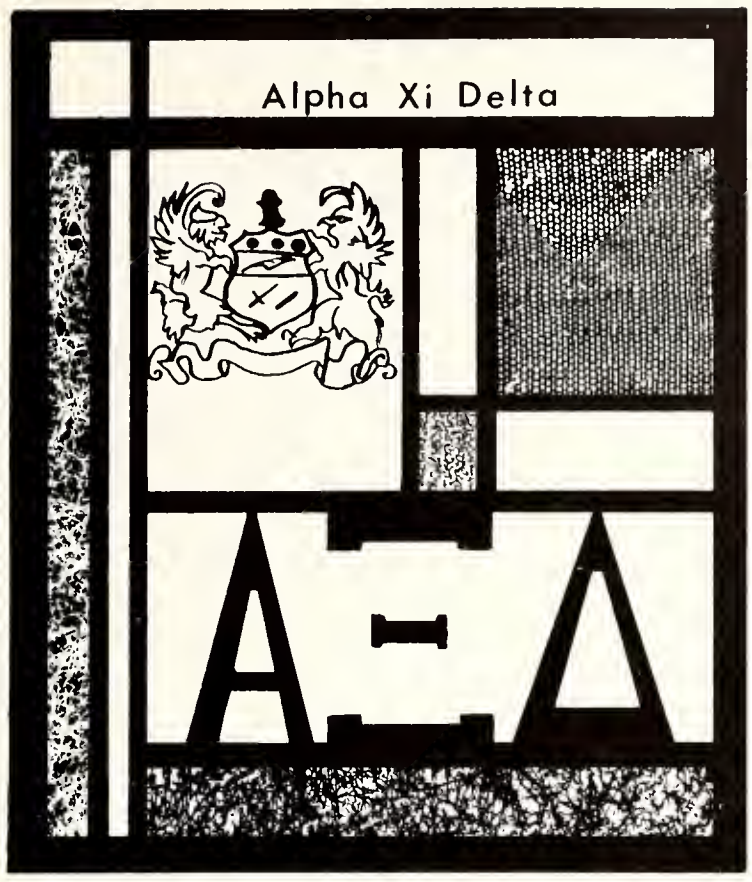
The numerous activities in which the women of Alpha Phi participate throughout the year provide rewarding opportunities for self-expression and development. Their philanthropic interests center around the Cardiac Aid Society but also include various community services such as a Christmas party given with a fraternity for a group of underprivileged children. The sisters are especially happy to have adopted a little brother in India. Campus activities, too, are important to the chapter and Alpha Phi spirit was rewarded during Greek Week as the house won the participation award as well as third place in Greek sing.





After three-quarters of a century at MSU, the Alpha Xi's will mark their Diamond Jubilee with the construction of a major addition to their house. The "Fuzzies," as they are nicknamed, act as hostesses each year to the Inter-Sorority Breakfast. Through this contact with other chapters and through activities within the chapter, Alpha Xi hopes to build unity within the Greek system. "Fuzzie" sisters can be found on the Pan-Hellenic Executive Board, 1967 Publicity Committee and also in Angel Flight. The sisters are also perennial participants in Homecoming and Water Carnival competition.

Utilizing the largest membership of any national sorority, the Chi Omegas put their large numbers to work participating in all phases of university life. Active in student government, Homecoming, Mortar Board, Greek Week and Water Carnival, Chi O's inject their spirit into almost every campus organization. With similar zeal they attend to the student's task of scholarship, this year placing second in sorority G.P.A. competition. Some of their most important functions during the year center on philanthropic efforts. One of their favorite activities takes place at Christmas, when the women carol for Lansing area convalescent homes.

Tri-Delt involvement stretches over a widely diversified area, including the Vice-President of Panhellenic, Sigma Chi Derby Darling, members in professional and national honoraries and the winning of the Home-coming display award for the third consecutive year. Scholastics, the never to be forgotten burden of any student, are not lost in the whirl of extra curricular activity surrounding the Tri-Delt house. Many sisters are honor students and the sorority can boast several nominees for the Woodrow Wilson Fellowships.

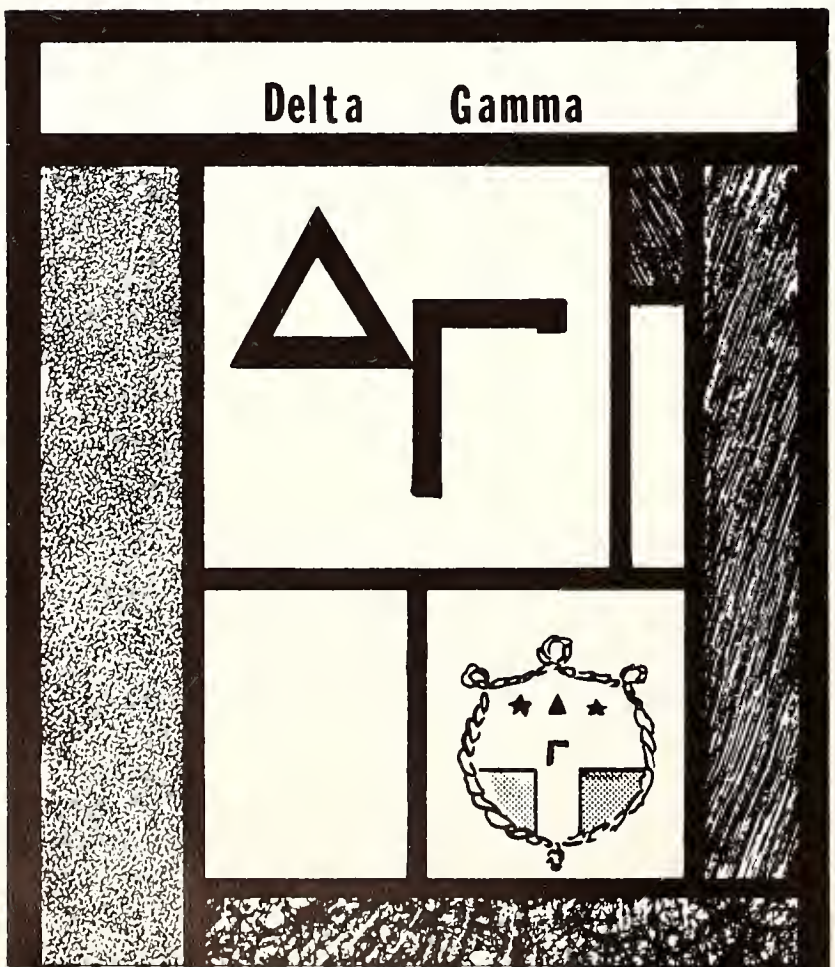
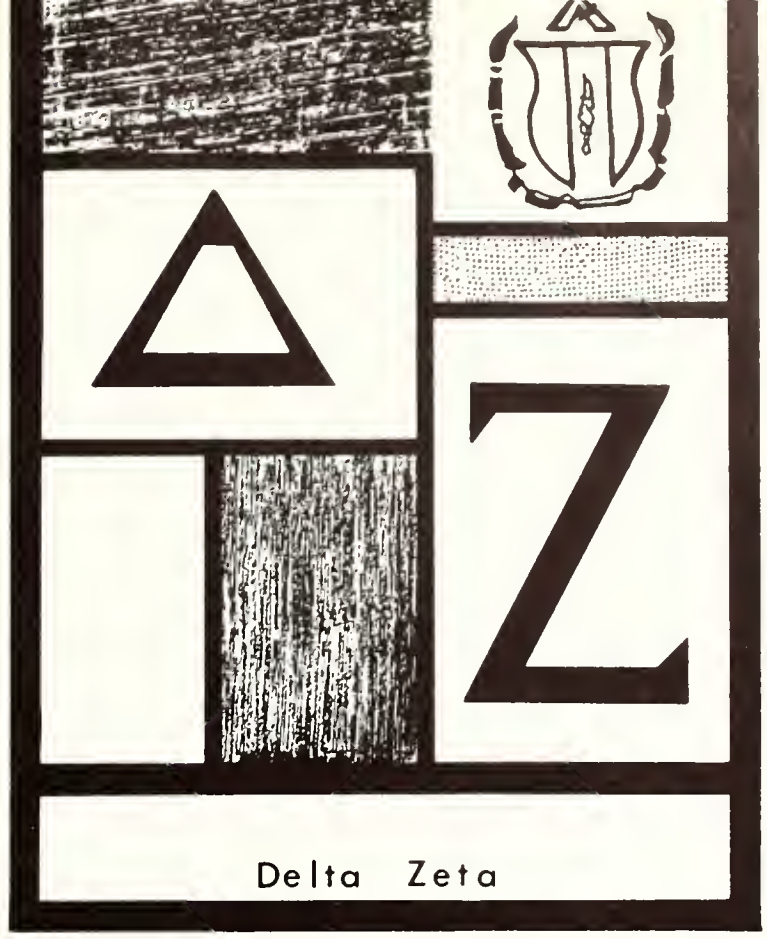
Aid to the blind is the core of all service work for the women of Delta Gamma. At Christmas, the sisters sponsor a party for the children at the local school for the blind and throughout the school year they read to blind students on campus. Social activities are plentiful, with the annual Powder Puff football game with the Gamma Phi's a highlight of the annual Dad's Day celebration. Individual effort is especially encouaged and the "Anchor Man" award is presented each year to the sister who has been most helpful in promoting the goals of Delta Gamma.





After winning the All-University Basketball Championship, the women of Delta Zeta went on to win the all-sorority bowling and blooperball championships. DZ effort also paid off when, in partnership with the men of Alpha Kappa Psi, they took second place honors in last spring's Water Carnival. The Delta Zeta national service project, "Adventures in Friendship," aids deaf children in the area. The women were proud to learn that one of their sisters was a finalist in the Miss Michigan pageant last summer. Activities within the sorority include the Triad, a semi-formal dance held in conjunction with two fraternities.

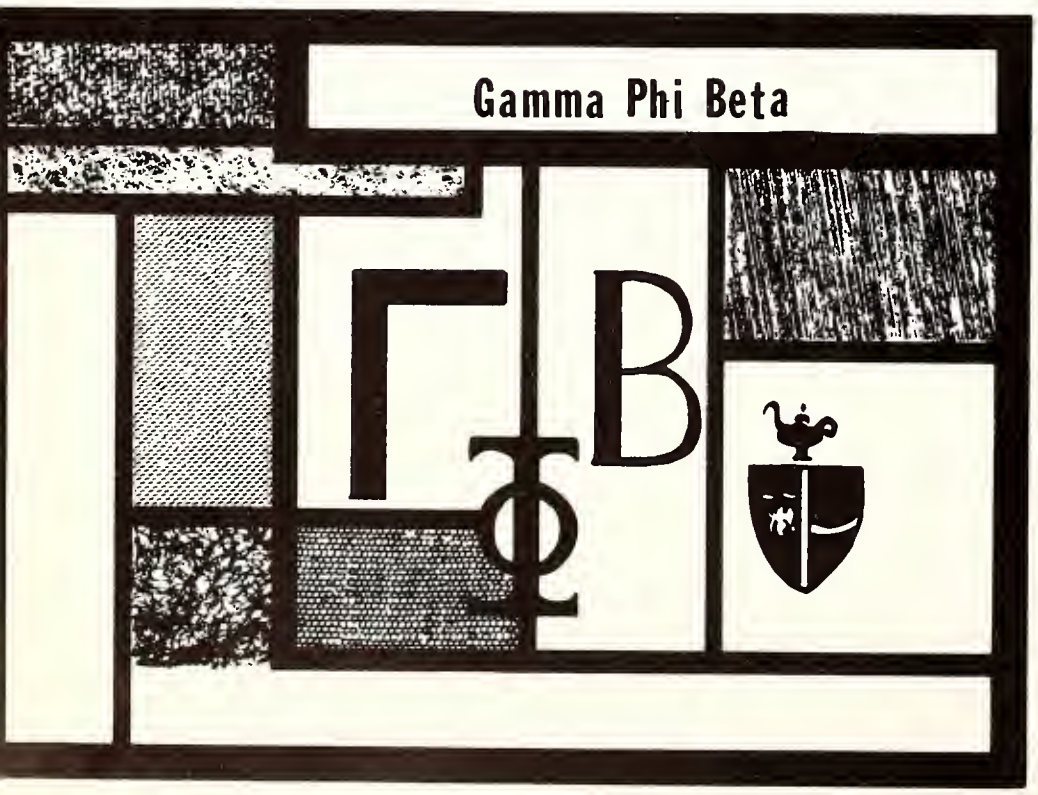
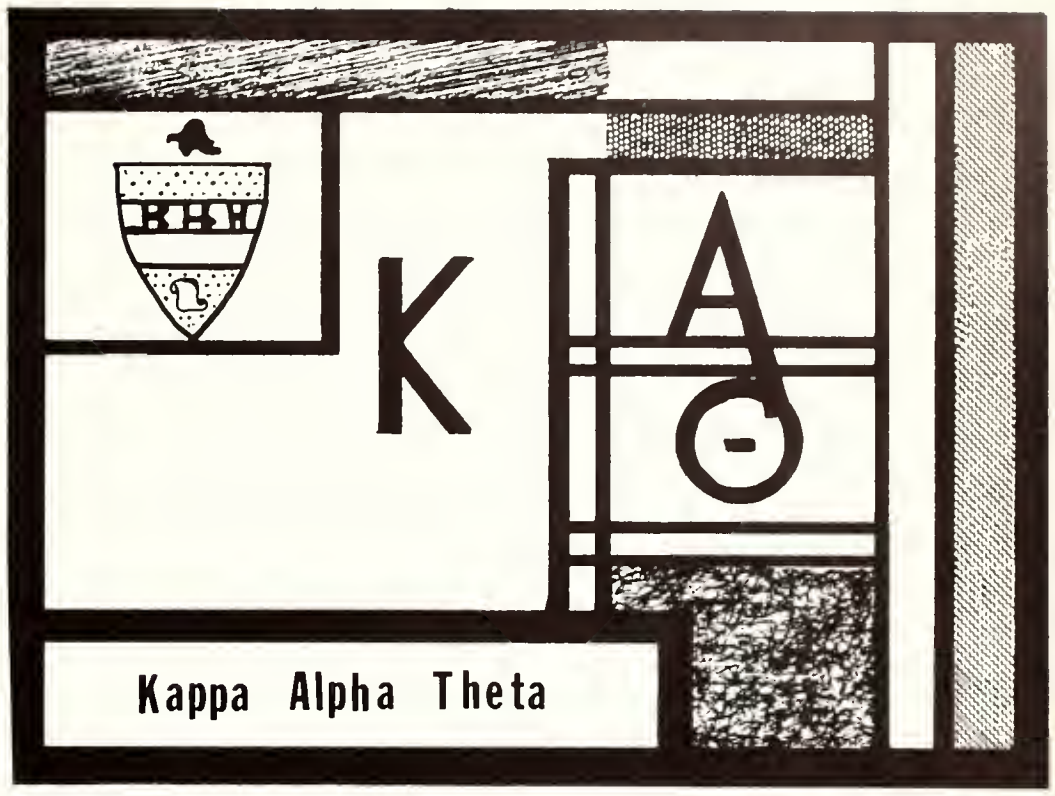
Service projects at Gamma Phi Beta take on world-wide dimensions as the sisters devote their efforts to supporting a Vietnamese child and also to providing counselors for their camps for underprivileged children located in Colorado and British Columbia. These camps are a project of Gamma Phi national. To reward its members for individual effort, Gamma Phi Beta annually gives the Janet Barth Memorial Award to the woman who is most outstanding scholastically and in campus participation. Special event of the Gamma Phi year is the annual Powder Puff football game, a part of Dad's Day.





The motto of the Thetas could well be similar to the old adage that it is far better to give than to receive, for involvement in philanthropic projects is one of the main functions of the sorority. They aid the Foster Parent Plan and the Institute of Logepedics in Kansas, which is the most outstanding center for bringing speech to the speechless. Diversity. too, is a password of the Thetas, as they are found participating in intramural basketball, Greek Sing, at work on the State News, or as members of any number of honoraries. Kappa Alpha Theta is a co-sponsor of the Outstanding Greek Trophy.

Kappa Delta

KD spirit reaches out over the entire campus as sisters seek to achieve their goal of promoting friendship in many ways. Lending a helping hand at the Michigan School for the Blind, as well as inviting orphans to a luncheon at the house on St. Vincent DePaul's Orphan Day, are a part of Kappa Delta philanthropy. Adding a spark to Spartan spirit, KD is proud of the fact that at least one sister has been on the varsity cheerleading squad for the past three years. First place honors in last fall's blood drive went to the women of Kappa Delta.

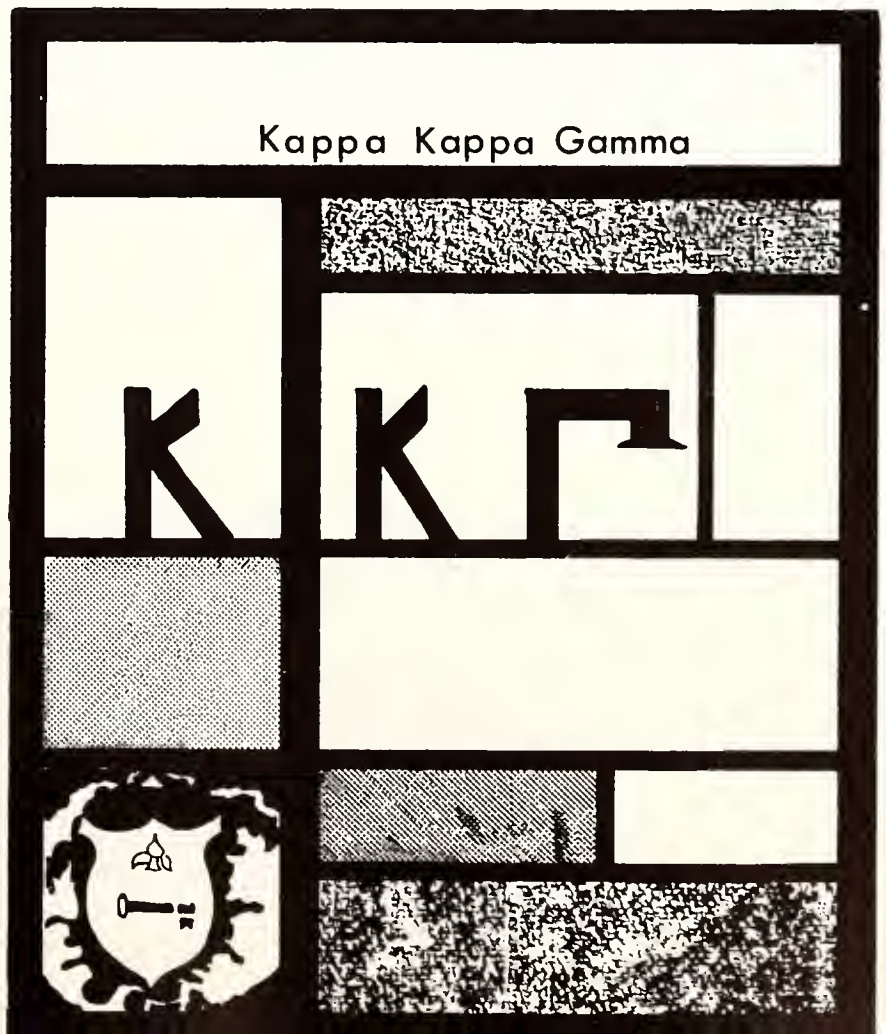
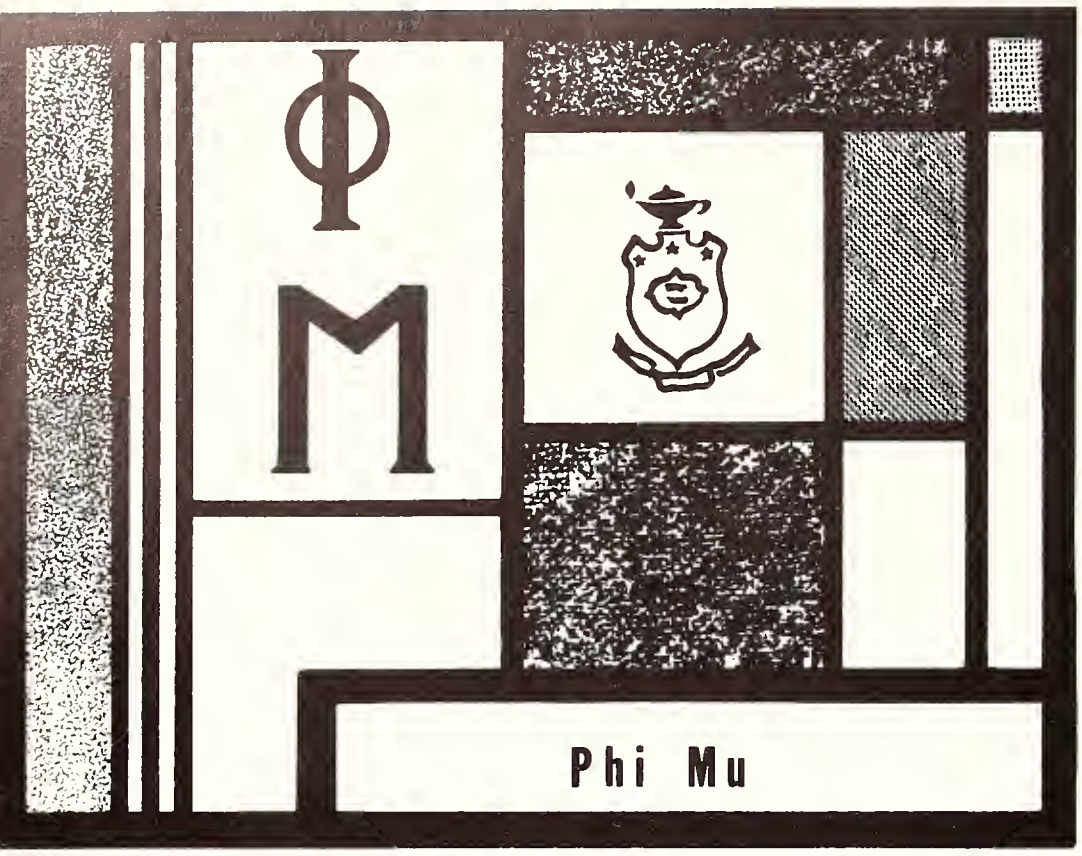
A code of unity and cooperation guides the women of Kappa Kappa Gamma both within their own house and within the entire Greek system. The code is the foundation for the spirit demonstrated by winning the Spirit Trophy on Derby Day. Academic spirit is encouraged by awarding a special Kappa key to the woman with the highest grades in the house each term. This year, Kappa Kappa Gamma sisters were ZBT Sweetheart, Miss MSU finalist, Air Force ROTC Queen and two Kappas held places on the Homecoming Court. There are Kappa sisters on Student-Faculty Council, Tower Guard and one is Vice-President of PanHel.





Following the tradition of giving aid to hospitalized children, each Halloween the sisters join with a fraternity to collect candy for the bedridden youngsters. In conjunction with the national chapter, the girls at MSU sponsor a drive to support the hospital ship U.S.S. Hope. Phi Mu's also sponsor a Thai exchange student. As the second oldest sorority on campus, the Phi Mu's have many traditional social functions which include a Turn-About dinner, Scholarship dessert, and College Bowl. The Philomatheon Ball climaxes the year each May.

Cooperating with the effort of chapters on many campuses across the nation, MSU's Pi Phi's have chosen to center their philanthropic activity around the Pi Beta Phi Settlement School in Gatlinburg, Illinois, which is near Monmouth College, where the sorority was founded over 100 years ago. Each Christmas, the Pi Phi's join forces with men of Delta Tau Delta to promote a bit of Christmas spirit through their songfest at the annual University Christmas Tree Lighting. During the past year, the Pi Phi's have been represented on the Miss MSU and Homecoming Courts and also on the Junior 500 Court.

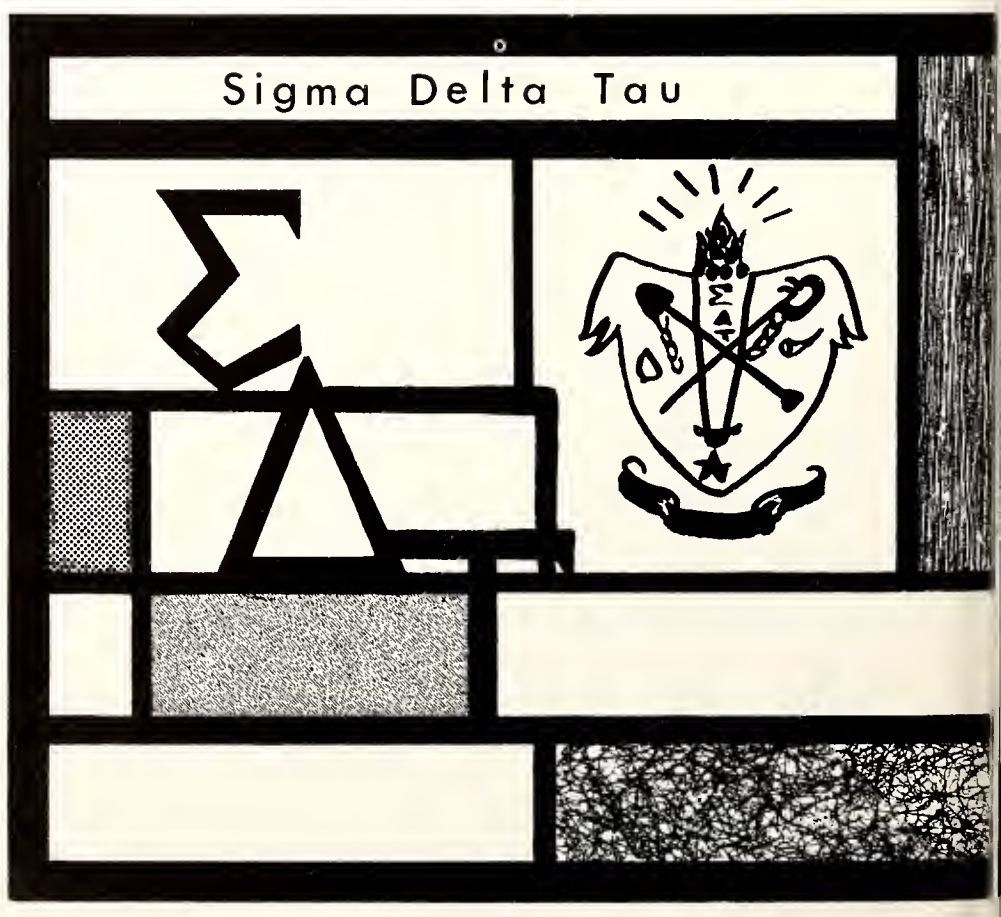
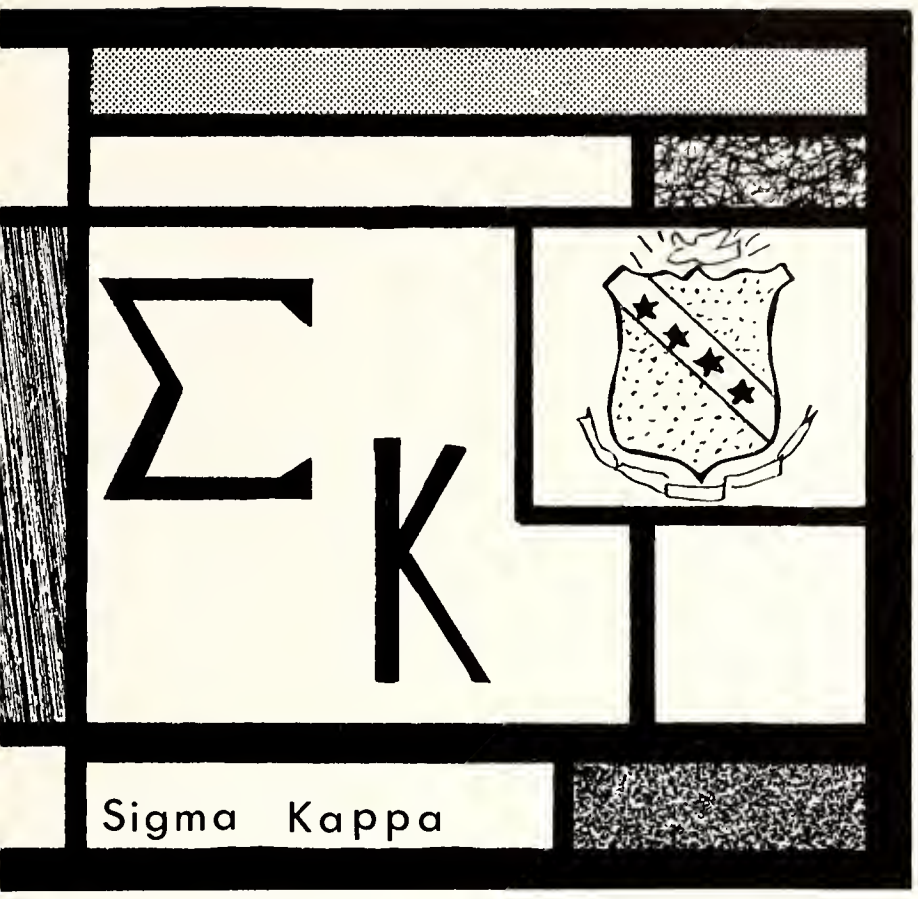
Desires to expand the proximity for sisterhood and to enhance the opportunity for friendship will materialize for the SDT's in the Fall of '68 when the construction of their new house will be completed. Among the forty-two girls who will claim the house as their new residence are such campus leaders as the president of Sorority President's Council, the Corresponding secretary of Pan Hellenic Council, the Greek Week Executive Committee chairman and the SCOPE Steering Committee chairman. Each month the sisters look forward to participating with the AKA's in sponsoring a dance for the boys at the Lansing Boy's School.





Due to completion of a spacious addition last fall, the Sigma Kappas have enjoyed a marked increase in membership. Traditional chapter activities include a Buddy Breakfast, Pledge Slumber Party, Mother's Day, Dad's Day and an Alumni Dessert. Last year the women were awarded second place in the canoe race, third place in Greek Sing, and placed third in sorority gradepoint competition. A Scholarship Dinner each term is an occasion for recognition of academic achievement. A gerontology project at the Ingham County Rehabilitation Center is typical of Sigma Kappa community service.

Kickoff for the ZTA year is a chapter retreat which takes place the first weekend after classes begin. During these few days, the sisters kindle their enthusiasm for the coming year, plan activities and have an all around good time in order to start the year off with a fully unified chapter. Each year's activities include a football day for Dads and a mother's luncheon in the spring. The annual Christmas turn-about dinner for bus boys and cooks is always a highlight on the ZTA calendar. The sisters are also active in all phases of campus life.

ALPHA OMICRON PI

Still awaiting the completion of their new house, the women of Alpha Omicron Pi have moved into a temporary house on Abbott Rd, pulling them even closer together in their quest for a combination of scholarship, service and friendship. Their housemother, a graduate assistant, can boast of being the youngest housemother on campus. Special activities of the AOPi's include working with the Arthritis Foundation, Mother's Day in spring and Dad's Day during Water Carnival. This year members gave pumpkins to SCOPE on Halloween for a children's party.

DELTASIGMA THETA

Founded in 1913 as a public service sorority, the Deltas have fulfilled the goals of their founding sisters. The women are involved in many philanthropic projects, namely SCOPE, the American Cancer Sociery, the YWCA, and a program of reading to the blind. The sisters are by no means limited to philanthropy alone. They are active participants in campus affairs and placed second in Greek Sing this past year. Notable Deltas are Miss MSU, A member of the '67 Homecoming Court, and the Sweethearts of three different fraternities.

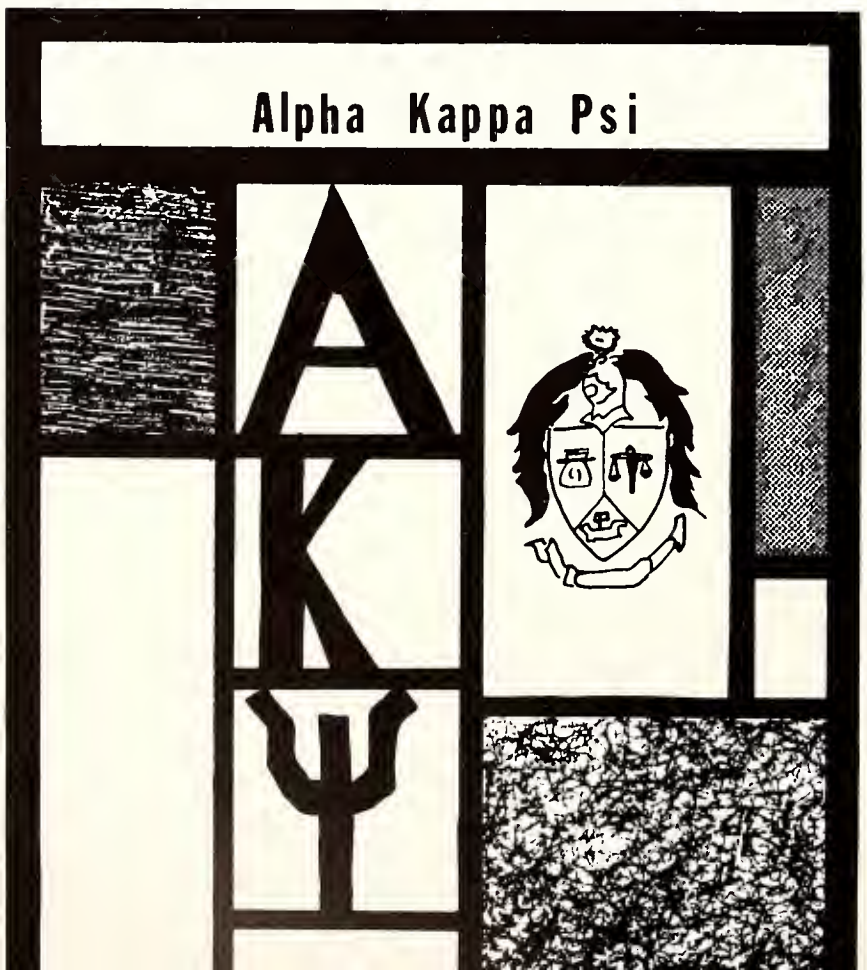
This year, MSU's chapter of A K Psi tied for the honor of best chapter in the nation. Its activities are designed to keep a close watch on the pulse of the business world. Field trips to Dow Chemical and Excello Corporation as well as a visit to Chicago to view a variety of big businesses highlighted the year. Last spring, Donald Parsons, Chairman of the Board of the Bank of the Commonwealth, was the honored guest at the Spring Dinner Dance. Blending campus activities in their professional agenda, Alpha Kappa Psi placed second in last spring's Water Carnival.



Alpha Tau Omega

Two merit citations have been awarded to Alpha Tau Omega for its work in the fund-raising campaigns for the Easter Seal and Muscular Dystrophy Associations. Nationally recognized for these efforts, the ATO's have ranked first in intra-fraternity fundraising for the past five consecutive years. Also a top athletic competitor, ATO is always a strong contender for the Fraternity All Sports Trophy. Notables in the brotherhood include MSU's top varsity golfer, one of State's finest young swimmers, and a member of the fencing team. The Senior Class Treasurer is also an ATO.

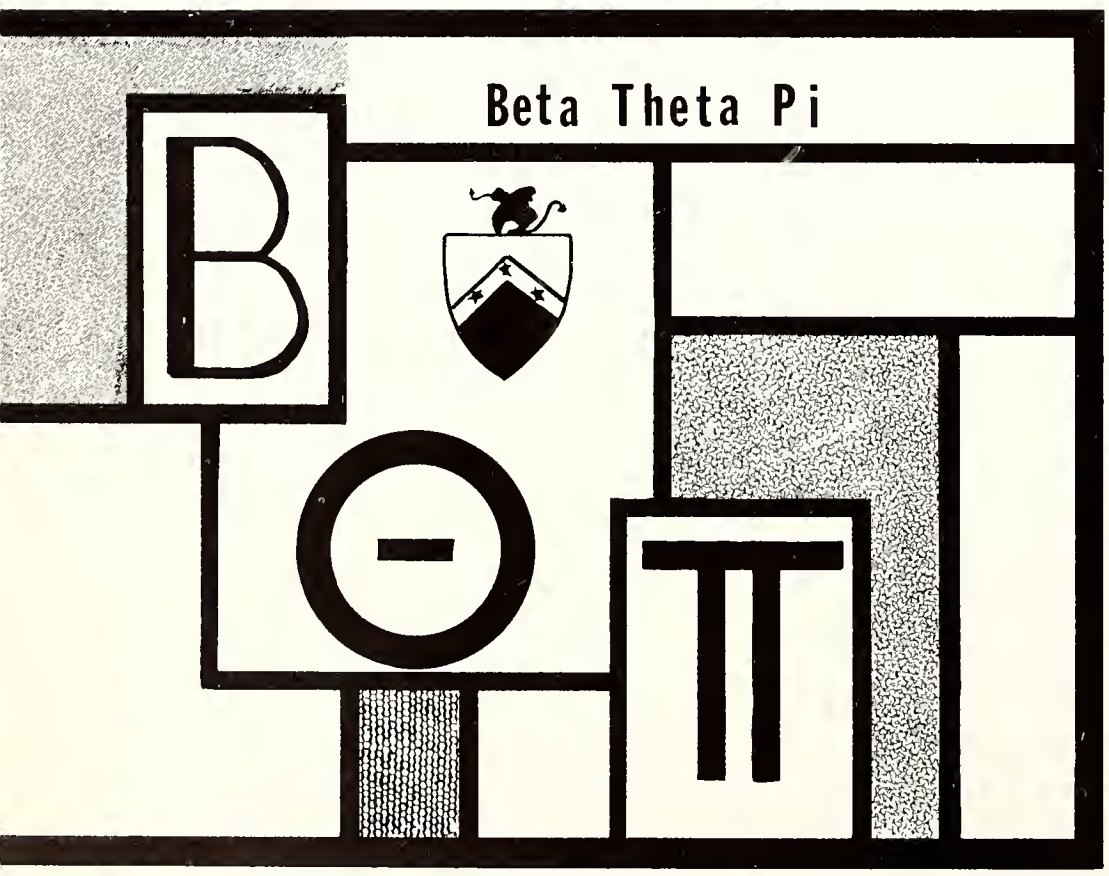
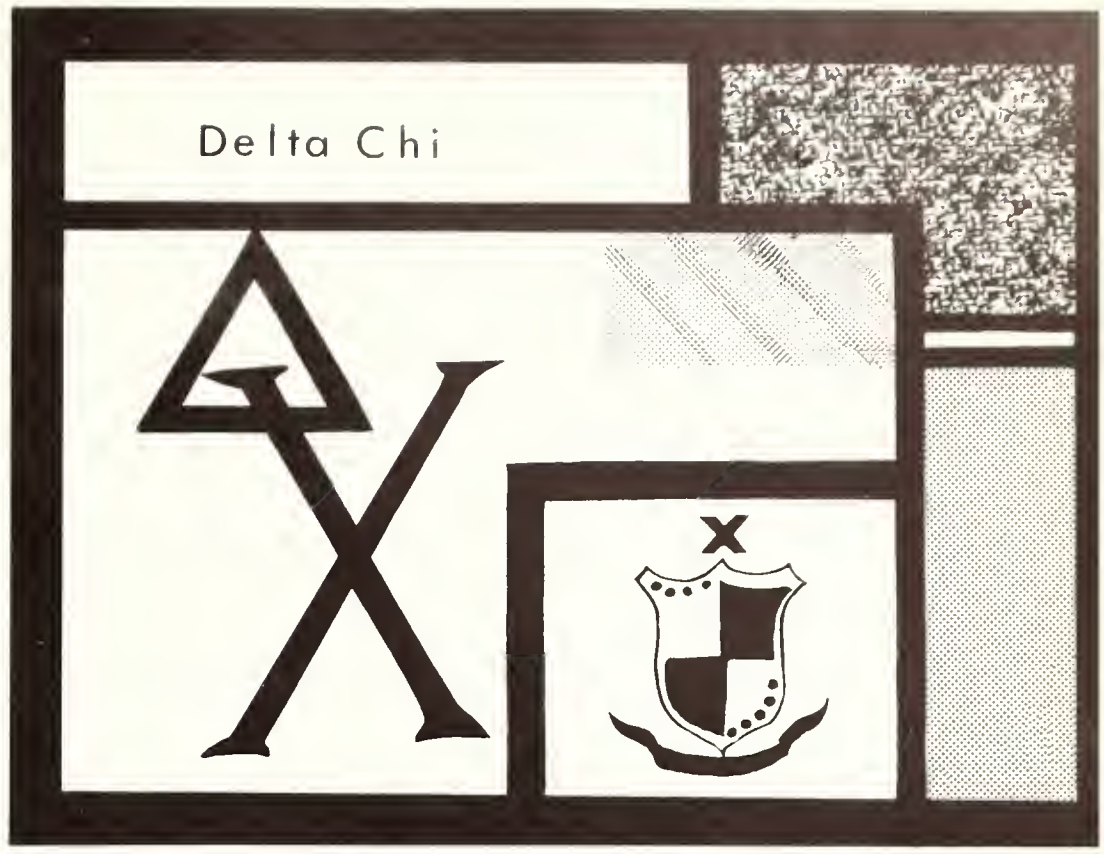
Being a Greek is a desirable distinction for any man's college career, and the men of Beta Theta Pi believe that being in a fraternity provides one with lasting friendships, the opportunity of living within a bond of brotherhood which can be found in no other organization, and a well-rounded social life. Distinguished members of the Betas are the IFC treasurer, the IFC publicity chairman, the Big Ten Pole Vault record holder, a varsity sabreman, and the vice president of the Boxing Club. Unique for their social function, the Betas sponsored a Hippie Party and a Champagne Party this year. Greek Winter Weekend and the Greek Week kickoff dance are also Beta events.





A wide range of interests and abilities gives Delta Chi a just claim to distinction among fraternities. Not only were they second in the fraternity All-sports race last year, but they stood second academically fall term. The Delta Chis have captured the IM basketball championship for three consecutive years. Outstanding brothers include the president and vice-president of Student Cabinet, several varsity athletes, and members of both Excalibur and Blue Key. But some Delta Chis stick to the quiet side of life with one member a promising young poet who has one anthology already published and another planned for spring.

Not only is Delta Tau Delta consistently among the top ten fraternities gradewise, but the first Greek unit on campus actively participates in such various campus organizations and honoraries as Blue Key, Phi Eta Sigma, Green Helmet, Honors College, Enzian, Spartan Roundtable and Varsity Club. Three of the thirteen senior men in Excalibur (including the President) are Delts. Their campus leaders are found in such offices as president of Senior Class, ASMSU Junior Member-at-Large, IFC, and the Executive boards of Homecoming, Water Carnival and Career Carnival.

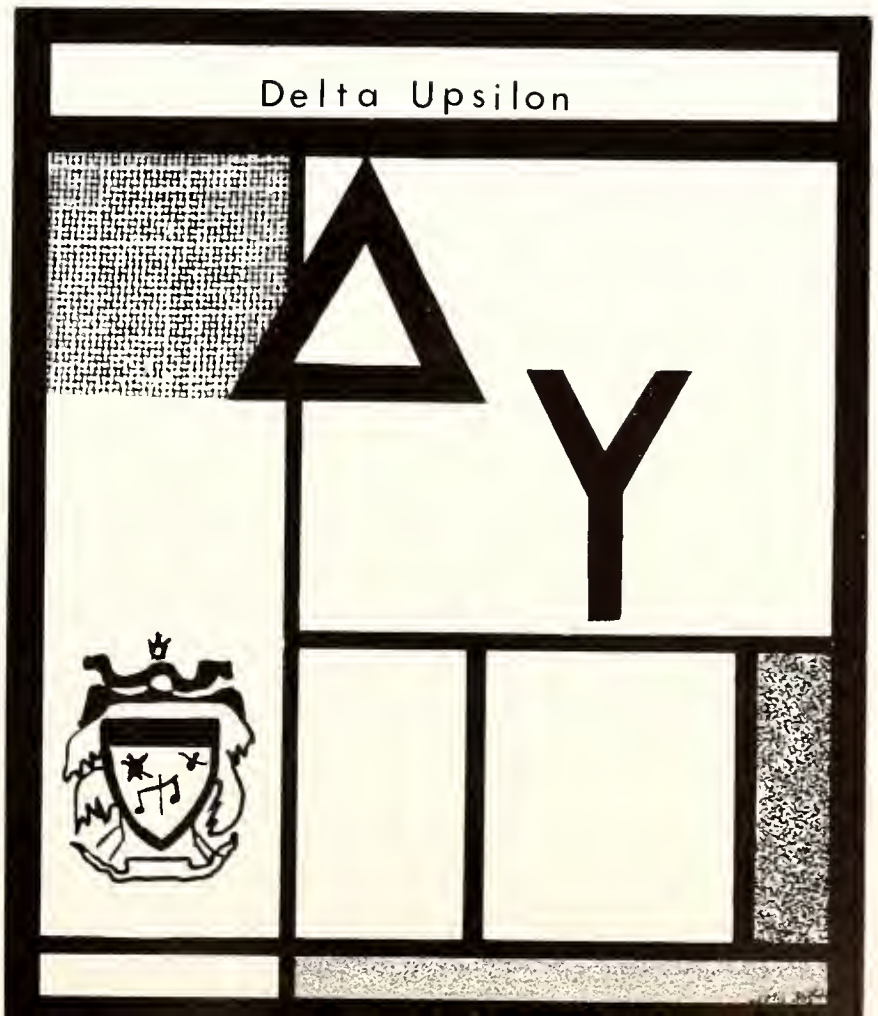
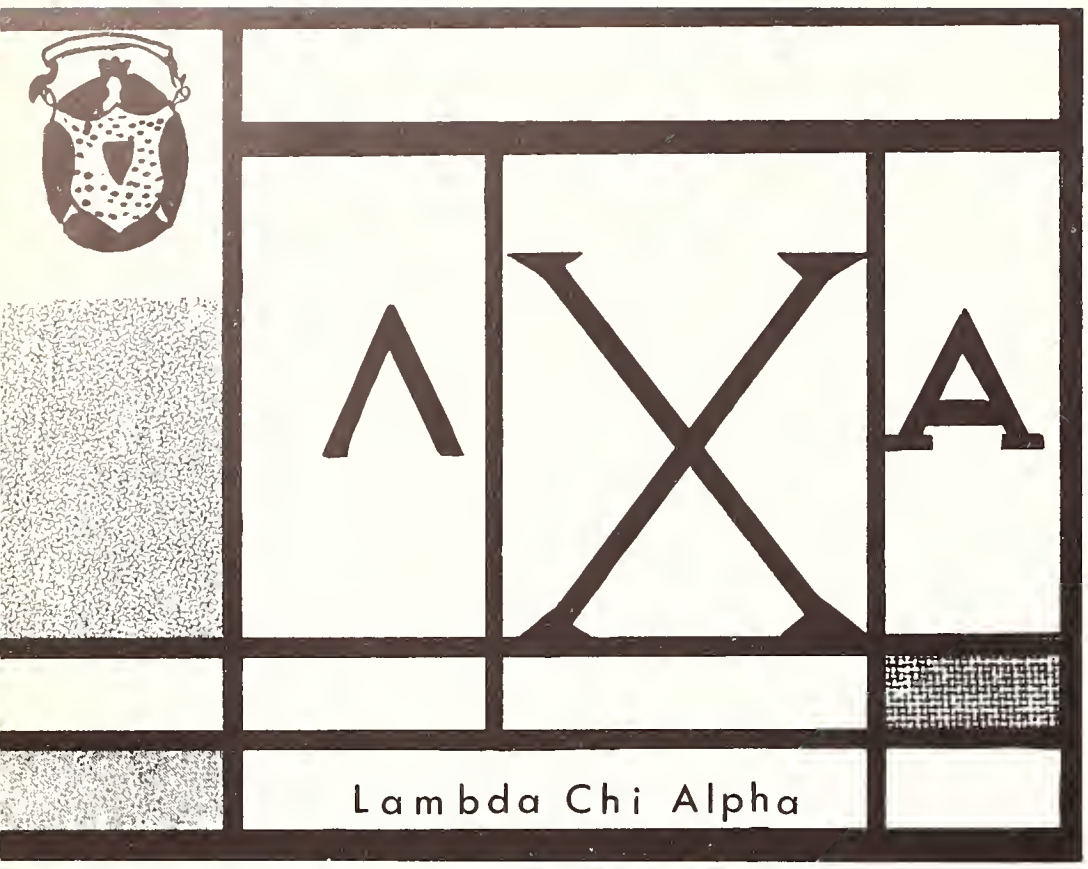
Since 1953, the Delta Upsilon victory bell has tolled out State's points at football games. Besides ringing the bell, DU members have had time this year to place their fraternity first in Greek Week, seventh in athletics and eleventh scholastically. Distinguished members include the chairman of ASMSU Popular Entertainment Series, the general chairman of Greek Week and the program director of WMSN. This year marked the redecoration of their house and the addition of a new parking lot. Proud of the fact that no other national fraternity practices a code of non-secrecy, members feel that open and clearly stated principles are the best basis for fraternal living.





The men of Lambda Chi Alpha follow the strong tradition of their predecessors as they annually host the Junior 500, the largest fraternity sponsored event in the world. The chapter was also responsible for the establishment of Greek Week. Lambda Chi has experienced consistent success in sports, finishing in the top three in the fraternity All-sports race for the past 8 years. Distinguished members include the Chief Justice of Student Judiciary, Homecoming chairman, and members of the Career Carnival executive board. Lambda Chi annually sponsors a party for underpriviledged children in conjunction with a sorority.

The reigning swimming champs in intramural competition, the men of Phi Delta Theta have also been active participants in such university events as Careers '67 and Union Board. Yearly participation in the national Phi Delta Theta Community Service Day exhibits their special emphasis on philanthropy. With spring comes the annual Phi Delt Frisby Tournament, growing larger each year. Characterized by their ivy covered house on the hill, the Phi Delts wear the familiar Phi Delt pin of a sword through a shield symbolizing protection of fraternal ideals.

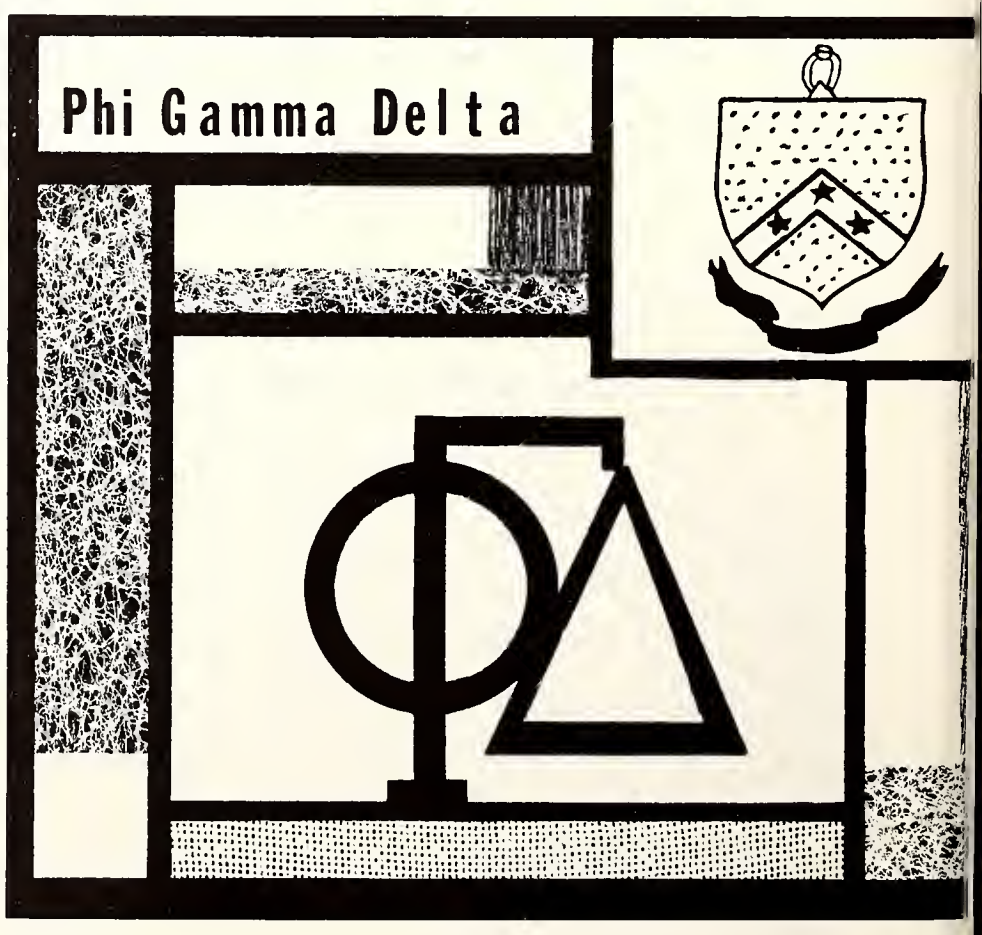
With the establishment of over 100 active chapters across the nation, Phi Gamma Delta sets its sights beyond the university. Selecting men from a vast range of interests, the brothers believe that a well-rounded chapter is the foundation upon which diversified and capable citizens are built. The largest events of the year for the Fijis are those which are celebrated nationally. Traditional social events include the Purple Garter, the formal fall term party, and the Frank Norris Pig Dinner, the annual stag party for alumni. A strong spirit of participation has brought home top honors in Greek Sing for three consecutive years.



Phi Kappa Psi

Phi Kappa Psi has firmly established itself as one of the finest small fraternities on campus. Scholastically, the Phi Psi's have consistently been among the top five fraternities. Water Carnival is the campus activity primarily emphasized by the Phi Psi's, who are leaders in its organization and are responsible for creating its theme each year. A well-rounded social program is available to Phi Psi members and, paired with academic and cultural pursuits, creates an atmosphere conducive to the development of a well-rounded chapter.

Phi Kappa Sigma

In effort to escape the impersonality of the large university atmosphere, Phi Kappa Sigma's medium-sized membership provides a "home away from home" atmosphere. A Toga Party and a Pledge Party are a small part of the social life of the Skulls. Last year they participated in IM sports, Greek Week, Homecoming and Water Carnival, as well as in-various university organizations such as MSU Band, and many clubs and honories. Phi Kappa Sigma, the eleventh oldest fraternity in America, is rapidly advancing as one of the dominant fraternities at Michigan State.

The Phi Taus have illustrated their rapid growth and enthusiasm this year because, not only have they been active in IM Sports, Greek Week, Junior 500, and Homecoming, but they have distinguished themselves by producing the winning float in Water Carnival competition. An apartment style house distinguishes Phi Kappa Tau from the majority of Greek units on campus, and the residents who hail from all parts of the country embody the Phi Tau goals of fellowship and cooperation.

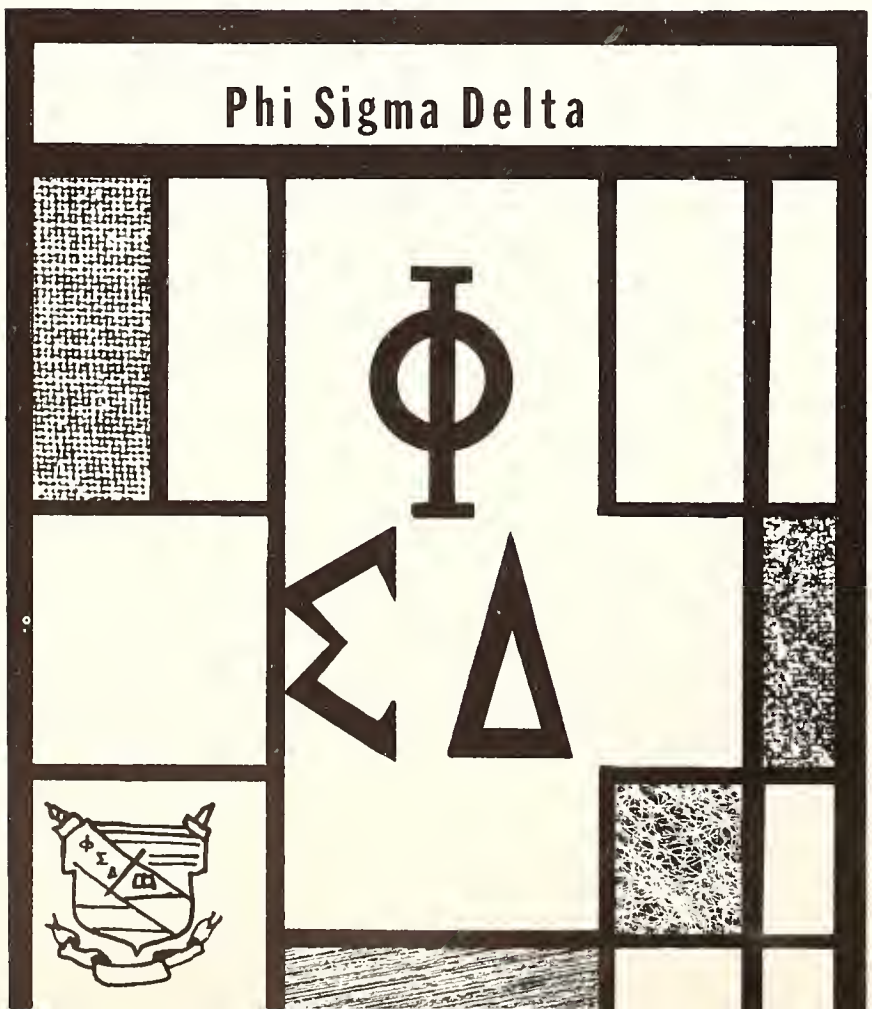
While boasting the second highest gradepoint among fraternities, the men of Phi Sigma Delta also collected over one thousand dollars last year for the Muscular Dystrophy Drive. In keeping with the prevailing spirit of charity, brotherhood, and community service among members, they exhibited one-hundred percent participation in this year's blood drive. Membership in Phi Sigma Delta includes the ASMSU Comptroller and the Secretary of the Inter-Fraternity Council. Participation in the Water Carnival, Homecoming, Greek Week and a Spring formal are perennial Phi Sig activities.



Phi Sigma Kappa

With out-of-staters hailing from New York to Colorado comprising half of the Phi Sigma Kappa membership, their annual "Snowbowl" football game has become a tradition between the in-staters and the out-of-staters. Recently the Phi Sigma Kappa brotherhood became second in grade point among midwestern Phi Sig chapters. The men at 207 Bogue offer a diverse set of interests ranging from a studied disinterest in everything to a wild-eyed catalog of radical causes. Phi Sigs are bound by the brotherhood which helps its 45 men get more out of college be-

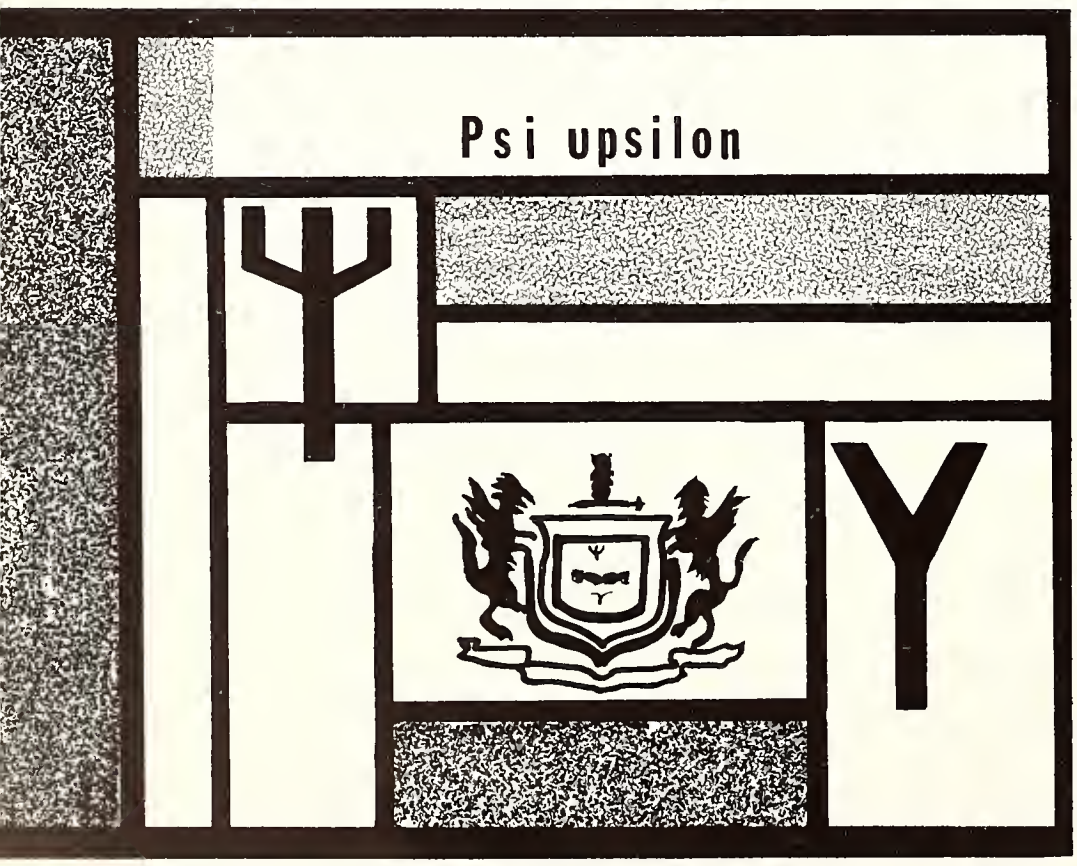
One needs only to attend a social function of Psi Upsilon to sense the rare unity which has developed among its brothers. Six Honors College members exemplify the academic achievement of the Psi U's. Ample indication of Psi U's participation in university activities is provided by the leadership positions held by its members over the last two years. These include, the Senior Class President, the administrative vice president of IFC, the treasurer of Greek Week, the treasurer of Union Board, the Outstanding Greek Man of 1967, as well as representation in Blue Key and Excalibur.



Sigma Alpha Epsilon

Young men with their great vitality need to commit themselves to an ideal and, in so doing, they need to be among others striving for the same ideal. It is this belief that leads Sigma Alpha Epsilon to commit itself to excellence. Their "Little Sisters of Minerva" affiliate has set the precedent for many other fraternities in establishing a little sisters program. SAE seeks out the man who enjoys the uninhibited and honest respect and understanding gained from fraternal living.

"Variety is the spice of life" and so it is with the brothers of Sigma Alpha Mu, more commonly called "Sammies." Sammies are well known on campus for the variety of programs and activities in which they participate. Among these are Water Carnival, Homecoming, Greek Week and the Junior 500. During Greek Week they sponsor the Sorority Tricycle Race which has become an MSU tradition. Scholastically the Sammies placed second among Greek men last year. In the past, key positions in IFC, Greek Week, Greek Feast, the All-University Student Judiciary, Blue Key and ASMSU have been filled by members.

In breaking away from the stereotype that is usually associated with fraternities, the men of Sigma Chi draw their membership from men possessing different temperaments, talents and convictions. Besides participation in Greek Week and Water Carnival, the Sigs this year decided to try something new and established "Derby Day." The day proved an unusual success as some 22 sororities participated in a series of slapstick contests. For two consecutive years the all-sports trophy has been placed in the hands of Sigma Chi, exemplifying the chapter's combination of athletics and academics.

Sigma Phi Epsilon

Since 1960 the home of Sigma Phi Epsilon has also been the home of Sparty, MSU's mascot. Now, thanks to U of M, Sparty has a twin brother. The 40 pound, fiber glass mascot was stolen the morning of the Southern Cal. game, and, with U of M as a prime suspect, the industrious brothers produced a replica. After the U of M game, police recovered Sparty No. 1, and now, not only do we have two Spartys, but the Sig Eps have installed a burglar alarm to assure their protection. Among the Sig Eps are the IFC Publications Chairman, the Union Board president, Miss MSU Co-Chairman, the Glee Club Secretary, and the editors of the MSU Forester.

Oftentimes the word "Brotherhood" is misused, overused, or inadequately defined, but it can be understood if one looks at the accomplishments the Theta Chi's have achieved as a result of it. Theta Chi has been consistently among the top ten fraternities scholastically, and also has a reputation for producing winning Homecoming floats for five out of the last six years. Their traditional Red Carnation Ball and Bowary Ball climax the year's social calendar, and members also plan an active part in Greek Week and the Water Carnival.

Reaching beyond the U. S. borders, the men of Theta Delta Chi invited Alex Sikkes, a Dutch foreign exchange student, to join their brotherhood. While at MSU, Alex saw the Theta Delts win Greek Sing, place third in IM football and finish as runners-up for the Greek participation trophy. Included in Theta Delta Chi membership are two Union Board directors, the All-University Paddleball Champ, Chief Justice of the Executive board of IFC, two Blue Key members, two members of Green Helmet and three members of the marching band.

Triangle

Evolving from the disciplines of engineering and science, the men of Triangle find this common academic bond one of the most beneficial aspects of their fraternal life. Striving to create an atmosphere of academic and social involvement, the brothers are credited with placing among the top three contenders in Homecoming float competition and with a consistent rating among the top three fraternities in scholastic achievement. This winter marked the thirteenth year of the annual Sweetheart Ball sponsored by this group of aspiring young architects, engineers and scientists.

The men of ZBT have distinguished themselves as student leaders, serving in almost every facet of MSU activity. Included in their brotherhood are Mr. MSU, The General Chairman of Water Carnival, Chief Justice of the Traffic Court, members of Excalibur and Blue Kay, ASMSU officers and representatives and a member of Student-Faculty Judiciary. ZBT athletic teams were in the top five in the IM All-Sports race for the seventh year in a row while other members held positions on the lacrosse and gymnastics teams. Scholastically, Zeta Beta Tau maintained its long-standing position in the top ten fraternities.

ALPHA GAMMA RHO

Although founded "to make better men and through them a better agriculture, and to create a spirit of sociability among men pursuing some phase of agriculture," the AGR's have expanded their brotherhood to include members involved in a broader variety of academic pursuits. The oldest fraternal organization on campus, Alpha Gamma Rho is an active participant in all university activities. Looking beyond MSU, the men strive to serve their community in many ways.

ALPHA PHI ALPHA

Winning the Junior 500 more often than any other fraternity and maintaining one of the highest averages among fraternities are just two of the reasons for Alpha Phi Alpha pride. Outstanding members include the President of Blue Key and the Student Faculty Judiciary, Vice President of M.H.A., and the student manager of the basketball team. In past years the Alphas have brought to campus such personalities as comedian Dick Gregory, the Freedom Singers and Dr. Martin Luther King.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

Pursuing careers in international relations and in foreign trade and service, the men of Delta Phi Epsilon seek to further their own knowledge and that of the student body concerning pertinent issues of the day. This winter, the men sponsored the Third Annual Canadian-American Collegiate Conference, which brought together experts from the two governments and various universitues for a discussion of mutual problems. Also, a series of discussions about Red China are in the offing.

DELTA SIGMA PHI

This year's new addition to the Delta Sigma Phi house is a very special one. Fifty girls were pledged for a "Little Sisters" chapter. The sisters will help during rush and the two groups will do charity work together. Delta Sigma Phi and the Betas have taken over MSU's failing Winter Weekend and hope to make it a success by turning it into a Greek function. The Delt Sigs also attach great importance to their climb from 23rd to 6th place in fraternity G.P.A. standings in just two terms.

DELTA SIGMA PI

Dedicated to making the business-major's degree more complete, Delta Sigma Pi combines college activities with professional association and participation. Because they choose their members only from the colleges of Business and Advertising, the group can offer a more meaningful program of scholarship, social activity and professional orientation. Tours of the Upjohn Co., Stroh's Brewery and Campbell-Ewald Advertising Co., were on this year's calendar of events.

FARMHOUSE

The first objective of the Farmhouse man is scholarship. The fraternity does not claim to know the secret of good scholarship, but here at MSU, Farmhouse has led all fraternities academically for twenty of the past twenty one terms. This does not mean, however, the other activities are lacking at Farmhouse. The men are active participants in IM sports and won the Water Carnival competition this past spring. Many men are active in honoraries, student government, IFC, and on various varsity athletic teams.

KAPPA SIGMA

Stressing that the fraternity system can be one of the most important phases of college life, the brothers of Kappa Sigma encourage members to attain a beneficial social life, a genuine brotherhood, and the unmistable sense that their house is still growing and facing a future to be proud of. In addition to Greek Week, all phases of campus affairs play an important part in Kappa Sigma life.

PI KAPPA PHI

Brotherhood is a big word at Pi Kappa Phi, and it is not only talked about, but practiced. Besides stressing brotherhood and scholarship, Pi Kappa Phi is a social fraternity. The formal Rose Ball is the annual highlight of the year, with the party given by the pledge class for the actives adding an informal note. The Pi Kaps are proud of the fact that they have won first place in the Water Carnival more times than any other fraternity.

SIGMA NU

Sigma Nu's take a thoughtful view of brotherhood. They express it in this way, " . . . it's an intangible band that is thick enough to hold up together, but thin enough to let us be ourselves." With this as their theme, the men participate in all phases of campus and civic activity. Sigma Nu placed first in intramural ping pong and second in fraternity track this year. The brothers sponsor an annual Play Day for underprivileged children and support a foster sister in France.

HEDRICK HOUSE

The men of Hedrick House were the recipients of last year's Independent All Sports Trophy. In addition, Hedrick House brought home first place in the Coral Gables' Spring Chugging Contest for men's living units for the second consecutive year. But "brawn" does not take a stance ahead of "brain" at Hedrick, for the men are strong contenders for College Bowl and G. P.A. honors each year as well as being leaders in student government with the President of I.C.C. a member of the house.

ELSWORTH HOUSE

Elsworth house is made up of 40 members from a wide range of interests who are selected on a basis of scholarship, leadership and personality. Supervision at the house is done totally by the membership with each man also responsible for his part of house operation. Elsworth was built and paid for by its men, who take an active part in campus activities and IM sports, as well as participate in various honoraries and in student government.

BETHEL MANOR

In an attempt to promote fellowship and growth among Christian men, Bethal Manor serves as a meeting place for Spartan Christian Fellowship and other Christian organizations. Since it also functions as a cooperative, Bethal Manor offers its men many social activities also. This year's residents sponsored a hayride, a sleighride, a concert and dinner, a beach party, a toboggan party and the perennial Christmas party for orphans. One of the highlights of the year included a visit by a team of 70 staffers of Campus Crusade for Christ International. Their mission was to present Christ, through students, to the campus.

The benefits of professional golf are reaped annually by more than 600 men throughout the U.S. These are Evans Scholars, members of the largest scholarship organization in the nation. Founded in 1916 by pro golfer Chick Evans, the Evans Scholars offer a potential four-year scholarship plus the benefits of fraternal living to each member. Each fall term, the MSU chapter pledges sixteen men who must someday lead the house in campus activities, including, Homecoming, Water Carnival, Junior 500, and intramural sports. Each year the Ames Award is presented to the most outstanding scholar.

In addition to sharing a common religious background, the men and women of Asher house join forces on most campus activities. During the past year, Asher has won top honors in the Junior 500, the all-university Canoe Race and the Homecoming float competition. Both units are active competitors in intramural sports. A high moral and academic atmosphere is stressed, with a study table program provided for students having difficulty with their grades. Asher men and women are represented in several professional honoraries as well as in student government.

Organizations for the Individual

An exciting demonstration in the annual Horse Show.

Books and classrooms in any university are a part of education. Here at Michigan State University they are only a part of the varied campus life. An aspect which gives MSU its variety is the wide selection of organizations. For any interested individual there is an organization to suit his needs. Being a member of a club is sharing experience and one in which each individual has a chance to participate. Possible benefits are almost as numerous as the organizations themselves. The members can gain knowledge, skills, exercise, and experience. This diversity of organizations makes MSU a storehouse of possibilities for every student who cares to become involved.

Organizations Build Friendships and Skills.

Every individual, no matter what his interests, talents or abilities, has a role to fill in the university. Within the structure of the university, there exists some group, some club, or some organization which can focus and channel any aspect of his personality which he wishes to develop. The International Clubs compare traditions and cultures. Sport clubs recognize ability in athletic areas and develop the beginners in that area. Honoraries reward work, ability and leadership while providing service. Additional areas include almost any skill or talent the individual wishes to develop. Central to any development of the individual is the interaction of the group or organization. On his own, the individual may never accomplish his goals. Organizations are his means to that end.

Organization Responsibility and Interest Develop the Individual

One of the functions of education is to produce men and women who are mature intellectually and psychologically. An essential ingredient in this process is an understanding of what things are most important and how society regulates itself around these goals. Taking part in group activity, working together toward a goal, developing skills individually or as a team and being of service to others is all part of this process. The university can also provide the student with an environment where the student can discover a standard of excellence, and finds himself by a deep and personal commital to a goal. The responsibility allotted to the club member integrates each one into the university community and into a larger, more important social awareness.

Members of the Karate Club develop instinctive reactions necessary to maintain the concentration which is essential to their sport.

Wolverine Staff Strives for Excellence

For the Wolverine staff of the 1968 yearbook the school year began this summer. Plans for revamping the office management, the office itself, the staff standards and the quality of the "book" were in progression by mid-summer. It was the aim of Editor Jack Burns to create an atmosphere of organization and professionalism among the student staff and thereby to produce an award-winning yearbook.

Bill Gillmore, Senior Editor, spends endless hours sorting and alphabetizing in preparing his section.

Professional consultants advised and assisted in making up clear, attractive layouts. At the beginning of fall term the remaining editors were chosen and an open house was held to select regular staff members. Immediately the new staff began building on the new foundation formed from last year's mistakes and this year's expectations. The photography department was completely reorganized to give the editors high quality photographs in the shortest possible time. Picture appointments were arranged for all residence halls, Greek houses and organizations. The new football season provided plenty of action for the sports department. The real pressure of deadlines began soon after the month long Christmas vacation. As winter term progressed, more and more layouts were finished, page after page of copy was typed and picture after picture was cropped and oriented. By the middle of the term the pages were submitted to the publisher to be set. Distribution was set for spring term: a time to present to the MSU student the activities and memories of this year in photographs and writing.

The State News Story . . . Award-Winning . . .

Three out of four MSU students read the State News five times a week. As a daily paper, the State News serves a number of functions on campus, of which covering campus news, presenting the most significant national and international news, serving as a public forum for open discussion, and offering editorial comment are just a few. Foremost among these functions is the coverage and presentation of campus or University-related news. This service is especially important in light of the fact that readership studies indicate a large majority of students read no other daily paper than the State News. For its efforts, the State News has been granted The American Publishers Association Pacemaker award for five of the last six years, the most recent being awarded for the 1966-67 year. The Pacemaker is given to the best college newspapers in the country; only two collegiate dailies were honored this year. No other college newspaper has received more than two of the coveted Pacemaker awards.

The State News has five inner departments. Each is separate, but all work together to publish the prize-winning State News story. The departments are: editorial, advertising, photography, circulation and the business office. Greater diversity of material was introduced last spring with the appearance of Collage, a bi-monthly, magazine section. Because there are space limitations in the daily paper Collage attempts to focus on creative writing, artistry and theatre and book reviews. In addition to informing and sponsoring creative expression, the State News acts as one of the few unifying factors of the University.

STATE NEWS EDITORIAL

The editorial policy of the State News is decided by the five-member Editorial Board. These editors, after determining their policies, then direct an all-student staff in assembling and presenting the news to their 40,000 student and faculty subscribers. The State News has received five Pacemaker Awards, given to the five best college newspapers in the country, in the past six years.

WOLVERINE

John Dewey once wrote that, "Education is the process of learning to perceive." As part of this process, the Wolverine staff learns to identify the pattern formed by the seemingly unconnected events of an entire year. The task begins in the fall as writers and photographers are assigned their subjects and editors begin their job of assimilating the facts into a recognizable pattern. By spring term, the perception is complete. The Wolverine has become a "book of the year."

The State News Photo Department employs a dozen photographers and technicians to staff their modern photographic facilities. Several other students do free-lance work for the department, which does advertising and editorial as well as color photography for the State News and its special and tabloid editions. The photo staff also covers all thirteen major sports and twenty-six intramural sports at MSU, visiting dignitaries, and emergency assignments.

STATE NEWS ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

State News advertising serves the MSU student by informing him of necessary merchandising and service information. The staff members are responsible for selling advertising space and preparing the advertising layouts. The financial success of the State News also depends on their ability to produce advertising revenues. The staff depends mainly on the local merchants, national advertisers, and classified advertisers for their advertising.

Jim Mayer, Comptroller, keeps account of ASMSU funds.

The source of change and activity for ASMSU is the individual involvement of its members. The cabinet represents 27 different areas of student interest, such as the Traffic Appeals Court, Student Insurance, and Course Evaluation, etc. The administrative structure is maintained by Student Board but the individual cabinet members and their committees are responsible for the success or failure of their programs. In summary, ASMSU has made positive changes in student policy, but has often failed to maintain student interest and involvement in their activities.

Academic Freedom Report Shapes ASMSU Policies

Patterning itself after a business corporation ASMSU maintains the theory that since this multiversity most resembles a corporation it is best administered as a corporation. The government now consists of a 14 member governing board with a president elected by the board. The student board is the policy making organ of ASMSU and is responsible for carrying out these duties, and is the area in which most students are involved. This year as a result of the Academic Freedom Report, ASMSU has been able to act on more student policies. The change in women's hours, the pregnancy policy and the policy concerning personal records are results of this change in jurisdiction and interpretation.

PANHELLENIC

Each of the twenty-two sororities on campus have equal representation on Panhellenic Council. It acts as the governing body for sorority co-ordination and the regulation of rush rules. With scholarship as a main concern, Panhel promotes its high ideals in the form of a scholarship trophy which sorority strives to win. An outstanding foreign student is awarded a scholarship each spring. SCOPE, the philanthropic project under their direction, gives members of the sororities a chance to be of service to the community.

IFC

Each fraternity on campus realizes that it is part of the larger whole of the Greek system when two representatives from each house meet to combine the Inter-Fraternity Council. Supervising the requirements for rush and pledging are a function of this governing body. IFC perpetuates brotherhood and co-operation in all the fraternity activities which include scholarship, community service, leadership, athletic, and social activities.

SENIOR COUNCIL

Working to create an active senior class, the Senior Council plans a variety of activities, ranging from receptions at the Hannah's to naming outstanding students as seniors of the week. The council also publishes a newsletter, sponsors Senior Swing-Out, and organizes special projects, this year featuring a forum on the draft. Members of the class who have made outstanding contributions to MSU are chosen by the Council to make up the honorary "Sixty-Eight" club. In addition to supervising commencement activities, the Council requests that each senior pledge the one dollar refund from return of his cap and gown to finance the class gift of appreciation.

AWS

This year Associated Women Students is emphasizing the creation of new programs of interest and concern to women students. An orientation program was held in the fall for freshman women. Later that term, a workshop on parliamentary procedures for officers of living units and women's organization was a new part of AWS programming. Among their many services, career information and lectures are presented to Michigan State Women. In the spring, a Lantern Night honors the fifty outstanding senior women.

WATER CARNIVAL

As in the past, this year's Water Carnival offered two nights of unique entertainment to those who attended. Held during Parent's Weekend, Water Carnival consisted of 30 floats presented on the Red Cedar River. Guided by 12 committee heads and the general chairman, Rick Alpern, 200 members from MSU's fraternities, sororities and living units worked on their groups' floats from November to May, all for a few hours of bright lights, loud applause and happy memories.

GREEK WEEK

The goal of Greek Week, unity within the Greek System, with the University and with the community, influenced the format of this year's activities. In place of the usual kick-off speech, each fraternity combined with a sorority to sponsor a dinner at which a speaker from the University or the community held the place of honor. "Clean-Up the City of East Lansing" is the goal of the Greek's community project. The tricycle race, the Ugliest Greek Contest, and Greek Feast highlighted other activities.

MHA

Men's Halls Association represents all the men living on campus. Composed of the presidents of each men's residence hall, the group has three main purposes. It is the chief link between the men's residence halls and the administration and it represents and maintains communication with the men living in dormitories and student government. Also it coordinates intercommunication among all residence halls. MHA sponsors movies, complex radio stations, and mixers. Trophies are awarded to the dorm having the highest grade point average and to those with the most outstanding homecoming displays.

WIC

Women's Inter-Residence Council is composed of the presidents of each of the women's residence halls. WIC serves as a policy making body, as a medium of communication, and as a means of coordination within the residence halls. This year the organization was concerned primarily with the implementation of the Academic Freedom Report, especially in the area of the new judicial structure and in new policies for on-campus women.

OFF-CAMPUS COUNCIL

Off-Campus Council is the major governing group representing all students who live off campus in other than Greek houses or cooperatives. Its purpose is to insure the welfare and continued improvement of off campus students in their capacities as students at Michigan State University. The grievance committee of OCC is available to aid any off campus students' complaints about any facets of off campus living. The Council also provides a booklet including specific facts and student opinions concerning apartments and realtors in East Lansing.

AGRICULTURE COUNCIL

The aims of the Agriculture Council include coordination of the eighteen clubs in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, sponsoring activities, and providing service to these clubs. Ag Council's functions include an honors barbecue for agriculture students. For Small Animals Day, the Council works with the various university farms and arranges a Saturday when all of the baby animals are available for the children of the Lansing area to meet.

Union Board: Activities Diversified

Kathy Hwass erowned Miss MSU at the MSU Pageant

From the fall Welcome Week mixer to the summer European Flights Program, Union Board works to diversify campus activities. The organization sponsors a Thieves' Market for sale of student artwork, an Activities Carnival, and movies of away football games. The Fall Fashion Show is a big event during fall term, while the All-University Talent Show highlights winter term. Another major event under the jurisdiction of Union Board is the Miss MSU Pageant, held each year in February. Bridge lessons and tournaments and a campus information service are also provided by this group for the benefit of students.

BETA BETA BETA

Beta Beta Beta is a biological honorary whose purpose is to promote interest in the life sciences. The organizations sponsors a booth at Activities Carnival and hosts visiting professors of biology. This year Tri-Beta sponsored seminars on such problems as water pollution and expanding population, with representatives from industry and government participating. Members of Tri-Beta have a 2.7 all-university average and a 3.0 average in their major; juniors majoring in the biological sciences are eligible.

BLUE KEY

Blue Key is a national leadership and scholastic fraternity honoring outstanding service to the University and the community. Its membership of thirty-five junior and senior men is drawn from petitions and nominations approved by the local chapter. Blue Key's activities include participation in the judging of Homecoming and Miss MSU candidates. The men also take underprivileged children to various athletic events.

CIRCLE HONORARY

Circle Honorary is composed of women students who display outstanding leadership in the residence halls. Members are selected during winter term and tapped in the spring. Circle Honorary's activities include sponsoring a tea to recognize head resident advisors, providing information during Welcome Week, and conducting tours of the University for high school groups. They also participated in the Who's Who program held by AWS this fall.

EXCALIBUR

Excalibur, the top honorary on campus, was founded in 1921 to give recognition to those senior men who have brought credit to the university through their service, leadership, character and scholarship. Limited to thirteen members the organization gives campus leaders the opportunity to become informally acquainted at weekly meetings at which members discuss their current campus projects and activities. The communication channels opened through these contacts help members to understand the various viewpoints and interests of other student leaders.

GREEN SPLASH

Noted for its annual water show, Green Splash gives women swimmers the opportunity to participate in synchronized swimming as well as compete in various swim meets. Including their annual show, the most important event is the Intercollegiate Synchronized Swimming Championship. Besides year-round practice for the show and the meets, Green Splash also offers a synchronized swimming clinic for high school girls.

MORTAR BOARD

Selected on the basis of scholarship, leadership, character, and service, the members of Mortar Board are tapped as juniors. The following year, these outstanding senior women serve the university by ushering at commencement exercises, selling Mortar Board calendars and awarding scholarships to exceptional senior women who plan to do graduate study. This year, MSU's chapter will celebrate Mortar Board's 15th anniversary by holding a Founder's Day on February 16th.

OMICRON DELTA KAPPA

Omicron Delta Kappa has existed at Michigan State University since May 1963 as a men's leadership honorary society. Approximately twenty-five students are selected for their 3.0 all University gradepoint and their leadership in one of five different areas: publication, student government, theater, religion or scholarship. The organization functions as a forum at which students and faculty can discuss critical issues of the University.

PHI GAMMA NU

Phi Gamma Nu is a national business sorority. Fellowship, scholarship, and extra-curricular activities are all promoted by this group. On campus the women act as hostesses for activities in the College of Business and co-sponsor a Christmas Party with Delta Sigma Phi for underprivileged children in the Lansing area. The girls also support an orphan in Korea.

SIGMA LAMBDA CHI

Sigma Lambda Chi was founded at MSU in 1948 and now has ten chapters located at universities throughout the United States. Its fundamental purpose is the recognition of outstanding students in construction and allied fields. Eligible students are provided by the three curricula of the Forest Products Department: Building Construction, Lumber and Building Materials and Wood Processing and Technology. The Alpha Chapter sponsors an annual spring banquet for honor students in Forest Products.

TAU BETA PI

Tau Beta Pi, an engineering society, chooses its members on the basis of personal integrity, adaptability, and a wide interest in outside affairs as well as engineering. Students in the top one-eighth of their junior class and the top one-fifth of their senior class are eligible for membership, and initiations are held twice a year. The MSU chapter of Tau Beta Pi also sends a representative to the society's annual convention.

TOWER GUARD

Character, scholarship, leadership and service are the four qualities which characterize the members of Tower Guard, a sophomore women's service honorary. These women work together for one year providing such services as reading assistance to the blind and help at registration. Their primary aim is to furnish "an organization for leadership among underclassmen" at MSU. Beaumont Tower, their emblem, is also the location of the May Morning Sing during which new members are tapped.

AIChE

AIChE is the MSU student chapter of a national professional organization whose purpose is the continuing education of professional chemical engineers as well as the providing of technical standards excellence of the industry. It maintains interest in chemical engineering as a career through monthly meetings in which industrial leaders and faculty members are occasionally speakers. The high point of each year is an annual combined industrial tour and ski trip.

ALL-CAMPUS RADIO

The Michigan State All-Campus Radio Network is comprised of four closed circuit stations. These are situated in Brody (WBRS), Shaw (WKME), Wonders (WEAK), and the Student Services Building (WMSN, the central station). By sharing programming these stations maintain 24-hour broadcasting. The network is completely supported and staffed by the students of Michigan State. This winter the network became affiliated with the American Contemporary Network of ABC.

BLOCK AND BRIDLE

Block and Bridle Club, MSU's livestock club, is under the auspices of the Animal Husbandry department of the university. Among the many activities sponsored by the club are a Student-Faculty Night and the Little International Livestock Show. At the beginning of spring term members participate in a horse show, which is the biggest event of the year. Members also participate in Farmer's Week programs and Spring Roundup, the annual awards banquet.

CANTILEVER CLUB

The purpose of the Cantilever Club is to promote interest in circulars by inviting outside speakers to their meetings and by participating in conventions. The members are busy throughout the year with booths in both the National Association of Home Builders convention in Chicago and the Natural Resources and Outdoor Living Show, assisting in the Home and Builders Show, and a spring steak fry. This club is a student chapter of NAHB.

CHRISTIAN SCI. ORG.

The purpose of Christian Science Organization is to unite members of this faith in a closer bond of Christian fellowship. Services are held for this purpose at the weekly meetings. The members of this group serve the University by sponsoring a lecture on Christian Science each term. This organization also purchases subscriptions to the Christian Science Monitor for foreign students.

FORESTRY CLUB

The Forestry Club is one of the oldest clubs on campus. Their many activities include an annual all-University dance and Shindig; a joint banquet with the University of Michigan; a student-faculty dinner and a canoe trip. This club in conjunction with the Alumni Association publishes "The M.S.U. Forester." The "Pine Needles" an informative newsletter, is also edited by the Forestry Club. Membership is open to students majoring in Forestry.

HPER CLUB

The purpose of the HPER Club is to promote interdepartmental relationships, professional growth, and leadership. This club is especially organized for those women majoring or minoring in Health, Physical Education and Recreation. Members sponsor an orientation for incoming freshmen and organize clinics and workshops for such things as cheerleading, officiating, and basketball. Meetings offer exhibits of various sports and also panel discussions by area Physical Education teachers.

JEAN PIAGET SOCIETY

The Jean Piaget Society, whose members include not only students, but also members of the faculty and administration, was just founded on Nov. 15, 1967. Its goals are to encourage men to enter elementary education, to develop cooperation among students, faculty, and administration of the College of Education by encouraging students to express feelings and suggestions, and to promote teachers' interest and involvement in local communities. Research is now being conducted on a proposed resident college for elementary education majors. Activities of the Society include visits to local school board meetings and seminars for students, faculty, and administration.

Discussing future plans for the Society are: Dr. Hicks, Pat Robb, David Neumeister, JoAnn Ricky and Dr. Fleming.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS CLUB

The Industrial Arts Club sponsors a variety of group activities in the field of industrial arts. One of their largest activities is a printing project in which they participate with other colleges and universities. They also sponsor a display at the annual Industrial Arts Convention as well as a spring picnic to draw the members more closely together. Thus, the Industrial Arts Club gives members a chance to learn and to share their knowledge with others in their field.

MARKETING CLUB

The Marketing Club offers its members an opportunity to study various phases of the marketing world. The International Collegiate Marketing Competition and Conference, sponsored by the club, is the most important project. Entirely student planned, this year's conference will involve over 200 marketing students from the United States and Canada, 50 faculty advisors and 40 corporate representatives. In addition to hosting this conference, the group also hosts well-known speakers in the marketing field.

PACKAGING SOCIETY

The Packaging Society, whose members include students from varied academic fields, promotes interest in styles and forms of packaging. Their activities include a banquet at which they give awards to outstanding members. At the same banquet they also give an award to the company which they feel has used the most imagination and innovation in packaging during the year.

STUDENT EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

Dedication to the ideal of good teaching practice and to the educators who make this ideal a reality is the goal of the Student Education Association. Their aim is to help solve problems a future teacher may encounter from grading to finding a teaching position. Under the guidance of the Michigan Education Association and the National Education Association, SEA has become an organization that has established itself on almost every campus in the nation.

ADMINISTRATION AND GRADUATES

President Hannah: A Giant Among Men

In the 27 years John A. Hannah has been president of Michigan State University, he has brought about great change and progress. Throughout his years of leadership President Hannah has remained dedicated to education and public service. He has been a key figure not only in guiding the university, but the nation as well. As busy as he is, President Hannah still has time for an interest in people. He is an eager observer of the process of human growth as students develop into knowledgeable and well informed adults, ready to build a better life for themselves and for the nation. The true impact John A. Hannah has had on the University and the world will never be completely realized, nor can it be adequately measured.

Cowles House, the home of President Hannah and his family.

ADMINISTRATION

In the modern world, before a teacher can teach or a student can learn, there must exist an administrative structure to organize and to coordinate the progress of education at all levels. Under President Hannah's direction, MSU has become an efficient university, winning recognition for both the number of its programs and for the excellent quality of its numerous departments. This is not to say, however, that Michigan State is a "diploma mill," granting multiple-choice degrees to faceless student numbers. On the contrary, the administration makes every effort to involve the student in actual policy decisions. These efforts range from the bimonthly Spartan Roundtable to widespread student involvement in the various policy committees of the university. Education cannot exist in a vacuum. It is the task of the administration to surround the student with excellence and efficiency. At Michigan State University, they have done just that.

JACWEIR BRESLIN, Secretary

HOWARD R. NEVILLE, Provost

PHILIP J. MAY, Treasurer

THE DEANS

Responsibility in each of the colleges at Michigan State, must rest on the shoulders of able-bodied men. As Deans, they guide their respective faculties, formulate policy, govern financial matters within the college, and unify the common cause of education. The attainment of goals for both the university and its students receives careful attention and consideration for it is only by recognizing the needs of each that an appropriate format can be constructed and the dream of education at its best for all of the people made a realization.

The Deans meet weekly with President Hannah to discuss their problems and to formulate policy.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES: Jack Breslin, Secretary; Philip J. May, Treasurer; Clair White; Don Stevens; Connor D. Smith; President John A. Hannah; C. Allen Harlan; Frank Merriman; Stephen S. Nisbet; Frank Hartman; Kenneth W. Thompson.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The Board of Trustees, the main governing body of Michigan State University, is authorized by the Constitution of the State of Michigan. Composed of eight members, each elected to serve an eight year term, it is responsible for the general supervision, direction and control of the university and its expenditures. In exercising its responsibility, the Board delegates to the President and through him to the faculty and administration, appropriate authority to facilitate the development of a free and distinguished University for the people of Michigan.

Doctor Hannah reminds graduates of the important role they have in the future of our country.

President and Mrs. Hannah greet seniors at Cowles House.

Graduation: An End and a Beginning

Moving a tassel from one side of a mortarboard to the other is a very symbolic gesture. To some graduates it symbolizes the attainment of a diploma, the culmination of four years of preparation. To still others, it marks only the first stop on the way to a differently colored robe, while to some it is a motion of finality, a symbol of the end of one kind of life in preparation for another. It is also a symbolic gesture for the university. It marks the end of four years of instruction and guidance for one individual and the beginning for another. Commencement is the last time the class of '68 will be together before going their five thousand separate ways. It is a time of pride—for parents, for students, and for MSU.

Senior Night at the Gables, a must for every graduate.

Whether outdoors in the stadium or in the auditorium, the significance of commencement remains the same: a beginning, the dispersal of qualified individuals into a demanding society.

In closing the cover on this the 1968 Wolverine, it is only to say that my staff and I have completed our work. The real task of this book, to capture the year for eternity, has not yet begun. A yearbook, like a diamond, is forever.

I have been very fortunate this past year to have had such an exceptionally talented staff. Without them the book would be nothing. My gratitude to Roger Grant our production coordinator, who always remained calm and never failed to come up with solutions to our many problems. Rog, thank you, too, for the personal support that meant so much when things were down. To the "Big Four" who will be leaving us, Sue, Dona, Maryellen, Bill, I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for the many long hours, the all-nighters, the true dedication. If your performance here over the last four years is any indication of what is to come, no doubt your opportunities will be unlimited. The Wolverine is greatly indebted too, to Mary Beard and Ray Walsh, keep up the good work next year. Three key people remain: Jon VanderZouwen, Phil Stoffan, and Richard Best. To you, what can I say? Only that you will never know how much I appreciate your willingness to tackle any obstacle and stand behind me through thick and thin.

Too, I would like to thank the professional people who have made my dreams a realization; Mr. Ed Hackleman and Mr. Ralph VanDyke of American Yearbook Company for their instrumental part in the creation and production of the 1968 Wolverine; Mr. Joe Hause, our man in Hannibal; Mr. Jack Bundy of S. K. Smith Company for assistance in cover design and production; Mr. Sam Fields of Delma Studios, for the usual excellent service in senior portraits, and his photographers, Whitfield Delaplane and Bob Montana; Mr. Bill Hersey of Grafek Arts for our group pictures and Phil Frank for the creation and rendering of our division pages.

To Mr. William McIlrath, our advisor, its been said many times. But again, Mr. Mac, my deepest thanks for all you have done to make this book an actuality. Your knowledge, wit and understanding have steered us through another year, a good year, a very good year.

To all those on the staff who have not been mentioned, may I extend my gratitude for a job well done.
